Inside the flaming port a bloody street battle raged. A tough mountain-climbing North Korean force struck Pohang after scaling the lofty peaks to the west of the town.

Before dusk American planes flew off the field on 10-minute sorties to make rocket and machine-gun attacks on the Reds. Communist guerrillas were close enough to fire on the field with small arms.

At the other extreme of the allied battleline, the Eighth Army reported that North Korean troops were abandoning their Chinju base near the south coast before the allied offensive bebefore the allied offensive that began Sunday.

Reports of the Reds' Chinju pullback came as US troops occupied high ground immediately east of the city Friday afternoon.

On the extreme southern flank of the offensive, marines occupied the town of Kosong "against strong enemy resistance." Marine patrols had moved into the town Thursday.

Thousands Cross Naktong

But inland on the central front, the Communists put thousands of troops over the Naktong river.

They were reported building up four or five divisions—perhaps 40,000 men—for a new blow aimed at Taegu if they can keep crossing the river in strength.

Most of the crossings have been by night.

Point-blank fighting seethed in the extreme south between American forces and North Koreans they trapped in the slowed-down Allied offensive on Chinju.

An American general staff officer called the Reds' Naktong river buildup the greatest massed concentration of troops on the whole 140-mile battle perimeter.

On the deep southern front, mauled Red troops, jerked out of retreat, struck back at the still-advancing Americans before ruined Chinju on the south coast. The inland force of the American advance there pushed ahead from main positions about six miles east of the town, in the face of a fresh Communist artillery and automatic weapons fire.

Fight Off Attacks

The south coastal force of Americans before Chinju fought off two co-ordinated Communist attacks backed by heavy artillery. One was at the town of Kosong, which US Marines took Thursday, and the second was about six miles northward.

AP correspondent Don Whitehead reported from the southern front that two trapped Red battalions—cut by US gunfire from 2,000 to about 1,000 men—fought desperately to escape the iron noose drawn by the Thursday junction of the 5th Army Regiment and the 35th Regimental combat team of the 25th Infantry Division.

American machine - gunners burned out the barrels of their weapons in rapid-firing on the Reds. They called for air-dropped barrels—and got them. US artillery protected the US Regimental Command post by point-blank firing on attackers 800 yards away.

Three Battalions Separated

The three battalions of the 5th Regimental combat team were separated from each other by Communist machine-gun and mortar fire, Whitehead reported. The Red attack, starting at dawn, threatened the Command post. But several hours later US troops had pushed the Reds back.

A general officer at headquarters said 240 Red dead—"a good day's bag"—were counted during the 24 hours ended Friday morning. This was for the entire Chinju battle.

The Reds abandoned many guns and much heavy equipment in their retreat on the southern front Thursday, but salvaged enough to open up on the advancing Americans with heavy artillery Friday.

Dig In On Ridge

The Communists dug into defensive positions west of Chinju along the ridge which is being prodded by advance U.S. elements.

A MacArthur headquarters intelligence officer said the North Korean 6th Infantry Division apparently was in the fight alone on the south. He said "fanatical Communist officers" had halted the retreat and the division, although "hurting badly," had not lost its "offensive spirit."

Another Red division, the 4th, pounded desperately to enlarge its bridgehead across the Naktong River at a point about 20 miles north of Chinju.

At least two Red regiments—perhaps 6,000 men—had crossed the river Friday, supported by tanks and heavy artillery.

AP correspondent O. H. P. King on the Naktong reported elements of the U.S. 24th Infantry Division opened a new attack Friday noon against the Red bridgehead about six miles southwest of Changwong. King reported "good progress" at 2.30 p.m. Friday (12.30 a.m. EDT Friday).

The Americans have been trying to wipe out the Red footholds on the east bank of the Naktong since Sunday.

Kept On Reserve

Behind the battle zone, on the Reds' west bank of the river, the invaders were reported having in reserve part of the 4th Infantry Division and a tank regiment. Ususal strength of a tank regiment is 52 vehicles. But there was no confirmation of the number the Reds actually were ready to hurl into the Naktong battle.

From the Chankkong area, a Red column was pushing toward Masan, apparently trying to cut off the supply line of U.S. forces fighting before Chinju. The column late Friday was still far from Masan. But other Reds slipped south of the battle area and set up three roadblocks on important highways, one of which still continued to dominate the road after attacks by Americans all through Friday.

The headquarters officer expressed more concern over what he called an ominous grouping of Red forces along a stretch of the Naktong river around Waegwan, 15 miles northwest of Taegu, the refugee South Korean government's emergency capital.

The American first cavalry division and the South Korea 1st infantry division reported they have eliminated all enemy pockets in their area. But the buildup across the river continues.

A MacArthur intelligence officer said the North Korean 2nd infantry division, which has spearheaded that part of the Naktong attack, has been joined in the river line by the North Korean 3rd infantry division.

Recently - captured prisoners came from one regiment of the Reds' crack 1st division, which apparently has been moved north from its supporting position at Chinju. The U.S. officer said the North Korean 13th and 15th infantry divisions also are in the Naktong area now. That would mean 40,000 or more men are poised for a river-leaping push toward Taegu.

Successful Counterblow

On the curving front eastward from Waegwan, a Communist attack early Friday was met by one of the most successful South Korean counterblows yet reported in the rugged give-and-take fighting north and west of the main battle areas.

A spokesman said the South Korean 6th and 6th infantry divisions hurled a Red assault back several miles.

The South Koreans Friday night held positions about four miles north of Uisong on this front east of Waegwan.

The seriousness of the situation at Pohang on the Sea of Japan coast was shown Friday afternoon by the arrival there of Lt.-Gen. Walton H. Walker, U.S. 8th army commander, and Maj.-Gen. Earle Partridge, U.S. 5th air force commander. They flew over the fighting area in a small observation plane.

Malaya Forced To Invoke News Censorship

SINGAPORE, Aug. 11 — (Reuters)—Communist terrorism in Malaya has forced the administration to tighten and extend restrictions on publication of news and political comment.

Some newspapermen, while appreciating the reasons for restricting freedom of the press, have suggested the measures were not unwelcome to some senior civil servants and army officers as an excuse to curb criticism of government policy and army anti-guerilla activity.

For the first time in British colonial legal history, the safeguarding of the interests of the Security Council of the United Nations was featured in decrees governing publication and importation of newspapers.

Governor Sir Franklin Gimson enacted a law under emergency regulations that a newspaper in the colony may be suspended if its contents "calculated to foment opposition to the prosecution of a successful issue of any warlike operation in which Britain is engaged, or to which Britain is committed by reason of a resolution of the Security Council of the United Nations."

Great Power

The enactment also gives the government power to ban journals systematically publishing matter "prejudicial to the successful prosecution of measures" being taken against Communist terrorism in Malaya.

Importation of publications containing articles critical of the U.N. Security Council's Korean war resolution, or of anti-terrorist measures in Malaya, was made equally liable for prosecution. A penalty of up to two years imprisonment was provided.

Singapore and Malayan newspapers of all communities received the new law with cautious approval.

Editorials generally stressed the "regrettable necessity" for restriction on publication. They emphasized the law should be invoked only if a journal were guilty of systematic publication of matter prejudicial to the British government and the United Nations' "warlike operations."

Fleas, Flies, Fish Potential Enemies

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (AP) —Fleas, flies and fish are among potential enemies of Allied troops in Korea, experts of the United States Army Surgeon-General's Office said today.

So are mosquitoes, lice and rats.

All are capable of transmitting diseases of military importance, and precautions are taken to cope with the hazard. All troops sent to Korea receive shots against some of the diseases that occur there.

The medical men say preliminary evidence shows mosquito-borne malaria and various kinds of dysentery have so far accounted for the most sickness.

Another Jerk To The National Economy

Five years after the ending of the war Canada's economy was recovering from the strains and jolts given it from 1939-45. After serials of price increases, shortages, wage rises and tortuous labour-management relations a new balance on a higher post-war level was being nicely attained when Bang!—a North Korean tank crossed an imaginary line The Korean war will undoubtedly put new strains on the economy, and, if people in business and industry, and housewives, do not keep their heads, the fair balance reached by the beginning of this year will be upset.

* * *

The withdrawal of five or ten thousand men from civilian occupations to the armed services will not itself create a shortage of labour. But these men have to be equipped, maintained and paid. Defence expenditures will mount, and the equipment—from clothing to guns, tanks and planes—will be lopped from civilian stores. Heavy American purchases of supplies and arms in Canada will further deplete resources which otherwise would go for civilian uses. Goods partially or completely made in the U.S.A., particularly those with steel in them, will be in shorter supply and their Canadian prices will reflect the increased prices in the States.

* * *

On the other side of the picture are these facts: Canada is well-provisioned, has surpluses of supplies, the greatest means of production and the largest labour force in its history. The present moderate demands of Korea and the North Atlantic treaty—moderate in comparison with the requirements of a world war—can readily be met and still leave all that the domestic market requires. There may be some curtailment of public works to conserve materials and ease the tax burden. But there can be prosperity without pain if greed, fright and cussedness are kept in check We can hope, too, that our tax-gatherers do not become megalomaniacs, but they may succumb to the disease if, as predicted, Canada embarks on a billion dollar defence budget in the near future.

Two Ways Of Looking At It

Our attention was taken by the following letter, which appeared recently in the Vancouver Province:

Sir:—I am much in agreement with the proposal of Mr. Arthur Ash, MLA, for the abolition of Government House.

During the years that I was the premier's secretary, absences of lieutenant-governors were not infrequent. Their duties were taken over by the chief justice as administrator, and I could never see that the business of the country suffered in the least.

Even if the office cannot be abolished, it is hard to see why the routine business could not be as well performed by a lieutenant-governor living in a private house.

The idea of 10 petty courts strung across Canada savors of the absurdity of the old German Pumpernickel princedoms. Surely we can get along without these tinsel and gingerbread imitations of royalty.

I think the $50,000 a year spent on Government House could be more humanely applied.

JAMES MORTON

Victoria

We disagree with Mr. Morton. It is easy to sneer at "tinsel and gingerbread imitations of royalty", but they have their place as symbols of the system under which we live. And when an ex-civil-servant takes a righteous tone about the spending of $50,000 we laugh rudely. The really great spenders and consumers of the people's money are not the representatives of the King, but those voracious, perpetually multiplying civil servants themselves.

Some people are very eager to get rid of our lieutenant-governors, leaving everything in the hands of elected officials and civil servants. But we like to feel that in a lieutenant governor, or the Governor General, we have one official who could, if the case arose, thwart and defeat a horde of crooked legislators and grasping civil servants He can do so at any time by refusing to sign legislation set before him. His refusal would provoke immediate enquiry and enquiry is sometimes good for even the most democratically elected governments.

The kind of protection these King's representatives afford is cheap at the price we pay

Put On Trousers

An acquaintance of ours holidaying in the Laurentians went over to the nearest village by car to buy some cigarettes He was wearing shirt and tie—and shorts. The village constable saw him and said in stilted English: "Shorts not allowed. You go and put on pants." So a quick change was made in the car and the cigarettes were bought in trousers and out of jail. It is sometimes thought in these Ontario parts that the Quebec ban on shorts, enforced village by village from Ste. Agathe to Gaspe, applies only to women. But men are rapped on the knee, too.

We have every sympathy for citizens of cities and towns who dislike seeing their streets made unlovely by hairy male legs or ribald by taut female limbs. But the town's own dignity should be enough to make the bare legs feel out of place, without an official ban and officious policemen to enforce it. And it does seem a bit fettish and more than a bit prudish to ban shorts in small tourist resort villages where there is hardly a sidewalk on which to display the shorts and the legs they so immodestly reveal to parish eyes.

Tots And Sots

In a recent editorial the Toronto Star praises the State of Washington for introducing a special course on alcoholism in its public schools. This course will have, we learn, "an objective, impersonal and unbiased approach to the subject". In other words, it will be against alcohol. The Star says that "such a course is sorely needed in the schools of Ontario."

The Star may not know it, but informal courses of anti-alcohol instruction have been given in the public schools of Ontario for many years. We can even recall one formal course of the kind, given by a gentleman called Dr. Courtney Beale, who warned against alcohol and sex with equal fervour and effectiveness for everyone we know who heard him has grown up to be a moderate patron of both these notorious evils. The informal courses were given by teachers who felt moved to harangue their classes on the subject, and are still delivered, as public school acquaintances of ours tell us.

We recall one teacher whose husband was a well-known local souse, and it was axiomatic that his deeper potations would always be followed by a temperance lecture to her class from his wife. We were eight or nine at the time, and regarded this state of affairs as a good joke, as did our classmates, boys and girls alike. Children are remorselessly reasonable in such matters, and we could not see why we should pay much heed to an exhortation which was clearly the result of the misdeeds of the teacher's husband.

We recall another occasion, when a local option vote was to be taken in the town where we lived, and the temperance forces decided to stage a mock vote in the public school. It was thought that this would educate the children in democracy and temperance, and would throw a scare into the boozers when the temperance cause won a resounding public school victory. We were lectured by our teachers on the villainies of drink and then commanded to vote. We voted. Alas, we wickedly voted for rum and rebellion, and threw the teachers into a panic. Class after class voted solidly for the open bar, and the teachers announced the results in awe-stricken voices. The principal, a totalitarian dictator in embryo, cooked the results before he announced them to the local paper, but by that time every child had skipped home and announced that the school had gone solid for liquid.

We warn the Star that schools are poor places for temperance propaganda Children have a sense of humour, a strong independence, and a powerful streak of perversity. Such a course as the Star advocates might well have the strangest results.

Seven Cent Bars

Not so many months ago the chocolate bar makers sat with Oh-dear-me patient smiles and piously folded hands: they would like to reduce the price of their chocolate bars from seven cents to five, but the tax would not permit it. So a campaign was begun to have the tax removed. Children in schools, bemused parents and maiden aunts wrote to the Government, pestered M.P.'s, and even sent letters to editors. It seemed that the chief need of the nation was a good five cent chocolate bar: So the tax was removed, and the bars (little, insignificant things they were by that time) began to sell again at five cents. It was a sweet victory for the sweet-toothed. But short. The tax is still off, but the amiable chocolate bar manufacturers have now regretfully decided that really, they cannot continue to sell bars at five cents. The price is again seven. This time there is no special tax to blame, and the bar is still the pee-wee size.

India Looks To North East

By RAWLE KNOX

(By Cable from Mussourree:) The INDIAN Governme... has been sharply reminded that Communist CHINA is a... The pronouncement of GENERAL LIU PO CHEN, chairman of the Southwest China Military Affairs Commission, that Cnina intends shortly to liberate Tibet may or may not be a bluff, but it cannot be disregarded. Though India has perfectly friendly relations with Communist China it is possible that she would find it easier to be amicable at a distance. This being so, the unconcern of the External Affairs Ministry here about Tibet, despite several interested warnings from the United Kingdom High Commission, has been remarkable.

* * *

HOWEVER, India's treaty with Nepal signed on the first of this month was an indication of increasing awareness. Though it was in fact merely a replacement with modifications of the old treaty between BRITAIN and NEPAL it was significant as a disclaimer of any Indian desire to include Nepal in the Indian union. Prior to this month, indignant reports about maltreatment of Congress workers in Nepal erupted at intervals in the Indian press. The treaty shows that the Congress Government has no wish to antagonise the useful military power of Nepal by any attempt on her sovereignty.

* * *

REPORTS from Kalimpong state that the Chinese Communists continue to improve their position on Tibet's Eastern border. It is from the Eastern provinces that Tibet has in ancient wars drawn her best fighters. Now, however, the tribesmen there are enthusiastically welcoming Communist notions. Nevertheless, throughout Tibet recruiting is being sternly carried on. Guards on all bridges halt passing peasants and send those who have not yet done military training to the nearest army depot. Though the Tibetan army strength is estimated at a little under two hundred thousand no one pretends that it is likely to be an effective military force. So far as can be ascertained, nothing heavier than small arms has recently been imported from India.

* * *

MEANWHILE, Chinese Communist troops in the border area are reported being trained to eat "Tsampa," the Tibetan barley meal food, so that they can live off the country in the event of an invasion. The Chinese are being assisted by several Tibetan exiles, voluntary and otherwise. Notable among these is GESHE SHERAB GYAMTSO, Vice-President of the Tibetan Provisional Government which has been set up at SINING. He was apparently banished by the late DALAI LAMA for the old crime of making alterations to the Kangyur or Buddhist bible when ordering new printing blocks. There is also in Sining following the usual Communist pattern a Tibetan "People's Youth Society" under the direction of PINCHOK NANGYAL who was exiled from Lhasa a year ago for too obvious leaning towards Communism.

* * *

TIBETAN frontier guards in this threatening atmosphere are understandably nervous. In recent weeks there have been numerous raids on North Tibetan villages by Kfazak tribesmen who have been pushed south by the spread of Communist control in Sinkiang. The tragic death of the American diplomat, Douglas Mackiernan, is sufficient indication that Tibetans now shoot first and ask questions later. Last September Mackiernan closed down the American Consulate at Tihwa in China when the Communists got uncomfortably close and set out on a twelve hundred mile trek over the Himalayas to freedom. He was in sight of his goal when he was shot in April by Tibetan frontier guards who apparently mistook his caravan for that of marauding bandits.

* * *

THE Tibetan delegation which had intended to negotiate with representatives of the Peking Government at Hong Kong is still held up in India by Britain's diplomatic delay in granting them visas. They have now been here more than two months. At present they are escaping Delhi's intense mid-summer heat by resting at Kalimpong from where they keep up a desultory corespondence with Lhasa by runners who take twenty days to make the journey. Snow and rain have broken down telegraphic communications.

* * *

THE delegation's present plans are to await the arrival of the new Chinese ambassador to India, who is expected soon in Delhi, and to enquire from him the real intentions of his Government. Meanwhile those intentions become clearer every day. The Kalimpond correspondent of the Calcutta "Statesman" reports that Communists have attacked and silenced a Tibetan radio station in the Eastern DHAM THOG province and that though the Tibetan authorities firmly state they intend to resist aggression there is a growing pacifist feeling especially in the monasteries. It is hardly surprising that India is beginning to look somewhat nervously to the North-East.

Australian Housing

(Brandon Sun)

You cannot build a wooden house in many Australian cities and towns. Municipal by-laws stipulate that building must be of brick, stone or concrete, not of wood. Even where the use of timber is not barred some councils reject plans for wooden houses. They claim that to allow wooden houses would open the way for shacks and so depreciate property values.

Some architects and builders are arguing that the ban on wooden houses greatly accentuates the house shortage, The rigid "brick areas", they say, force dear and slow construction on tens of thousands of the best available sites. Some also claim that regulations also prevent them from making the limited supplies of bricks go as far as possible.

THREE'S A CROWD

The Bull In The China Shop

(OTTAWA CITIZEN)

THE failure experienced by a British film company when it tried to persuade a bull to be awkward in a china shop is unlikely to destroy the usefulness of an expression long associated in the public mind with clumsiness. The London Daily Express, in its report of the incident, almost gleefully labelled the phrase "bull in a china shop" a cliche. Its headline, "They had to goad the bull to keep that cliche alive," seemed to sneer at cliches in themselves, and to predict that this particular one had had it. Yet there is little justificiation either for the judgement that cliches are objectionable, or the forecast that this cliche would die merely because a bull in a china shop had not acted as it should. The Shorter Oxford English Dictionary defines a cliche as "a stereotyped expression." But a stereotyped expression must be judged against its background before it can be decided whether it is undesirable. If the imagery in a cliche adds to the precision of a person's meaning, then there is clearly nothing wrong with using it. Its usefulness should outweigh its monotony. The phrase, "bull in a china shop," means awkwardness of an especially clumsy sort. Its shading is unmistakable. The daintiness with which the British bull comported itself when introduced to a china shop does not damage a phrase whose meaning is clear from long usage. Metaphors need not be literally true to be acceptable. The fault in this instance lies not with the cliche, but with the film company. That organization, in taking its cliches literally would deservedly encounter even greater difficulties if it tried to give visual expression to such well-worn but meaningful expressions as "he hurled himself at the enemy" or "the runner was lightning-swift."

A Churchill Image.

(LETTER IN LONDON TIMES)

SIR—On Saturday, May 10, 1941, as Mr. Churchill records in The Grand Alliance, the House of Commons was destroyed by the enemy. He does not mention that on Wednesday, May 7, there had been a big debate on a vote of confidence in His Majesty's Government ("War Situation—Assistance to Greece"). Mr. Churchill concluded the debate with these words: "When I look back on the perils which have been overcome, upon the great mountain waves in which the gallant ship has driven, when I remember all that has gone wrong, and remember also all that has gone right, I feel sure we have no need to fear the tempest. Let it roar, and let it rage. We shall come through." The House divided: Ayes, 447; Noes, 3.

That was the last division in the old Chamber. They were the last words that Mr. Churchill spoke in it, and the last that most of us heard there. On May 8, after some minor business, the House adjourned. It met again on the 13th; and there is nothing in Hansard to show what happened during the weekend.

It may be too late to make such a suggestion, but I wonder whether there could be inscribed above or on the "Churchill Arch" those valiant last words, the figures by which the House of Commons supported them, and the date: "Let it roar, and let it rage. We shall come through." Ayes, 447; Noes, 3, May 7, 1941.

Pleasant For Duller Ones

(Fergus News Record)

In the old days, boys and girls who could not learn enough to pass examinations, stayed in the lower grades and possibly did not get out of public school until the age of 16, when they automatically quit school, probably disgusted with themselves and the whole system. High school teachers never had to struggle with the dumbest ones. The new system will automatically push them ahead at a certain age That will be much more pleasant for the duller boys and girls, for they will be with others more or less their own age. Whether it will be more pleasant for the teachers is something else again.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

And when it was determined that we should sail into Italy, they delivered Paul and certain other prisoners unto one named Julius, a centurion of Augustus' band.... And when the ship was caught, and could not bear up into the wind, we let her drive.... And falling into a place where two seas met, they ran the ship aground; and the forepart stuck fast, and remained unmoveable, but the hinder part was broken with the violence of the waves. (Acts 27: 1, 15, 41.)

* * *

And when they were escaped, then they knew that the island was called Melita. And the barbarous people shewed us no little kindness: for they kindled a fire, and received us every one, because of the present rain, and because of the cold. And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks, and laid them on the fire, there came a viper out of the heat, and fastened on his hand. And when the barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on his hand, they said among themselves, No doubt this man is a murderer, whom, though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth not to live. And he shook off the beast into the fire, and felt no harm.

Howbeit they looked when he should have swollen, or fallen down dead suddenly: but after they had looked a great while, and saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and said that he was a god. In the same quarters were possessions of the chief man of the island, whose name was Publius; who received us, and lodged us three days courteously. And it came to pass, that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever and of a bloody flux: to whom Paul entered in, and prayed, and laid his hands on him, and healed him. So when this was done, others also, which had diseases in the island, came, and were healed. (Acts 28: 1-9.)

Obstructions

(Toronto Star)

An increasing number of motor cars have their windshields or their rear windows decorated with dancing figures or other ornaments. Clear vision is one of the prerequisites of safe driving. That the figures amuse the driver's children is no excuse for hanging them where they constitute a motoring hazard. Toronto police announce they are going to "crack down" on this bad habit—and so they should.

Melting Host of Icy Theories

(Montreal Gazette)

But if this unexpected crisis shakes down some of the official pretence, and the pride of office, the preoccupation with the abstract, and the impatience of criticism, it may have a healthy result upon Canadian planning. The hard fact of a shooting war has done much to melt a host of icy theories about the cold one.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Red Creighton's scrappy Petes will have to be in peak form tonight in Miller Bowl. They're tackling a tough and wily squad in the Brampton Excelsiors of the OLA senior "A" variety. The second and third-place teams lay it on in rugged checking and each holds a close decision to date over the other. The two top snipers in the circuit are in action here, Arn Dugan of the Petes and Archie Browning of Excelsiors. As the schedule ends in less than three weeks, all gutted-stick outfits are playing for keeps these days, and tonight's fray promises to be a warmish one. It should pack in one of the biggest crowds of the season, weather being okay.

* * * * * *

A bunch of big-shouldered boys will congregate Monday eve at seven in the Exhibition Grounds. They are prospective gridders who hope to catch a spot with the senior "B" Orfuns. It'll be a skull session under direction of Coach Bamforth and, while hard P.T. drills will be the order thereafter, more skull sessions will be held from time to time. Surprise is the main weapon in warfare, and this also applies to football. Coach Bamforth was always noted for his surprise plays, masked movements catching the enemy with its plans down. Hence, Orfuns will have to have brains as well as brawn in this coming grid campaign.

Petes After Top Spot

Viaduct Major League baseball playoffs will find four of the six clubs in action around the end of this month. Looks like Dovers and Staffords won't make it, but the mathematical chance is still there. The Petes have a good chance of first place yet, being in second now but two and a half down from Oshawa. They'll play the Merchants in the Motor City tomorrow aft and then have a "home" game that evening with Merchants in Bowmanville, if present plans go through. A double win for the men o' Murphy would almost tie 'em for top spot. Meantime, they're several other games up on Aces, who are third. Bill Edger will twirl one game Saturday, but we don't know who gets the call in the other.

* * * * * *

Girls' softball playoffs at the Bowl tonight with Ashby's meeting Marines at seven. If Ashby's win it, they go right back at Westclox in the nightcap to open the best-of-five loop finals, with another twin bill Saturday night and Monday. If Marines win the first tonight, they go right back at Ashby's to settle the semi-final, and—if Marines win out in the series—the Outboards play Westclox a game at three Saturday aft and two that night, finishing up Monday. In case rain interferes, the team leading the final series will go into PWSU intermediate "A" playdowns in Kingston on Wednesday and back here a week from tomorrow. Woollens go into junior playdowns in Toronto on Aug. 30. Meantime, the local round-robin playoffs open here next Wednesday. Frank McCormack manages Westclox, Bud Goodson skippers Ashby's, and Gord Reynolds pilots Marines.

Still Tied In a Knot

East City and UEW of the City Softball League are still tied after four games of the best-of-seven semi-finals. They split evenly at the Bowl yester gloaming before a fairish playoff crowd, UEW taking the neat first fray by an 8-5 count, whilst East City won the slower second scrap by a 13-7 score. Jim Conlin and Skeeter O'Heron had to retire with leg injuries, and Tom Walton—skipper of UEW—got the thumb from Umpire Mowry for kicking too hard on a close one at first. The teams resume action with another twin bill Tuesday and that night could be the end of the road for either one. Mutuals meet the winners in finals.

* * * * * *

Reg Gordon proved the most effective flinger in seven used last e'en. He won the opener and looked good in a relief role in the second. Lefty Doris went okay, too, but none of them showed too much in the nightcap. Fielding was fair most of the way. Wade, Spencer and Doris led East City in the first tussle, as O'Heron and Cornwall were best at the plate for 'em in the other. White topped the regulars of UE in the opener, while Thomson, Mackness and Pagett led the way in the last joust. Catches by Spencer and Mackness, plus a double play by UE were fielding features. So, it's anyone's series yet, but time grows short.

East City Ties Semi-Finals With 13-7 Win

East City won 13-7 over UEW in the men's softball nightcap at the Bowl last night to even the four-in-seven semi-finals at two games each. The nine-run splash at the expense of Legrow and Hall in the first frame clinched it, Gordon finishing up in good style for UEW after hurling the first game. Guilfoyle pitched seven heats for the winners, with Eakins finishing up. On the night's performance, Reg. Gordon proved the most effective twirler. UEW were a bit loose afield in the last tussle.

O'Heron led East City at bat with two for two, but injured his leg and had to retire in the sixth. Cornwall clouted a double and two singles in five, as Jaquith and Wade each had two hits. Pagett, Mackness and Thomson each had two for five for the losers, Thomson, White and Gordon hitting triples, and Taylor and Mackness getting doubles. Conlin hurt his leg and left in the third, while Manager Tom Walton was ousted in the eighth for arguing with Umpire Holly Mowry too strenuously.

UEW Triumphs By 8 to 5 Over East City

UEW defeated East City 8-5 in the first game of the doubleheader at the Bowl last night to take a temporary lead in the best-of-seven men's softball semi-finals, but East City won the second to even the count at two games each. They have another twin bill there Tuesday. Only a fair-sized crowd saw the snappy first fray in which the winners had one less hit and each side booted but two, but both East City errors figured in three unearned runs.

Lefty Doris and Reg Gordon pitched on fairly even terms and generally had good support. White had three hits in four tries for UEW as Byrnes came through with two in four times up, and Thomson clouted a triple. For East City, Doris, Spencer and Wade each had two for four, as Sullivan and Scriver had two in five trips. Currie hit a homer, and triples were blasted out by Doris and Sullivan. Spencer had a neat catch in left.

Dodgers Edge Past Boston With Opening 4-3 Victory

By JACK HAND,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Jim Konstanty, the Phils' rubber-armed reliefer, looks to be the most important single factor in the National League race.

Bespectacled Jim marched from the bullpen in five of the Phils' last seven games, missing only two in a week.

When he replaced Bob Miller in the eighth inning of Thursday night's 6-5 win over the Giants, he made his 51st appearance in the Phils' 108 games this season.

Singles by Gran Hamner and Andy Seminick and a game-losing error by centre-fielder Bobby Thomson gave Konstanty his ninth victory in the 10th inning Thursday night. More important, it boosted the Phils lead to six games over Boston Braves.

Bubba Church gave way in the first inning to Miller who yielded another pair in the fourth and one in the eighth. The Phils clawed Larry Jansen for five runs and 10 hits in his seven innings. Hamner and Mike Goliat both hit homers off Larry. Dave Koslo was the 10th-inning victim.

Dodgers Take First

The important Boston-Brooklyn series opened with a 4-3 victory for the Dodgers. Gil Hodges and Roy Campanella hit consecutive homers in the fourth. The triumph slipped Brooklyn into third place, three percentage points ahead of Idle St. Louis.

Umpire Lou Jorda cleared the Boston bench in the fourth after the Braves protested a ball to Hodges. He chased manager Billy Southworth and Gene Mauch. Then he ordered all but two coaches, trainer and the bat boy from the bench. All but Southworth and Mauch were to be allowed to return if necessary.

Hodges' stab of Sam Jethroe's liner started a game-ending double play that ruined a ninth-inning Boston threat Earlier Jethroe hit his 12th homer.

Preacher Roe, knocked out in the eighth, saved his 15th victory while Johnny Sain, going the route, suffered his eighth loss. He's won 16.

Break Losing Streak

Pittsburgh broke a 10-game losing streak by blasting Chicago 7-4. Ralph Kiner, Wally Westlake and Clyde McCullough hit homers as the Cubs dropped into a seventh-place tie with idle Cincinnati. Kiner's homer was his 31st.

Picking on the second division clubs proved risky business in the American League. Only second-place Cleveland, a 5-4 winner over St. Louis, got away with it. The Tribe squeezed home with Bob Lemon hitting two doubles to back up his 18th victory.

Detroit added ½ game to its lead, now measuring 3½. But the Tigers missed a chance after whipping Chicago 10-6. They were held to a 1-1 tie in the second game, called by darkness in the seventh.

Art Houtteman took the opener for his 14th victory. The second game, a playoff of a 7-7 tie April 30, ended all even with two out and a man on in the Chicago seventh.

Philadelphia Athletics dropped New York into third place, defeating the Yanks 5-3 in their series opener.

Boston ran into trouble with fifth-place Washington. The Senators won the opener 11-2 and the Red Sox took the second 4-3

Pros Grumble As 1st Round Tilt Rained Out

CHICAGO Aug. 11 — (AP) — Rumblings of a walk-out in the Tam O'Shanter golf tournament had subsided today among some of the big-shot pros who, after second thought, decided against shunning $49,000 in prize money.

A sundown rainstorm Thursday caught Bobby Locke, Jack Burke, Jr., Jimmy Demaret and Cary Middlecoff among those still on the course.

Promoter George S. May ruled that all scores earlier posted in the first round of his "world" golf championship be cancelled in accordance with his printed regulations governing play.

Twenty-eight pros already had finished their opening shot for a $11,000 first prize.

Jimmy Demaret, even par through 15 holes before the storm struck, thought it all was unfair to the others who had finished their rounds. Promoter May told him if he didn't like it he could withdraw.

"I wouldn't play in the Tam if a million dollars was the prize," Demaret said later.

Changes Mind

He soon found, however, that although some colleagues agreed with him, they would not be stampeded out of the meet.

So, after a flurry of words, everything apparently ended in a calm and Demaret was expected to remain among those present.

The most unruffled player was South Africa's Bobby Locke who pocketed $2,500 Wednesday by winning the All-American pros' meet in a playoff with Lloyd Mangrum.

When the rain came, Locke had driven from the 18th tee and his ball rested only 135 yards from the green. He left it there and came in. A par on the final hole would have given him a 70.

"I inspected the 18th green," Locke said. "The water had made it treacherous. You would have to be inside 12 feet of the cup or you would need three putts. Mr. May did the right thing."

Barriefield Man Wins Ontario Rifle Meet

LONG BRANCH, Aug. 11 (CP) —RSM. George Collins, 41, of Barriefield, Thursday won the Lieutenant-Governor's medal, premier award at the Ontario Rifle Association meet.

Collins scored 70 of a possible 75 to finish one point ahead of W. P. McBean of London, Ont.

Capt. H. C. Evans muffed a chance to win the event when his last shot missed the target.

Capt. J. G. Kirk, Lieut. Robert Storrar and Maj. E T. Burke, each with 99 of 100, tied for first place in the bankers' match.

Other winners included:

Gibson Match—Sgt. C. O. Boast, President's Match—Capt. C. S. Shawcrosse; Tait-Brassey Match —Cpl. J. W. Meahan, RCMP; ORA Silver Medal—Capt. S. W. Graham.

TVL Tilt Tied Up

NORWOOD, Aug. 11—(ENS)—The first game of the Trent Valley League semi-final play-offs was played in Norwood on Thursday evening between Marmora and Norwood junior baseball teams, ending in a tie, 5-5. Norwood—R. Spencer, Fredericks, E. Spencer, Kelly, Monahan, LaBrash, Cutherbertson, Scott, Burtt.

Get Special Patch

OTTAWA, Aug. 11 — (CP) — The army already is working on a patch for the new special force created to fight aggression, an emblem such as the patches which marked the divisions of the second world war. Its design hasn't yet been decided but, similar to those other patches, it would be worn on the sleeve of the soldier and would stamp his as a member of the formation.

McCrae Church Opens For Decoration Service

BETHANY, Aug. 11 (ENS) — McCrae's United Church, which has been closed for several years, was opened on Sunday for the Decoration Day service. The adjoining cemetery is one of the oldest in Manvers township.

Many former residents and relatives were present and the little church was crowded beyond capacity.

A. H. Monk of Bethany had charge of the service, with Mrs. Roy Cochrane at the organ and accompanying the two guest soloists, Mrs. Hartwell Lowrey and Mrs. Ray Chapman, both of Orono. The Rev. Major John Foote delivered the sermon.

At the cemetery, which is kept in repair entirely by voluntary contributions, there were many beautiful floral tributes.

Here and There In Sport

By The Canadian Press

Radio Moscow is telling Russian listeners that football in the United States is so "murderous" that players in Ann Arbor, Mich., "are often carried from the football field straight to the cemetery."

Ann Arbor is the home of the University of Michigan, which turns out top football teams but scarcely as tough as the Moscow commentator pictures them.

The broadcast, picked up by American monitors in Washington blamed profit-hungry promoters for the "murderous" play. It said they are trying to build up big crowds by "turning every football match into a fight."

The broadcast also put a "barbarous" label on other American sports contests and concluded that it's all part of a dark plot.

The aim, the broadcast said, is to stir up the "bestial instincts" in American youths and yet them ready for the new world war about which the Wall Street bosses are dreaming.

Of football, the broadcast had this to say:

"Football players are forced obediently to carry out the orders of their bosses under the threat of unemployment. For the men who treat sport as a money-making proposition, peoples health and lives are of no concern."

Joe Herbert, a shifty colt owned by William H. Herbert, of London, equalled the Canadian record for two-year-old trotters when he won the second race at Toronto's Thorncliffe Raceway Thursday.

Joe Herbert paced the mile in 2.15 equalling the mark which Jim Lee established at Glencoe, Ont., in 1939. The record applies to half-mile tracks.

The track has been worked into lightning-fast condition in preparation for today's contest for the $15,000 Canadian cup stake for pacers.

Last year's finish in the senior's golf tournament of the London Hunt Club was reversed Thursday.

A. R. Wilson of Montreal Summerlea put together rounds of 76 and 78 for a 154 to take the title won last year by Dr. George Laing, of Windsor Essex. Dr. Laing, the defending Canadian senior's champion, had two rounds of 79 for a 158 to place second.

British Columbia and Ontario remained in a first-place tie in the Dominion cricket championships at Winnipeg Thursday. The tied teams have three wins and one loss each at the end of four days of play. Manitoba and Alberta have three losses and a win each.

Numerous entries will take part in an international invitation swimming meet, sanctioned by the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, to be held at the Laurentian Mountain resort of Ste. Marguerite, Aug. 12.

Pat Fink of Ottawa, Gieselle Contant and Charlotte Dion of Quebec City, Beverley Suitcliffe of Toronto, June Taylor of St. Catharines, Therese Brisson and Jean Orser of Mntreal and Marjorie Cochand of Ste. Marguerite have already filed entries.

June Taylor will attempt to retain the Billie McKellar trophy for synchronized swimming solo which she won last year.

Sammy Snead, at present top money earner among United States golf professionals, will take part in the Canadian open golf championship at Montreal on Aug. 24-27.

He won the Dominion's top golf tournament in 1938, 1940 and 1941.

In a Canadian-American lacrosse league game Thursday night in Sarnia, Sarnia Beavers defeated Windsor Sterlings 9-8 to close out their regular season leading the league. Sarnia did not suffer a home loss.

Apprentice Jockey John Glisson, 17, of Winnsboro, S. C., was fatally injured in a spill aboard Mr. and Mrs. Jack Carava's Broker during the running of the fourth race at Del Mar track near San Diego, Calif., Thursday.

Wadsworth Says He Misses Pre-War "Fun"

TORONTO (CP)—Big Bunny Wadsworth says football isn't nearly as much fun as it used to be.

A broker with a Toronto firm who spearheaded the most powerful line in Canadian football for Ottawa Rough Riders before the Second World War, Wadsworth admits that today's linemen probably know more about the fundamentals than the Riders did in his day. But look at the fun they're missing.

As an example he told an interviewer of a satisfactory afternoon 12 years ago when the Riders played Toronto Argonauts for the Interprovincial Union title Argos, paced by the long punts of big Bob Isbister, blasted Ottawa out of the park—but that isn't the point.

From his middle-wing position, Bunny noticed that Clary Burt, an Argo middle, was using his elbows rather freely. Casually, he moved in opposite Burt on a line play.

"It just happened that one of my elbows brushed Clary's face," Wadsworth recalled. "The next time I saw Clary he was running around with his jaw very slightly dislocated."

Went Unnoticed

By the time Burt recovered his powers of speech, play had moved on. The officials hadn't seen a thing.

"A little while later I was carrying the ball. As I glanced up, I saw Clary Burt's fist coming. It was coming from so far back, I could hardly see it. It conked me right on the end of the nose."

The officials missed that one too, but they stood Wadsworth back on his feet and it only took 10 minutes or so for his vision to clear.

"Then I saw Clary Burt," Wadsworth said, with evident enjoyment.

"I started a punch away back in the bleachers at the east end. And by a strange coincidence Clary ran into it with his nose."

Time was called while Burt was removed to a hospital to have a broken nose repaired.

"But it was all in fun," chuckled stockbroker Wadsworth. "I think I even sent him flowers."

English Sinatra Prepares Program For US-Canada

LONDON —(CP)— Donald Peers, acclaimed by British radio fans as Britain's Frank Sinatra, has signed a two-year contract to sing in commercial radio programs heard all over the world.

The 42-year-old crooner, formerly a £3 ($9.20) a week house painter, has just finished a series of programs under the longest personal contract (52 weeks) in the history of the strictly non-commercial British Broadcasting Corporation.

It is estimated that his new commercial contract will mean a yearly income of something like £15,000 ($46,500) for singing to a worldwide audience.

Harry Allan Towers, of Towers of London Ltd., who have arranged the new contract, said:

"Peers goes into action this month and we are now negotiating from which commercial radio stations the programs will be transmitted to the world. We hope that he will be heard from radio Luxembourg for European listeners.

Heard in Dominions

"It is certain his songs will be heard in the United States and the British Dominions."

Peers said he was not aware of anything in the new contract which would bar him from singing again on the BBC "if they wished to have him."

A BBC spokesman said, "Mr. Peers has finished his contract with us and nothing further has been planned.

Production Tip

"Can you guess?"

Britain's television bosses have taken a production tip from a small, 28-year-old, elfin-faced mother.

Mrs. Peggy Cameron, until recently a well-known voice on radio programs, broke into television with definite ideas.

She suggested a program in which children would be asked to identify unusual objects.

Television liked the idea and accepted it. Then the fight started. Peggy and the producer had different views on how the program should be presented.

The officials wanted a script, considered the quiz Peggy suggested too bold and advanced, and insisted she should use words with not more than six letters.

Treated as Equals

Peggy, herself the mother of three, said: "But I have no script when I talk to my children. I treat children as equals. They prefer it that way."

She had taken her own pool on infant opinion and insisted her way was right. After a few sharp rounds, she won. The bosses submitted rather than have Peggy quit.

The program, called "Can You Guess?" was an instant success.

For Peggy it means a foot in the door of her fight against the British habit of "talking down" to children.

Boost Prices For Fixtures Plumbers Reveal

TORONTO, Aug. 11 (CP) — Price increases of up to 10 per cent on bathtubs, sinks, toilets and other plumbing fixtures are being put into effect this week, a spokesman for a major manufacturer said Thursday night.

He declined to be quoted directly or to have the company identified for publication.

The price boosts are a "readjustment" based on the cost of tin, iron, enamel and other materials used in manufacture of plumbing fixtures, he said. It was likely that other companies would take similar action.

The spokesman said an arrangement has been made whereby builders—until Aug. 15—may buy fixtures at old prices for use in buildings for which contracts were let prior to the decision to boost prices.

Meanwhile, it was learned that some contractors, believing the federal government may impose price controls similar to those in effect during the Second World War, are buying up big amounts of plumbing equipment. Some dealers have adopted quota systems in an effort to curb this "speculation."

To Protect Light

LEAMINGTON, Aug. 11 (CP)— Tons of limestone slabs are being carried from Pelee Island to the southeast shoal lighthouse, six miles southeast of Point Pelee in Lake Erie. Some 15,000 tons of rock will be used in a protective ring around the light, to protect it from heavy seas and ice.

Swamped By Phone Calls

Veterans Hail New Army Chief 'Rocky'

OTTAWA, Aug. 11—(CP)—The big, rugged leader of Canada's new army brigade flew into the capital to report for duty Thursday with phones still ringing in his ears.

Brig. John M. (Rocky) Rockingham, just off a TCA plane from Vancouver, told reporters the first hours after his appointment was announced Wednesday were clogged with an incessant stream of calls and wires from a" across the country.

Men he had fought with and soldiered with in the Second World War called to congratulate him and say they were available. "There must have been 300 of them," he said with a grin. "It was a swell way to start off."

Added to that, said the man in Highland uniform, was the reaction of his own regiment, the Canadian Scottish of Victoria and Vancouver's Seaforth Highlanders.

"They just got in touch with me and said what are you going to do with us'?" he said.

Brig. Rockingham, the 38-year-old native of Australia who commanded the 3rd Division's Highland Brigade in the last war, was met by Maj.-Gen. H. D. Graham, vice-chief of the general staff, and went directly to defense headquarters to confer about his new job.

It is one which will place him at the head of the 5,000-man brigade group the government is raising to fight in Korea or elsewhere depending on the character and locale of aggressions when the force is ready.

Depend On Men

Brig Rockingham said he wouldn't venture a guess as to when the force would be ready to fight because that would depend largely on the combat experience of the men recruited.

From what he had heard about recruiting, it sounded "very satisfactory."

"I will say one thing though," he added, "and that is that we won't be putting this formation into battle until it is fully trained."

In Toronto, en route here, he was quoted as saying it would probably take at least six months before the brigade could take the field, a figure borne out by army officers here.

He was quoted as saying, too, that he would like to see the formation train for a spell in Japan before tackling Korea. Here, Gen. Graham said the sort of special training the brigade gets could be adopted when it becomes apparent to what theatre it will go.

This might be mountain training or jungle training There was no way of telling yet.

Brig. Rockingham will set up an office at defense headquarters, at least temporarily, and will have a small staff. It will be weeks yet before the brigade is concentrated at one base.

One of the first jobs facing headquarters is choice of the three infantry battalion commanders and there are signs that the choice is complicated by an abundance of volunteers. Gen. Graham said, however, their names should be announced in a week or less.

Gas Retailers Re-open Stations

TRENTON, N.J., Aug. 11 (AP)—Leaders of New Jersey gasoline retailers, who shut down their stations Tuesday in a price war, agreed Thursday night to reopen for business immediately.

Governor Alfred E. Driscoll announced that an agreement to end the three-day shutdown was reached after a three-hour conference between state officials and executive members of the N.J. Gasoline Retailers Association.

John Dressler, association president, said he would recommend to the 3,000 members of his organization that they reopen their stations immediately and return to the standard prices in effect before the start of the gasoline price war which dropped rates as much as four cents a gallon.

More than half of the filling stations in the state have been shut since the retailers' association voted last Tuesday to close in protest against the price cutting.

Request Intervention

HAMILTON, Aug. 11 — (CP) — The Street Railwaymen's Union Thursday asked Labor Minister Daley to intervene in its contract dispute with the Hamilton Street Railway. Negotiations broke down after a two-hour meeting between company and union officials.

Pick Committee SpeedShipments

CLEVELAND, Aug. 11 (AP)—A 10-man committee was appointed Thursday to help speed delivery of critically needed iron ore, coal and other commodities shipped on the Great Lakes.

The group, composed of prominent figures in the lakes shipping industry, will co-operate with railroads and government agencies. A similar plan was used during the last two world wars.

Its action was spurred by the fact that iron ore shipments on the lakes so far this year are 11,509,578 tons behind last year.

Major problems facing the committee are railroad car shortages, delays and loading and unloading docks, port congestion and dispatching difficulties.

A major reason ore shipments are less than last year is that ice in the upper Great Lakes caused a late opening for the shipping season.

Says Advertising Raises Living Standard

REGINA, Aug. 11 (CP)—Advertising has raised the living standard of every person in North Amreica, W. E. McCartney of Brampton, Thursday told delegates to the annual convention of the Saskatchewan division, Canadian Weekly Newspapers' Association.

Mr. McCartney, managing director of CWNA, traced the history of newspaper advertising.

"It has been only in the past 25 years that advertising has gained a strong foothold in our society," he said Canadian weeklies attracted a greater percentage of national advertising than their counterparts in the United States.

He challenged delegates to be more prompt and efficient in dealings with national advertisers.

"Only about two-thirds of CWNA membership co-operates with national advertisers in the proper manner," he said. "It is time we tightened up our membership standards."

"The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation seeks co-operation with the daily and weekly press," C. E. L'Ami of Winnipeg, editor of the CBC Times, told delegates

"About 15 years ago there were dark warnings that radio would supersede the press but today everyone admits the two are complimentary," he said

Butter Production Declined In July

OTTAWA, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Butter production continued to decline in July, while margarine output crept upward.

Creamery butter production, the Bureau of Statistics reported Thursday, totalled 36,420,000 lbs., compared with last year's 38,010,000. This decline brought the seven-month total for 1950 to 155,294,000 pounds, down from last year's 161,011,000.

Margarine production, however, gained from 5,525,000 pounds in July, 1949, to 5,891,000. Output in the seven months climbed from 38,756,000 to 54,928,000.

Veterans Find Pay Higher

OTTAWA, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Veterans serving in Canada's special army force will find their pay a bit better than it was in the Second World War.

Defence Minister Claxton said Thursday men in that force will be paid on the same basis as men in the regular force. This indicated that there will be no special pay for service in Korea or elsewhere.

In the Second World War, a recruit got $1.30 a day and was raised to $1.50 after six months. A corporal got $1.70, a sergeant $2.20, a captain $6.50. There was a substitute allowance of $1.25 a day for other ranks, $1.70 for officers if they weren't living in barracks and eating army food.

Now the recruit will get $68 a month—pay now is computed on a monthly basis—and $72 once he is trained. A sergeant gets $101, a captain $213. Subsistence allowances range from $54 a month for a new private to $60 for a sergeant and on up.

Married personnel in the new force will get $30 a month if below the rank of officer and $40 if they are officers. In the war, married other ranks got a dependents allowance of $37.20 a month while a lieutenant got $47.20 and a captain $62.20.

Suggests WMS Rally Held In Bailieboro

BAILIEBORO, Aug. 11 — The August meeting of the Women's Association of Bailieboro United church was held at the home of Mrs. George Dean on Tuesday, with approximately 30 members in attendance.

It was decided to extend an invitation to the W.M.S. of the Peterborough Presbyery to hold its annual rally in Bailieboro early in October.

The remainder of the afternoon was devoted to arrangements for catering to two weddings to be held during the coming month.

Lunch was served by the hostess and her committee in charge.

First Canadian Recruits Report For Initial Training

OTTAWA, Aug. 11—(CP)—The first recruits for Canada's new fighting brigade were dispatched to training centres Thursday as volunteers continued to flock to army recruiting depots to join up for action in Korea or elsewhere.

Unofficial estimates put the total volunteers in the last three days up to noon Thursday at close to 1,200 in Toronto 800 at Montreal, 500 at Ottawa and hundreds of others at cities in the Maritimes and the West.

The army's drive for men in New Brunswick opened Thursday at main recruiting centre at St. John where 58 registered even before the office opened. An officer there, eyeing the lineup, said:

"It looks as if we could do the same as was done in Australia—recruit a full division practically overnight."

At Vancouver, where offices were practically "mobbed" Wednesday and had to be shut for a time, 174 men have been accepted for the special brigade that will fight in Korea or elsewhere as a U.N. force after a six-to eight-month training period.

The first batch of accepted volunteers at Montreal left Thursday for Petawawa training camp and an army spokesman said he was confident that the 5,000 men needed for the special force would be obtained shortly.

The majority of those volunteering were veterans of the Second World War, the men the army particularly wants because it won't take so long to train them. Medical selection officers said generally the type of men volunteering was good and the ratio of rejections for health or other reasons was not considered out of proportion.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11—(AP) President Truman said Thursday that Jakob Malik, Soviet representative on the United Nations Security Council, is conducting a filibuster on Korea, and it is a filibuster against the Russians themselves principally.

Staff At YMCA Undergoes Entire Change

Two of the vacancies caused by a retirement and a resignation on the staff of YMCA have been filled by former staff members of YMCA's in the Prairie Provinces. No announcement has been made as to a successor for (Al) Clark, physical director, whose appointment as general secretary of the YMCA at Ingersoll was made known Thursday. It is understood that experienced physical directors are scarce and there may be some difficulty obtaining a replacement.

The first indication of possible changes in the YMCA staff was made in January at the annual meeting of the YMCA when G. H. Roper, general secretary, announced that he intended to retire in September. In June the board of directors announced that Charles D. Forsyth, general secretary in Niagara Falls and at one time a candidate for the National boys' work secretary, was to succeed Mr. Roper at the start of the fall program, September 1.

A graduate of the University of Manitoba, Mr. Forsyth first entered YMCA work in 1928 in Edmonton. In 1936 he moved to Winnipeg where he was assistant boys' work secretary until 1940 when he became boys' work secretary. During his seven years there he became recognized as one of the leading boys' work secretaries in Canada. Since 1947 he has been general secretary in Niagara Falls.

Came 45 Years Ago

Mr. Roper first came to Peterborough in 1905 as a YMCA staff member but only stayed for one year when he returned to Toronto to complete his education. In 1909 he went to Brantford as the physical director there and after six years came to Peterborough.

Shortly after his arrival the general secretary, C. V. Meserve, left to accept a position in the United States. Mr. Roper first acted as temporary general secretary and then was made general secretary, the position which he has held ever since.

Donald Duncan, boys' work secretary, accepted the same position with the London YMCA. He succeeds Kenneth Gowie who is joining the staff of the University of Western Ontario.

Mr. Duncan was appointed boys' work secretary in 1944 to fill the vacancy left by Maxwell Singleton. His activities besides the boys' activities in the YMCA have included directing the teenage groups, the Hi-Y clubs and camp directing at the Y's Men's club's camp on Clear lake in 1948 and 1949.

William McFarlane, boys' work secretary in Saskatoon YMCA since 1945, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Duncan. At the same time as Mr. Forsyth was in Winnipeg, Mr. McFarlane was a member of the staff. From 1939 until 1945 he was swimming director, camp director and then assistant boys' work secretary Prior to his work in Winnipeg Mr. McFarlane worked a year in the Calgary YMCA.

Thursday came the unexpected announcement that Mr. Clark, physical director at the YMCA since 1939, was appointed general secretary of the Ingersoll YMCA. The appointment will be effective September 1.

Mr. Clark came to Peterborough in 1939 from Toronto Broadview YMCA where he had served four years as physical director. Before that he was physical director in Windsor, St. John, N.B., Montreal Central and Winnipeg. During World War 2 he served overseas for three years and two months with the Canadian army.

THE SMILING GIRL with the cast on her right leg is six-year-old Linda Hewitt. Last April she wore a cast on her arm for four weeks after breaking it. In February her family was burned out of their home at 208 Rink St. and moved back June 1. "I hope that's the end of our bad luck," said her mother Mrs. Kenneth R. Hewitt.

Left Eight Days In B.C. Bush On Survival Test

Equipped with a rifle, knife, fish hook, hard tack, and a sleeping bag, Flying Officer John E. Greatrix, 21, Peterborough, an RCAF jet fighter pilot, is one of many airmen being dropped into the northern British Columbia bush country on a survival test.

They are left to get along as best they can for eight days in the wilderness. They are expected to hunt and fish for their food.

The men are first given a course at Fort Nelson, BC, to teach them how to survive if they ever are forced down in the wilderness. Then comes the tough 8-day test.

FO Greatrix, son of Frank Greatrix, local druggist, has been flying Vampire jets since December. He joined the RCAF almost two years ago.

Until about a month ago, he was stationed at Chatham, N.B., and then was ordered out to Fort Nelson.

His older brother Bill, is an RCAF World War II veteran.

City Without Hydro For Twelve Minutes

Hydro power blacked out over the whole city this morning for 12 minutes, one of the longest breaks in electric supply for some time.

The Utilities Commission said the interruption was caused by something outside the city, but they didn't know what it was.

Broke Her Arm In April Now Has Fractured Leg

Six-year-old Linda Hewitt has had more than her share of bad luck.

Last April she broke her arm and had it in a cast for about four weeks.

Today she is hopping around on one leg. She broke her right leg a week ago when she was pushed by a playmate and fell.

Last February her family was burned out of their house at 208 Rink St. and were not able to move back in until June 1.

Now when her mother, Mrs. Kenneth R. Hewitt, leaves early in the morning to go to work in one of the downtown chain food stores, she takes Linda across the street to a neighbor's where Linda plays as best she can with the leg held still by the plaster cast.

Her leg was broken about half way between the knee and ankle and it will be another two or three weeks before the youngster can be given a walking cast which will allow her to put her weight on the leg. Any weight on the leg now might shift the mending bone and make the leg crooked.

In the meantime Linda remains cheerful. At home she slides herself sitting down about her mother's polished floors and pulls herself up by her arms into chairs.

When she leaves the house her mother carries her. Mrs. Hewitt is not sure whether Linda will be able to start back to school early in September with the other children, but thinks she will quickly catch up when she does start back.

In the meantime, the blond headed youngster is quite proud of her cast which is almost covered with names and other writing, and the little extra attention her cast gives her. One way and another, she gets around, "but it's rather hard on the clothes," Mrs. Hewitt observes.

"I hope that's the last of our bad luck," she said.

37 Ask Way To Lift Lock

Thursday was lift lock day at the Jaycee Booth on Charlotte St. More than 37 people asked for directions to the lift lock, according to the booth operator, Bill Duignan. This was the highest number of inquiries concerning the lift lock registered in a single day at the booth this summer.

Despite the fact that 861 persons were serviced at the booth during the past week, the tourist industry in this district seems to be heading for a slump this weekend No reason for the high number of vacancies registered by tourist operators at the Jaycee Booth has been given.

Last weekend was the biggest weekend of the season for the operators of tourist accommodations in the Peterborough district.

Cabins and tourist homes were jammed due to the influx of golf players and fans who attended the Kawartha Open Golf Tournament. Some of the people looking for accommodation were sent as far as Lakefield.

LAC C. McKinstry Makes Overseas Research Flight

On an experimental flight with the RCAF is LAC Clifford McKinstry, Orpington Rd. He is one of the crew of a North Star fitted with research de-icing equipment

The aircraft took off Wednesday for England, and will travel over the continent for one month, visiting four other countries besides England before returning to its base at Rockcliffe.

New de-icing gear will be tested by flying the plane through all sorts of weather.

Plumbing Costs Increase 10 p.c.

Contract for the heating and plumbing for the two 15-unit apartment buildings now in construction for Sands and Bateman has been let to Goodfellow and Dougherty. Piping is entirely of copper instead of iron.

Orders for 30 bathtubs were placed by the contractors just ahead of an increase of 10 per cent in the price of plumbing supplies this week.

Cause of the increase is chiefly the surge of buying since the war in Korea aroused hoarders to begin grabbing for themselves.

"I don't know of any other cause," Mr. Goodfellow said today. "We ordered these bathtubs because we actually need them."

From another source early this week it was rumored that a company in Toronto had a stock of 650 bathtubs some weeks ago. Tuesday they had none, and the trade suspicion was that somebody was stocking up against the possibility of the war threat crimping manufacture.

The ten per cent price increase was also heard at the turn of the week and was verified by Mr. Goodfellow.

Body Recovered Of Boy 13 Lost In Otonabee

The body of Ronald Ernest Stanley Calberry, 13, was recovered from the Otonabee river shortly before eight p.m. Thursday, just 28 hours after the boy drowned trying to swim about 75 yards across the river.

The body was found lying in about 12 feet of water just about where he went down. Firemen and volunteer helpers had been searching the area down stream which had been pointed out to them as the spot he disappeared.

Looked Further South

Searchers believed he would have been carried some distance south by the strong current. Instead the boy went to the bottom about 20 feet west of Yankee Bonnett, the island he and Bernard Bertrand started from to swim across to the east bank.

The men in the boat who found the body, using fire department dragging equipment, were Norman Farthing, 429 Rose Ave., Norman Collins, 445 Braidwood Ave., and a Mr. Yolande, R.R. 11, Peterborough, Otonabee township.

Firemen and volunteer helpers had been scouring the river bottom all day Thursday.

Strength Gave Out

Young Ronald, who learned to swim just last spring, started out across the river with Bernard, but part way across, decided he couldn't make it. He turned around and started back, but soon all his strength was played out and he started to go under.

Bernard who was swimming beside him, grabbed him by the arms and tried to help him back to shore, but was nearly pulled under himself by the struggling boy.

Bernard and Larry Heard, 10, who had been left behind on the island because he couldn't swim, saw the boy sink and ran 300 yards to the home of Mrs. Roy Hughes who phoned city police.

Constables Louis Rodreque and John Conlin arrived within three minutes and dived for him in the spot pointed out to them, but without success.

Ronald is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Calberry, 678 Hawley St., two brothers, Jack and Gary and three sisters, Jean, Shirley and Leta.

The funeral service will be held Monday at 2 p.m. at Comstock Funeral Home, Rev. E. C. L. Moore officiating. Burial will be in Little Lake cemetery.

Labor Exhibit For Exhibition

Among the displays to be featured at the Peterborough Exhibition this year will be the Federal Department of Labor's exhibit, William Mellis, manager of the local National Employment Service office, announced today. This display has proven a big attractions at the C.N.E. and other exhibitions.

Some of the Labor Department's activities featured are: the National Employment Service, including information on employment for men and women, job opportunities for youth, the physically handicapped and the older worker; unemployment insurance benefits and contributions, government annuities, labor-management and industrial relations, and vocational training. These services are all portrayed by colored and descriptive display material.

Local office employees will be at the exhibit to give verbal information as well as informations through reading materials such as pamphlets.

Name Lake For Soldier

GRAND FORKS, BC —(CP)— Mrs. Ida McParlon of Grand Forks has received word from the Canadian Board of Geographical Names that a lake in Northern Ontario has been named in honor of her son, the late Cpl. George Lynn McParlon. Cpl. McParlon was killed in Italy after he received the Military Medal for cleaning out a German machine gun post in the Second World War.

Farmers Gamble?

Farmers can never be certain of their crops until they have been converted into cash.

The Examiner mentioned several weeks ago the expectations of James Brown of Newcastle for 100 bushels to the acre from a big field of Beaver oats. It looked like the biggest yield he had ever grown, as reported by Stuart Bowman, district seeds inspector for the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Then, right at the end of July a rain suddenly switched to severe hail. Mr. Brown changed his estimate to the approximation: "I'll be lucky if I get 40 bus. to the acre."

The same pelting of hail, nearly the size of walnuts, did a great deal of damage to the orchard of Garnet Rickard, and to many other apple trees in that section of Durham

Three Men Fined $20 Each Fracas In Cafe

The three men charged with creating a disturbance in the Churchill Cafe were today fined $20 and $2.50 costs each by Magistrate R. B. Barter

The three, Gordon Dunlop, 23, of Ida; Ross Chadwick, 22, of Toronto, and Stanley Finn, 407 Dobbin Ave., pleaded guilty to the charges August 8, and appeared today for sentence.

They were charged following a fracas in the cafe in which William Coros, an employee, was injured when a thrown catsup bottle hit his head.

Damage to the cafe was estimated at about $500, and several glasses and the catsup bottle were thrown during the disturbance.

"These brawls in public eating places are much too common," said Crown Attorney John Bradshaw. "The public must be protected, and I suggest an example be made of these men."

His Worship said the "only way to stop this is to make the penalty severe."

The three face a further charge of assaulting Mr. Coros, and were remanded to August 17. Bail was set today at $500 for each of the men.

Open Season For Elk Fails To Win Local Approval, Said To Be Carrying Parasite

News that hunters will be allowed to hunt elk during the deer season next fall met strong opposition from Charlie Kingan, the man who was largely instrumental in having them placed south of Apsley and near Buckhorn about 12 years ago. "It's a darn poor idea," he said, "and I'm very much against it."

He said he thought no one should be allowed to hunt elk until they reached much bigger numbers than exist so far.

14 Put In District

Fourteen elk were released near Apsley and eight near Buckhorn. The Department of Lands and Forests said elk, or wapiti, are carrying a parasite which it is feared may infect deer.

Mr. Kingan said there may be one or two elk carrying the parasite in this area, but that was no reason to shoot them. He said he considered them a fine tourist attraction. He knew of several people who had driven many miles to Apsley just to see the elk.

One bright spot in the black news was that elk in the Peterborough County Game Preserve would still be protected.

Game Overseer Robert Trotter stationed in Apsley said the elk had apparently been flourishing in the area. In one herd last fall he counted 20 of the animals which resemble deer in appearance.

He said quite a number of calves had been reported seen this spring. One adult elk was killed by a car on the Apsley road this spring.

He has had only one report of elk doing damage to crops. He said any elk he has seen have shown no evidence of carrying the parasite and in fact seemed to be thriving in the area.

The Department of Lands and Forests in Toronto said dates for elk hunting will be the same as the open season on deer in each district. Any person with a deer licence can get a permit at a departmental office to hunt an elk. The department added that any elk taken by a hunter was likely to be in good shape.

BANK CLEANUP

The sum of $1,937,691 passed through the Peterborough banks clearing house during the week ending Thursday.

Lumber Firm Safe Cracked, Up To $100 Taken

The safe of Armstrong Lumber Company Ltd on Highway 28, just west of the city was cracked open some time during Thursday night and between $50 and $100 taken.

When employees Jack Carter and Stan Longhurst arrived at the office in the main building this morning they found the safe had been moved to the middle of the office floor, flipped over on its back and pried open, probably with a crow bar.

Only the money was taken. Nothing else apparently had been disturbed.

The thieves used their bar to pry open a back door to the building to gain entry.

Provincial Constables Fred Rawlings and Russell Pollard investigated.

Committee Set Up To Expedite Traffic

Designated as a permanent committee, City Engineer Chalmers, Chief Constable Thompson, City Clerk Outram and L. R. Mitchell, head of the bus lines, have been appointed by the council to deal with certain particulars of traffic. They held their first meeting this morning.

It has been asked to take up details involving the buses and their operation

CONTRACTOR FINED

FLOOD LIGHTING BILL

City council received this week a bill of $21,196.21 from the Utilities Commission, a progress account of the cost of erecting the flood lights at Riverside Park. Against that expenditure, is the sum of $15,000 raised by the little group of supporters of the Peterborough Baseball Club who assumed a large part of the financing.

RETURNING FROM WINNIPEG

Cecil G. Upper, general manager of the De Laval Company, is expected home tonight. He was taking a plane from Winnipeg today for Toronto. It was understood that he would probably complete the trip by ambulance to Peterborough. Mr. Upper suffered a broken leg near the knee several weeks ago while on a business trip. On his way to the station in Winnipeg at night he misjudged the height of a curb in stepping down from it in dim street light. It may be some indefinite time yet before he is able to return to his office.

Catfish Puts Up Battle For Nine Hours Two Men On Trent River Win All Day Tussle

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 11—(ENS).—Two men battled nine hours with a 14 pound channel catfish in the Trent River near Campbellford on Wednesday before gaffing it and getting it into their boat. The fish refused to break water and the men played with it until they ran out of gas for their motor, when they shouted to passing boats to get a new supply.

William Archer, owner of the Blue Roof Cabins summer resort on Bradley Bay, south of Campbellford, and Ted Cottrell, of Hillman, Michigan, hooked the fish at 9:45 a.m.

They got a fresh supply of gas from a passing boat, which took some out to them from shore and at lunch time, boats put out from shore with sandwiches and cigarettes for the two fishermen.

In the middle of the afternoon, a third man went out to relieve Mr. Archer, who had been handling the motor. Mr. Archer, who is from Akron, Ohio, was quite played out at this point.

Finally, at 7 p.m., the men manoeuvred the fish in near the shore, where it was gaffed and pulled into the boat.

The fish did not break water once during the entire day long fight.

The battle attracted scores of onlookers from cottages and boats. Although catfish have been caught before in these waters, no one remembers such a long battle.

Mr. Cottrell landed a 15-pound muskie at the same spot on Tuesday.

Field Judging Of Norwood Fair Beaver Oats Completed — Finals At Fair Oct. 9 — Demonstration Farm For Beef Cattle Pasture Planned In Lindsay Area — F. C. Paterson Reports Instance Of Liming Of Land — Ayrshires Average $480 At Howick Sale.

G. A. Brethen reports that judging of the standing field crop (the preliminary test in the Norwood Fair Beaver Oats Derby) has been completed. Wesley Wilson, Omemee, appointed by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, pronounced it the largest and one of the best he ever judged. Of the original 66 entries, 60 are still in the running for the final scoring on sheaf and grain (bushel lots) at the Fair Oct 9.

Possible score in the field crop competition was 100. Points were allowed as follows: freedom from other varieties of oats 10; freedom from other grains 10, freedom from smut, rust, insects, blight and other diseases, 15 points; competition finish—trim of headlands, fence lines, crop divisions, 10; freedom from weeds, 20, stand of crop, vigor, uniformity and maturity 35 points.

"Mr. Wilson said he was amazed at the absence in practically all of the fields of the worst noxious weeds common in oat fields, such as Blaader Campion (cockle), and wild oats, and also by freedom of the crops from smut, rust, etc., and of other varieties of oats. (This could be expected when all the fields were sown to the highest grade, smut treated, rust resistant seed obtainable.)

Individual scores are not divulged to any one locally. They are sent directly to the Superintendent's office, Toronto, to be held in secret until the final scores on sheaf and grain are available.

However, Mr. Wilson commented on the general excellence of the competition, with several of the fields scoring over 90 points, and very few, if any, below 80 Several of the better fields indicate yields of 75 bus. to the acre or better."

"The Norwood Fair Beaver Oats Derby is a three-way competition, the winners being decided by the gross score, made up of the field score, and the points for sheaf and bushel lot of grain from each competing field at the Norwood Fair on Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 9th.

Every contestant of the 60 now entered, who fulfills his obligation by showing his sheaf and bushel at the fair will share in the $200 prize money in the regular classes, and also has a chance to win a share of the $60 special prizes offered for the best field, the best sheaf and the best bushel.

The winner over all with the highest gross score can win over $30 in cash besides the beautiful gold watch suitably engraved to memorialize the occasion.

Judging by the closeness of the score in the field competition it may be that the score on sheaf and grain on fair day will decide the winner of the watch."

"We are informed officially that this contest is the largest of its kind ever attempted in Ontario. Of the 202 Ontario fairs carrying out similar projects last year, the highest had an entry list of 30 compared with the 60 in the Norwood contest."

"The directors of the Norwood Fair wish to express their appreciation to the various milling companies and others who, because of their interest in the growing of more and better grain, have contributed substantial amounts to make this competition possible."

BEEF PASTURE RESEARCH

Pasture facts for beef cattle is the broad objective of a research project recently approved by the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. T. L. Kennedy.

Norman Thomas of OAC and R. H. Graham of the provincial department have been appointed to select six demonstration farms here and there in Ontario with a central research farm at Guelph.

One of the six farms has been allotted to the district comprising the northern section of Ontario county, Victoria and Peterborough. For advantage of location it may be within a radius of ten or fifteen miles of Lindsay.

This was a preliminary recommendation of a meeting of breeders and department representatives at Lindsay Tuesday. Peterborough was represented by Bruce Graham and William Mood of Asphodel, Gordon Hunt of Lakehurst and F. C. Paterson. Others were invited to make the trip, but probably harvest work kept them at home.

"It is proposed that we rent a farm for five years with an option of five years additional use," Mr. Paterson explained. "But, it is not to be bought outright. What is contemplated is a typical farm of 100 acres, well watered, and laid out. Part of it should be in grass, and it should be near a highway for accessibility.

Most of it may have to be reseeded and fertilized according to management directions. The Beef Pasture Research Committee is setting out to get information about productivity of pasure land and the ability of pasture land to produce beef regardless of the market.

Beef cattle men have recognized the results that have been obtained with dairy cattle. There is a difference in the management of beef cattle on pasture, and what is needed is information as definite as we can make it. Beef men have been saying that they should be making more progress in the direction the dairy cattle breeders have been going.

This work will sharpen interest in the rehabilitation of old pasture. It may, and it certainly should, direct more attention to the advantages of keeping good beef cattle in the place of some milk critters that are kept on some farms with less income to the owners than would come from beef."

Mr. Paterson said there were 5,000 fewer cattle in Peterborough county than there were five years ago.

The organization of the committee, Mr. Paterson said, was another step in official planning for the purpose of obtaining for farmers as much explicit and helpful information as possible.

✦ ✦ ✦

LIME ON ACID SOIL

Liming land in Peterborough county rates in superfluous work and provision with the coals of the Newcastle proverb.

And yet, says Frank C. Paterson, there are soil exceptions. One of them turned up on the farm of John McColl of Asphodel, former Warden of the county. He wasn't satisfied with catches of clover on some lighter land. Tests of samples showed considerable acidity. Lime was recommended to correct that condition. And it was the specific lime, Dolomitic, to remedy a shortage of magenesium.

Peterborough district is generally embarrassed by too much lime, Mr. Paterson remarked to the Examiner.

"One of our problems is to determine its effects in the fixing of phosphorous. We do know that we get a good fair share of phosphorous in our fertilizing program, especially if there is adequate humus created by sod, clover, rye, vegetable matter and barnyard manure."

Any way, liming is not a district problem. Mr. Paterson commented that progressive farmers have to know something of soil chemistry, and the more the better.

HOWICK AYRSHIRE SALE

Americans bought 33 of the 50 Ayrshires at the annual Burnside sale at Howick, Que., last Saturday. Aggregate receipts were $24,085 and the average $480.

Harold Nock of Snow Hill, Maryland, took ten head including three of the ten animals imported from Scotland for the sale. He paid the top price of $1,500 for the imported bred heifer. "Carnell Flashgirl 10th", born Dec., 1947, bred by G. and R. Templeton of Carnell, Scotland.

Second highest price was paid for the year-old bull Rottenrow Templar, imported from Jacob Templeton, Rottenrow, Scotland; bought by V. M. Hawkins of Sharon, Mass., for $1,450.

IMPORTED CANADIAN HOLSTEINS

Remarkable milk production results from Canadian Holsteins are reflected in a story of the investment and experience of Edward Williams of Barry, Wales, as published in the British farm paper, The Farmer's Weekly.

The Willlams herd was improved somewhat by replacements up to 1946, and in the meantime received an accredited license. In that postwar period, Canadian Holsteins were being imported and it was from one of those consignments that Mr. Williams bought the foundation stock for his new herd. It meant paying more than the best commercial prices, but he decided a broad change of stock would be better in the long run than trying to clean up piecemeal. Mr. Williams was influenced, too, by the fact that Canadian dairy cattle have long been almost completely free of tuberculosis.

The Farm's Weekly continues: "He bought 20 heifers to replace his old stock. The effect was soon noticed. The first-year heifers gave a thousand gallon average on 365-day basis.

The official record (305 days) for the first year shows that the single cow in the herd gave 9,231 lbs., while 21 heifers averaged 9,043 lbs. This yield was the second highest in Glamorgan county, and was only 50 gallons below that of the leading herd. In the following year, the herd was again second of all breeds, with a cow average of 10,654 lbs., and a heifer average of 8,546 lbs. Last year the cows average 10,848 lbs. and the heifers 8,470 lbs.

There have been no reactors; nor have there been any udder or breeding troubles. From the foundation stock the herd has been built up to 64 head."

Good Holstein bulls have been used and Mr. Williams has some nice youngsters to show as a result. The first Holstein bull was Pomona Montco Korndyke from the Ontario herd of Bert Thornton & Son, Thamesford. The bull was out of a cow that was champion butterfat producer in Ontario with 1,242 lbs. fat and 26,173 lbs. of 4.75 milk. Twenty-four heifers have been sired by this bull, and they show great promise.

"Mr. Williams has since used Far Land Historian Paul (bred by Far Lands Farms, Picton, Ont.), now in the herd of Mr. E. de Grey Seaman. This bull's sire, whose 14 nearest dams average 2,000 gallons of 4% butterfat, was sold in Canada recently for $20,000."

Michigan and Ohio State Colleges are on their itinerary, also the Ohio State experimental station, the famous Calumet Farm which has bred: Armed, Citation, Ponder, Coaltown and other top money winning Thoroughbred horses; Louis Bromfield's Malabar Farm; Delaware county 4-H Club at Muncie Ind., University of Kentucky farm, Churchil Downs and other places of special interest.

INCOME SECOND TO WHEAT

Cash income from the sale of dairy products was greater than the revenue from any other agricultural product with the exception of wheat, Mr. L. W. Pearsall, director of marketing service, Federal Department of Agriculture, said at the recent dairy and live stock conference at OAC.

If the returns from the sale of dairy cattle for export and slaughter were included, the cash income exceeded that of wheat and approximated 25 per cent of the total farm earnings.

Ontario and Quebec produce about 66 per cent of the total milk output, which last year was more than 16½ billions pounds, or four per cent above the pre-war total.

Mr. Pearsall said that last year 2.2 million tons of western grain were delivered into eastern Canada under the freight assistance policy. This quantity represented about 40 per cent of the total feed used in the east last year.

These figures served to show the degree to which live stock in the east was now dependent on western feeds.

"There appears little prospect of any greater quantities of western grains being available to supplement eastern supplies. This means there is little chance of any marked increase in eastern hog production. If freight assistance were removed, a substantial decline in eastern live stock would appear inevitable."

NEW ENGLAND GRASS

Many of the dairy farms in Verman and New Hampshire show as high as 75% of their areas in grass, as recently observed by a group of touring Canadian agriculturists and farm editors.

On one farm, for a herd of 47 Guernseys (26 milking) enough forage was obtained from 47 acres of hay and pasture. In most cases excess grass was harvested and preserved as grass silage which was fed in dry weather in summer when pastures were relatively unproductive, and during winter to keep up milk production.

Grassland improvement was begun a few years ago in the New England States. No seed mixture is standard for the area. One excellent pasture consisted of ladino clover and orchard grass.

Most of the grasslands are the hay-pasture type, which are left in hay and pasture five years before replowing and re-seeding.

High yields are garnered from mixing such grasses as timothy, brome or orchard grass with legumes such as alfalfa ,red or ladino clover, depending on the mixture which has been found to be most productive. Good results are obtained when legumes are seeded in the fall and grasses in the spring. None of the farms that were visited used more than 15 lbs. of good seed to the acre.

Highly productive pastures were fertilized with as much as 1,000 lbs. of fertilizer an acre at the time of seeding. During the next five years superphosphate was applied alone or in mixture with potash, or a complete mixture depending on the seed used and needs of the soil as determined by soil tests.

Potential benefits from this program, which has been adopted by many farmers in Ontario, are: production of low cost yet highly nutritious feed, and a paying soil conservation program.

ENTERS THE GOLDENROD

Perhaps you caught the glint this week of freshly minted goldenrod by the roadside, a gleaming and unmistakable sign for all to read that summer has topped the crest of the year, and already has begun its descent of the slope leading into autumn.

The homely, round-faced sunflowers, the brown-eyed Susans and the wild snapdragons have received the goldenrod into their aureate company, reflecting as spectators of the season's tillage the yellows and browns of the harvest fields.

Forgotten clouds that wrested with the sun have left the evidence of their grateful handiwork in meadows lush as early June. Contrasts of gold and green are sharp and lively. There is no seared grass, no scorched earth in this year's design for August.

The green is more dominant and expansive than usual, and on that stage the goldenrod enters with gay greeting to his well washed fellows of the wayside and with gleaming bows of acknowledgment for the spreading backdrop of verdure.

The blue sailors (chickory tramps to the weed inspectors) offer him a cheery hailing, but somewhat weary of long blooming tarough those July weeks. Already they are beginning to lose their buttons that were stamped out of the stuff of the sky Soon the blue sailors will be gone, replaced by the purple of the late daisies in autumnal harmony of beauty with the goldenrod.

The year is changing its vesture these sunnier August days, and also its sounds. Birds are busy with their broods now grown out of their fledgling uncertainty of wing, but the crickets sing at night of the waning summer.

BACON EXPORTS DROP

For 80 years Canada has been exporting bacon and during the period from 1940-49, a total of approximately 4 million pounds was exported, this figure exceeding the exports for the previous 40 years, according to figures released by Marketing Service, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. During the past four years exports have dropped from 273 million pounds in 1946, to an estimated 60 million this year.

BIG BUSINESS IN CO-OPS

Co-operative business in Canada is getting bigger with the years along with an increased membership in co-operative organizations. Total business last year exceeded a record one billion dollars, an increase of 200 million dollars over 1948, with membership up 60,668.

GRASSLAND IN EUROPE

International experts met last month in Paris to study methods of improving grasslands on the continent. The conference was called to compare and discuss experiments which have been conducted in the last few years.

HYBRID CORN IN FRANCE

Hybrid corn will be used to increase the domestic production of this crop in France, where less than 50 per cent of the consumption is home grown. American hybrids will be used at the outset, and experiments are under way to determine the varieties most suitable for the various zones under consideration.

BEEF TO USA

Uncle Sam has bought the equivalent of 1,437,00 head of Canadian cattle in the two years since export restrictions were lifted at the border. Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, reports that 990,000 head were exported and 175 million pounds of dressed beef. Meanwhile the cattle population in this country has declined from the 1945 peak of 10.8 million to 9.1 million in 1949.

This marketing diversion of so many Canadian cattle offers an explanation of the high cost of steaks and beef stews in the restaurants and in the meat stores. There are other factors, but the main cause is reflected in the export volume.

QUIET INTERLUDE — Bobby Lou, a Belgian colt in the stable of Rudolph Freitag of Alameda, Sask., lies in luxury at the Regina Fair Grounds while Elmer, a black cocker pup, stops to pass the time of day. The rush and bustle of the exhibition, with its accompanying noises, mean little to these two.

IN THE MOVIES—August brings the Praying Mantis to adult size. He is one of the helpful insects. Harmless to vegetation, it feeds on garden pests. The Mantis is shown here in the Canada Carries On film "Life Under a Leaf," now appearing in Canadian theatres. Some persons unacquainted with him bring captive Mantis to the Examiner for identification. So, here he is, and he should be left in the garden.

Will Standardize Many Sizes In Garment Lines

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

People take back a lot of the things that they buy in stores, and this is a headache to the storekeepers.

The "whims" of women-buyers are only a small part of the trouble; and apparently not much of the fault lies with the storekeeper himself. It goes further back.

It is, in major degree, a matter of size labels which don't mean what they say. A half-dozen size in dresses, for instance, may in fact be six different sizes.

So the woman who orders by size, as is the case certainly in mail orders, often gets something that doesn't fit and she sends it back.

Several things are being done to solve the problem. Canadian knit-goods manufacturers have worked for a year on standardization of sizes of undergarments —men, women and children—and this fall, for the first time, you may order an undergarment by size with confidence, once you know your proper size.

Applied To Other Lines

This will be applied increasingly to other lines, for the Canadian Retail Federation has set up a standards committee which aims at voluntary agreements on sizes.

One might ask why this matter hasn't been straightened out before. There is, for one thing, a problem of expense, as standardization will mean that many manufacturers will have to buy certain new or different equipment. And, strangely enough, neither storekeepers nor customers have protested as much as might have been expected.

After the size problem has been cleared up, there will still remain a fair volume of "take-backs" but this is regarded as part of selling.

Can't Decide

A woman may, for instance, have decided on a certain style of dress. But she is not sure which color looks best. So she takes home two dresses, in different colors, one of which is returned. Probably storekeepers don't even want to cure that.

Then there's the rush of returns at Christmas and other gift occasions, and these are likely to remain.

One leading Canadian store reports that in one department in one branch, returns were 60 per cent of sales.

Crack South Korean Regiment Disproves Claims Of Inefficiency

Special to The Examiner

WITH THE SOUTH KOREAN ARMY—One South Korean regiment, about three battalions strong, is so good in battle that American units in the neighborhood are vying with each other to have it attached to them. Led by a twenty - six - year - old colonel, it has amply disproved earlier stories about the absence of South Korean fighting efficiency. Its story is important because it shows what South Korean troops have been up against since the invasion began June 25th and what they have been doing.

On the outbreak of the war the regiment was hit by a full Communist division on the lonely peninsula. After 48 hours of stiff resistance in which it lost one-third of its complement—more than a thousand casualties—it was ordered to get out as best it could by whatever boats were available and take its remnants further south. Two thousand men got back, carrying what weapons they could. They regrouped in the centre of South Korea with other units retreating in the neighborhood of the town of Chungju, only to be struck again by a regiment of the Communist 15th Division.

Fought Back

This time, however, they fought back with such spirit that they put the Communists to flight and captured most of their arms. Since that success the regiment has been thrown about from one sagging sector to another, to fill holes or bolster units which because of limited firepower or manpower have been unable to hold the line. Today it is attached to an American division and is holding vitally important sectors of the Naktong River front.

First raised late in 1948, the regiment was highly trained and gained valuable fighting experience against Communist guerrilla bands in the mountains around Taegu before the North Koreans invaded.

The young colonel who commands it— his name is Kim Hi Jum—received his military training from the American Military advisory group in Korea. Under his leadership, and mindful of past victories, the regiment has an unusual degree of esprit de corps.

Same Ration

But in general these troops do not differ from any other South Korean unit. Men get the same daily ration of three balls of rice wrapped in seaweed (seaweed is an important item in Japanese and Korean Cuisine). Their pay is three hundred won a month—about one sixth of one American dollar. They ask very little of their American comrades in the division. I arrived at their headquarters in the company of two ambulances which the division HQ was giving them. The regimental Medical Officer could not believe that these ambulances were really for his men. "Do you mean we can use these to carry our own wounded?" he asked incredulously. When told that not only were they for his regiment but that also his South Koreans would be treated at the American Field Hospital he nearly wept.

"We will hold this line," he said. Then he turned quickly into his "field hospital"—a shabby mud hut where patients lay on the ground without even blankets.

Two Labor Groups Attack Union Reds

OTTAWA, Aug. 11 (CP)—The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the Canadian Congress of Labor, representing about 900,000 workers Thursday looses a joint attack on union Communists attempting to undermine United Nations police action in Korea.

Calling for full support for U.N. and Canadian measures on Korea, they denounced Communists in unions for trying to sow confusion among union members to help Russia.

The unusual action of a joint statement by the rival congresses was taken by TLC president Percy R. Bengough and CCL president A. R. Mosher. Only a few times previously have the congresses taken common action in this way.

Manslaughter Charge

MILTON, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Lorne Hawes, 21, of Oakville, was charged with manslaughter Tuesday night following an autopsy on the body of Gordon Titus, 36. Charges of creating a disturbance were laid against three other Oakville men—Leonard Arnold, 22, James Summerhayes, 19, and Douglas Knight, 22. Titus died from a brain hemorrhage after a fight in a Milton restaurant Wednesday.

Movie Column

Fred Astaire Refuses Film Biography

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 11 (AP) When I saw Fred Astaire perform a movie dance number that would make an Olympic star wheeze I asked him how he does it.

He shrugged. "A dance like that can be pretty tiring. But once you get into it, you forget yourself and just dance. It's fun."

Fred, who is about at the half-century mark, doesn't seen weary after three pictures in a row. But he'll take a rest after he finishes "Royal Wedding" and follow his race horses until early 1951, when he'll do "Belle of New York" with Vera-Ellen.

"Royal Wedding" somewhat resembles his own career. It concerns a brother-sister dance team. They go to London and the sister falls in love with a Briton. But Fred said that is as close as the movies will ever come to his life story. He continues to nix a film biography.

"I think most musical biographies are ridiculous," he said. "It would be awful to do your own life story. In the first place, it would sound like bragging and saying 'this is what I accomplished.' And somewhere along the line, you would have to fictionize, and that would be terrible.

"I have a stock answer for anyone who suggests I do 'The Astaire Story'—no picture could have so many race track scenes."

Capsule Review

"Fancy Pants" is another merry romp for Mr. Robert Hope, as he is billed in the picture. Nothing has been spared for the sake of laughs and it is one of his better efforts. The plot is based on "Ruggles of Red Gap," although the resemblance is hard to notice. Posing as a Briton, Hope goes west as butler for a frontier family. It's gag upon gag with generally good results. Lucille Ball is co-star in this raucous affair.

CANADA'S NEW JET — The RCAF F-86 Sabre is shown at Dorval Airport, near Montreal, shortly after it was put through a test flight before Defence Minister Claxton and other Commonwealth air experts. A similar jet aircraft, manufactured in the United States, holds the world's speed record of 670 miles an hour. Production of these aircraft in a Montreal plant is being speeded up to keep pace with the expanding RCAF.

Plan To Hide In Mountains If Norway Goes To War

By ELIZABETH KITSON

OSLO, Aug. 11 —(Reuters)— A religious sect in southwest Norway is convinced that war is coming again to Norway in the near future and is making preparations accordingly.

Sect members have stored large quantities of food in the mountains above the Sirdal valley.

When the time is at hand, they will retreat into the mountains because it is written in the Bible: "Escape to the mountains, lest thou be consumed."

The sect, known as Manasseh and reported to have several hundred members in southwestern Norway, was formed in 1844 by William Muller.

In Sweden, the same sect goes under the name of Ephraim, another Biblical character, related to Manasseh.

Little is known about the sect. The local police stumbled unawares upon their "evacuation" plans. Reports of abnormally large stores of rationed foods led the police to raid some mountain farms near Sirdal. They found large quantities of food of all kinds, much of it still rationed. There also were considerable quantities of such unrationed goods as dried peas, tinned fish and other tinned food.

Inquiries have revealed that the food constitutes emergency rations for the men of Manasseh who intended to obey the injunction of the Bible and flee into the high mountains in time of destruction.

The Manasseh sect expects to live to see the Millenium—"if only our faith is strong enough," a member explained. "First there will be the destruction, then the time of the great reckoning, and then the Millenium."

This member was not sure whether women and children would be allowed to take part in the escape. He personally hoped to take his wife and five children but he also had an Old Testament quotation to cover the possibility of being parted from them: "There shall be enmity between tribe and house."

Need Selection Officers

TORONTO, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Nearly 80 recruits for Canada's new Special Service Brigade left Toronto Thursday night for Petawawa military camp. They were the first of some 1,226 Toronto volunteers to be enlisted. Meanwhile, Central Command headquarters sent out an urgent call for 15 personnel selection officers to handle the flow of applicants. Command spokesmen said the men would be needed for at least the next three weeks or month.

22,000 US Women Put On Uniform Since Korea Crisis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11—With the Korean crisis 22,000 American service-women have put on uniform, backed by an estimated 25,000 in the reserves. Of these 7,000 are nurses.

When volunteers were called no distinction in sex was made by the armed forces. A woman had only to meet the requirements.

The Women's Army Corps (WAC), which reached a peak wartime strength of 100,000, has more than 7,000 women in army posts throughout the world. These girls release about seven infantry battalions for combat duty.

In the Women's Air Force (WAF), there are 4,000 in uniform with about 200 of these overseas. There is also an estimated 3,500 WAF reservists. No WAF's are assigned to flight duty and it is not expected that the Airforce will do so.

An active strength of 3,400 is claimed by the Navy's Waves. Of these about 100 are overseas.

More than 4,000 civilian workers are members of the Navy's organized reserve. With the Korean invasion the marines have nearly 600 women in their ranks, most of them in Washington.

The Coast Guard has no Spars on active duty but about 250 in its reserve.

Falls' Visitors Show Increase Over Last Year

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Visitors to this world-famous scenic resort may establish a record this year if the influx of travellers continues at the pace of the last three months.

In June, automatic automobile, bus counting devices installed in Queen Victoria Park, central area of the 35-mile-long Niagara Parks System, recorded 223,948 automobiles entering the park. July traffic averaged close to 12,000 a day. This is considerably higher than 1949, despite prolonged cool, wet weather.

Since the counting devices were installed a year ago, the largest single 24-hour period was the Sunday preceding Labor Day last year, when 29,015 vehicles were registered.

Show Increase

Douglas Allan, supervisor of the Ontario Department of Travel and Publicity, said visitors registering during June at the department's information booth numbered 14,836, an increase over 1949. In July, the daily registration was estimated to be double the June figure.

The Falls continue to attract visitors from all parts of the world. Aside from representatives of most of the 48 States, a total of 37 countries were represented by June visitors. Among them were Germany, Japan, Finland, China, Alaska, Malta, Egypt and Switzerland.

Girl Seeking Husband Does Well To Leave Home Town

DEAR MISS DIX: I think you are fine and noble to stand up for us old maids. Do you know what it means to be lonely? Do you know what it means to be always on the outside looking in? Do you know what it means to be looked down on by your family because you haven't married, and have your mother prefer your sisters because they have husbands?

Dorothy Dix

I am 28, a normal girl, with my share of good looks and sex appeal, but this life is making me bitter and resentful. I have a good job and make a good salary, but I would be willing to give it up and scrub floors and wear hand-me-downs for the man I loved. Failing to find him, shall I marry the first man who asks me? Or what?

M. E. E.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Any woman who has reached the age of 28 and who finds herself an unappropriated blessing at home does well to shake the home-town dust off her feet and go far afield. Many a girl who has good looks and intelligence, is passed over by the men in her community just because they have looked at her so long they no longer see her. She is just Mary or Sally or Jane with whom they went to school and who is of no more heart interest to them than their sisters.

Men Interested in Stranger

You will have observed, when a strange girl comes to town, how all the boys flock around her. Take a tip and be a stranger yourself. Go somewhere where the men will view you with appraising eyes because they have never seen you before and hence can see how well you stack up. Go where your old bag of tricks will all be new stunts and the chances are ten to one that you will make a good catch. It is not without reason that so many girls marry away from home.

In your particular case I especially advise an emigration to foreign parts, because your family has got on your nerves and you have got green with jealousy over your sisters having been chosen while you were left. When such a situation arises, the only decent solution of it is for the family to part. Together they fight like cats and dogs and can see nothing but one another's faults. Separated, they are filled with affection for each other and perceive each other's good points.

But, my dear girl, in going on the orgy of self-pity in which you are indulging, you have lost all sight of proportion. What makes you, in the first place, consider yourself a hopeless old maid at 28? Why, that is a women's most attractive age and the one in which she is most likely to make a good marriage, if she doesn't get in a panic and lose her head and grab the first man she can get her hand on for fear she won't get one at all.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a girl of 17. How can I tell absolutely and without fail when I have fallen in love and when a boy is in love with me? I don't want to make any mistake. I want to be sure of love when I find it.

NORMA

ANSWER: Ah, Norma, nobody in the world is wise enough to tell real love from spurious love at sight. For love comes in so many guises, it bears itself so honestly and speaks with such sincerity of tone that it deceives even the most cautious and suspicious, and we never know when we open the doors of our hearts to rit to enter whether we are entertaining an angel who will bless us with its presence or a devil who will destroy us.

Practically every man and woman who marry are wildly in love at the time and think they cannot live without each other, yet look how often they were mistaken in their sentiments and have come actually to hate each other.

The young are particularly apt to make the mistake of thinking they are in love when they are not, because they are so sloshing over with sentiment, and so in love with love that they can throw the beautiful cloak of their romance over any member of the opposite sex who comes along.

So watch your step. Check and double check your emotions when your heart begins to go pit-a-pat, but no matter how careful you are, or how much you vivisect your thrills, you will never be able to tell beforehand whether what you are experiencing is a passing fancy or the grand passion. At the last you will have to trust to luck.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am very much in love with a man and anxious to marry him, but he has no work and makes no effort to get any, so we must wait. His parents are poor, but they are glad to support him. He says he adores me and he is good and kind and a wonderful companion and he wants to marry me, but he does not try to find work. I love him so, but am I being a fool to wait until he gets ready to marry me?

ANNE

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Your Weary Willy certainly seems a poor prospect and a doubtful one as a husband. Evidently he loves his ease better than he loves you, or else he would hustle out and get a job. The real and final test of love, the one that is strong enough to draw money on at the bank, is not the vows of devotion that a man swears to a woman, nor even his being a pleasant and gallant companion, it is his willingness to work for her, his willingness to take the burden of her support on his shoulders.

What's Right?

You and another person are reading in the same room.

WRONG: Whenever you find something you want to share, read the passage aloud.

RIGHT: Realize that the other person probably wants to concentrate on what he is reading and save the bits you want to read aloud until some other time.

Knit Suits Lose Sat-in Look

By GAILE DUGAS

NEW YORK —(NEA)— A few short years ago, knitted suits and dresses were seen chiefly on the ladies in the late Helen Hokinson's cartoons. When a woman wearing a knitted suit stood up, she looked as if she were still sitting down. All that is changed. Autumn's knitted suits hold the line through new knitting techniques. And they are smartly styled.

A simple knitted tailleur (right) is hand-loomed in wool boucle by Lass O'Scotland and given hand-finished details. Black passementerie ribbon, contrast for the toast shade of the suit, outlines the single-breasted jacket, the cuffs and the four pockets. The skirt is ribbed and very slim.

A second suit (above) has added jacket interest in its oversize pocket flaps. Knitted in a beige nubby yarn, it's as well-tailored as any good suit in wool fabric. Single-breasted, is has an open V neckline and small standing collar. The skirt has wide ribbing but a narrow look.

The third in this trio is a sheath-like dress in soft blue. Rows of stitchwork are set into the easy dolman sleeves and used in horizontal bands on the skirt. The high, round neckline is the perfect foil for jewelry touches.

ROWS OF STITCHWORK are set into dolman sleeves and skirt of this hand-loomed knitted dress. Skirt is slim and tapering.

BLACK passementerie ribbon is used to outline single-breasted jacket, cuffs and pockets of this simple knitted tailleur.

Capes and Muffs Featuring British Autumn Fashions

LONDON —(Reuters)— Slender, Patrician lines dominate London's autumn and winter styles, giving a most attractive general silhouette.

Curves are moulded, shoulders are natural or rounded, and waists well-defined.

This soft and feminine outline—with such womanly adjuncts as capes and muffs—is enhanced by materials which have at last overcome wartime stingency. There are deep-pile wools, authentic Scots plaids and velours for day wear, rich brocades, faille and tulle for evenings, with a touch of velvet for all occasions.

Contrasting fabrics are used in abundance. Perhaps first in popularity are the reversible fabrics woven together. These double-sided wool weaves supply the maximum of warmth with the minimum of weight.

Skirts Shorter

Skirts are still growing shorter. Lengths average 14 to 15 inches from the floor.

Capes have reappeared and several London houses are featuring them for both day and evening wear. Deep-pile wool and velour are used for day, the capes falling in straight and simple lines from the shoulders.

Velvet and a shiny facecloth (the old-time broadcloth) are used for evening capes and coats.

One of these, with such loose sleeves that it looked like a cape, was made from the new reversible velvet, and had a distinctly Victorian flavor. A bold braid design was superimposed, the braid in turn outlined in cut steel and gun-metal sequins.

With an eye on the American market, the British couturiers have increased their production of simple day dresses. And, taking a leaf out of the Parisian book, many of these little dresses are carried out in black. They are shown in both crepe and wool, cut on extremely simple lines.

Town Coats in Velvet

Town coats for autumn and winter are largely in velvet. They are built on close-fitting lines, either pinched in at the natural waist line or tapering from neck to hem in a princess silhouette. Collars are small.

Jackets take the limelight in the British suit picture. Skirts are simple, tapering to the hem without pleats or slits, which the designers regard as unnecessary with the shorter skirts.

Cocktail suits follow the trend of the tailor-mades. The skirts still slim, preserve the arrow front look, with pleats or slight flares concentrated in the back. Revers and pockets are all-important.

One of the best winter suits was shown by Mattli. It was fashioned from Otterburn tweed with a soft beaver collar framing the face, and a box-pleated basque held snugly at the natural waist line by a dark brown leather belt fastened with a bronze carved buckle. The skirt, with darted top, had three matching bronze buttons centre front.

Cat's Colors

One of the most unusual and striking evening dresses was produced by Norman Hartnell, in colors reminiscent of a Siamese cat. The blue satin of the bodice and skirt—the glorious blue of the cat's eyes — shimmered through a cloud of tulle in shades ranging from pale cream to deep brown.

While black is predominant for all occasions, there are many autumn tints, ranging through brick and orange to rust, red rust andginger. Greens, next in popularity, are sombre and muted. Little brown is used. For evening there is white, grey, lilac and a golden copper.

Rural Colleges For Women Open In Madras

MADRAS, India — (CP) — The recent establishment of three rural colleges for women in Madras marked another feather in the cap of the state's Department of Women's Welfare. These colleges provide two years' training designed specially for village women, to equip them for leading roles in community affairs.

Such educational institutions and the development of literary classes are the principal activities of the department. Other projects include community centres, service homes for widows, orphans and paupers, and the training of welfare workers.

Community centres have been established both in urban and rural areas. They instruct women in knitting, needlework spinning and weaving and train them to make useful household articles. Attendance is increasing daily and 14 new centres have been opened in recent months.

One feature of the community centre's activities is the house-to-house visit of a resident welfare worker, trained in one of the departmental schools. The workers provide medical aid, secure employment when needed and teach elementary home economics to housewives.

Courses given these welfare workers include cooking, nutrition, first aid and home decoration.

Blame U.S. Demand for Beef For Higher Meat Prices

By KAY REX.

OTTAWA, Aug. 11 (CP). — It may seem cold comfort to the housewife on a slim food budget, but the Canadian Association of Consumers has uncovered a few explanations why meat—and particularly beef—has become a rich man's dish.

Complaints about meat costs from women across Canada moved the 12,000-member association to investigate the situation and ask the meat boys themselves for an explanation.

The Industrial and Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers blames heavy consumer demand.

United States consumers have been prepared to pay prices for beef and lamb which have forced Canadian levels upwards. Canadian consumption has been maintained in spite of increasing prices.

The council also claims that "insufficient beef stocks to take care of the seasonal demand for processed meats have resulted in a higher level of prices for all classes of cattle. There is nothing unusual in the price situation for meat that is not attributable to the normal reaction of the law of supply and demand."

Blame U. S. Demand

The Canadian Federation of Agriculture says the high price of beef is "due entirely to a very abnormal demand from the U. S. for both beef cattle and dressed beef, because of the failure of the U. S. cattle population to keep pace with the growing demand for beef products."

The Consumers' Association quotes a statement from a retail Merchants' Association bulletin which claims that, since the lifting of the embargo on beef imports to the U.S. two years ago, there has been an increasing volume of best quality cattle and calves leaving the Canadian market.

Canadian herds are yielding a progressively smaller percentage of good grade cattle, leaving a greater volume of poorer quality for home consumption.

The bulletin continues: "Exports from Canada provide our farmers with much better prices than would otherwise prevail for beef cattle. They also provide Canada with extra income in American dollars, but these advantages are obtained at the expense of the consumers, who, as a result of cattle exports are required to pay much higher prices than otherwise would be the case."

Not Responsible

The consumers' association quotes the Canadian Federation of Agriculture as saying that while Canadian beef producers benefit from this temporary high price level they are not responsible for it, any more than they were responsible for the low levels during the thirties.

"Nor can the Canadian government be expected to close off the U.S. market for Canadian beef, in view of the vital need for Canada to build up its U. S. dollar balances. Export of beef cattle and beef is one of the really important mediums by which Canada can accomplish this."

And there you have it, girls—the reason why that Sunday roast has become almost as much of a delicacy as caviar.

Planes Scoring Impressive Damage Tolls

TOKYO, Aug. 11—(AP)—The United States Seventh Fleet reported today that navy and marine planes racked up impressive damage tolls against North Korean communications, troops and military installations in two days of hard-hitting attacks.

A summary of operations, released by Vice-Admiral Arthur D. Struble, said factories and warehouses in the Inchon (Seoul's port) area of South Korea on the Yellow Sea bore the brunt of the strikes. Metal works factories, warehouses and transportation assembly plants there were hit with 500 and 1,000-pound bombs.

Other navy planes ranged northward to the Waegwan area of the central front on ground troops support missions. Near the town of Yosu, an attacking pilot bowled a bomb into a railroad tunnel where a North Korean train had stopped to avoid bombardment.

Get Direct Hit

The carrier-based naval fliers ranged as far north as Seoul, fallen capital of the South Korean Republic. A direct hit was scored on a bridge there with a 1,000-pound bomb.

Marines flying from aircraft carriers made ground-support missions where American troops and army units battled around Chinju. Pilots reported a heavy toll of Communist infantry forces and installations.

As the navy flying power was directed at the Reds, air force officials issued further reports on B-29 strikes Wednesday in North Korea. They said the big bombers left fires burning that sent flames up more than 3,000 feet at Wonsan, 80 miles north of the 38th parallel.

The target there was the Chosen (Korean) Oil Refinery, a prime producer of petroleum products neeeded by the Communist war machine.

Bus Operators Defy Seizure

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 11—(AP)—Some streetcar and bus operators defied state seizure of the St. Louis transit system and disrupted public transportation here early today.

Groups waited in vain for buses at some corners.

Fifty-six of the city's street car and bus lines were operating and 11 bus lines were out of service.

Service during the early morning hours was "only about 50 per cent of normal," the St. Louis Public Service Company reported.

Union leaders were trying to get all the men back to work.

There was no violence, but union leaders reported "some of our men are being intimidated by a wildcat element."

The transit system was seized Thursday night by Governor Forrest Smith five minutes before a midnight deadline set for a shutdown by the Electrical Railway and Motor Coach Employees' Division 788 (AFL).

The transportation dispute arose over the company's rejection of a retroactive wage recomendation of a public panel hearing. The panel said the company should grant a seven-cent hourly increase, retroactive to last Jan. 1.

Sailors are expected from Sturgeon and Stony lakes to compete against the Chemong lake boatmen.

The races will be run from in front of Gordon S. Matthews' cottage. There will be a 14-foot dinghy race, an open race and the Kawartha Challenge Cup 14-foot dinghy event.

Wednesday the Chemong junior regatta will be held in which the small fry will compete in all kinds of water sports.

Military To Use 5% Of Steel Output In U.S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (AP) —United States military leaders expect that even with the new rearmament program the "take" of steel for arms production will be no more than five or six per cent of the country's total output. The military's slice of steel production now is about four per cent.

A munitions board official used this figure today to underline his expressed belief it will be possible to produce the war weapons asked for in President Truman's $10,500,000,000 supplemental military request to Congress without any serious blow to the civilian economy.

The estimate on steel requirements represents the first survey made by the munitions board of probable requirements under the rearmament program.

The board also expects it will be able to carry on the Korean war and go ahead with the rearmament program without digging into the country's stockpile strategic materials, which the munitions board has been building up for several years.

Stockpile Untouched

The ammunition being sent to the Korean front is coming either from available equipment or being turned out in new production an example is the 3.5-inch Bazooka)—but none of the raw material for their manufacture comes from the strategic stockpile.

Under the storing-for-a-rainy-day program, the military is putting away the things which it thinks might be scarce should an all-out global war come.

Currently, there are 71 items on the list—things such as the basic metals tin, tungsten, copper, manganese, chrome; minerals such as asbestos, mica and talc; rubber and rope fibre; drugs and oils.

In making surveys and carrying on negotiations, Hubert Howard, chairman of the munitions board, has recently made tours to Europe and Canada.

He returned last Wednesday from talks in Ottawa with Canadian officials. The talks there were understood to have involved plans for purchasing parts of equipment, but not any buying of large amounts of complete items or weapons.

The munitions board is finding it hard to convince some business men that the second world war days of all-out mobilization of industry and mountains of contracts are not back, that this is still a limited mobilization.

Ford Plant Rejects Renegotiation Talks

DETROIT, Aug. 11 (CP)—Ford Motor Company Thursday rejected a request for re-negotiation of wages in its River Rouge plant. The request was made by Local 600 United Automobile Workers (CIO).

The company told the local in a letter that under the present contract wage talks should not begin until after Jan. 1, 1951.

The letter also said the current contract with the UAW is country wide, covering employees in nearly 50 plants. Any requests for negotiations should come from the UAW International officers, and not from a single local.

Carl Stellato, president of Local 600, asked a review of wages because recent UAW settlements with General Motors and the Chrysler Corporation gave higher wages than the Ford agreement, signed earlier.

Confiscate Property Of Nazi General Graf

MUNICH, Aug. 11. (Reuters)—A denazification court today confiscated the property of the late Ulrich Graf, Nazi SS general who once saved Hitler's life.

The judge commented that if Graf had "displayed less valor he might have spared the German people a great deal of misery."

Graf, who died last March, was a personal friend of Hitler and a permanent bodyguard to him. He held Nazi party membership card No. 8.

He claimed that he marched beside Hitler in the Munich Putsch in November, 1933, and saved Hitler's life by throwing himself before the fuehrer, shielding him from gunfire in a street fight.

TRIESTE, Aug. 11 (Reuters)—Hundreds of little family groups, separated only by the international boundary, greeted one another Thursday for the first time in more than five years. During that time Yugoslav frontier guards have maintained a strict guard of "no man's land" territory on their side, preventing access to the boundary.

The opening program started at 11 a.m. with the Hon. Harold Scott, Minister of the Department of Lands and Forests as the special speaker and Reeve T. C. Graham as master of ceremonies.

After his opening remarks, the keys to the various offices in the building were handed over to Reeve Graham by the builder. The keys to the individual offices were presented to those concerned by Frank S. Follwell, Federal Member of Parliament for South Hastings.

The Belleville Band led the parade to the Tweed Memorial Park, where the service was held. The Legion ritual was conducted by Frank Threadgold, of Whitby, district commander, and Rev. F. F. Downing, Chaplain of the Tweed Legion Branch, conducted the service.

Chinese Reds Claim Control Of 75 Islands

HONG KONG, Aug. 11. (AP)—Chinese Communists said today they control all 75 islands of the Wanshan group, spread from Hong Kong to Portuguese Macao off the estuary of the Pearl River.

The official Chinese Communist news agency reported the last two of the islands were captured from Chinese Nationalists Aug. 3 and 4. The agency said 300 Nationalist troops were killed, 100 taken prisoner. The report added:

"Now the blockade of the Pearl River has been completely broken and secret agents and local bandits in Kwangtung and Kwangsi (provinces of southeastern China) have lost their supply base."

Car Shipments Show Increase

OTTAWA, Aug. 11 CP) — If you still can't get that new car, it isn't because automobile manufacturers aren't trying.

Factory shipments of Canadian-made motor vehicles, which have climbed at a rapid rate in recent months, took another sharp jump in June to a total of 41,383, the Bureau of Statistics reported Thursday.

This was the second highest monthly figure on record and compared with 35,281 units in May, 30,096 in June last year and the record monthly total of 41,901 units in April, 1929.

The June figure raised the aggregate for the first six months of this year to 191,765, the largest half-yearly total in the history of the industry. The previous half-yearly peak was 188,361 units in 1929.

But all those cars delivered from the factories in June weren't sold in Canada. A total of 38,092 were shipped for sale in this country that month and 176,500 in the half-yearly period, compared with 27,183 in June last year and 125,262 in June this year against 2,913 and in the six months totalled 15,265 compared with 14853.

New Catholic Book Of Psalms Uses 20th Century English

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (AP). —The new Roman Catholic version of the book of psalms is being published this week.

This is part of a project started in 1943 by U.S. Catholic bishops to obtain an English translation of the Old Testament that might be more readable than the Douay version, that dates back to the 17th century.

Thirty translators are at work. The psalms were translated from Hebrew material dating back to about 200 B.C. The last of the translations is expected to be completed in 1955.

This will be the first time Catholic have translated the whole of the Old Testament from the original scriptural languages into English.

The Douay version is from the Latin Vulgate, a translation of the fourth century, and was published at Douai, France, in 1609-10.

In the new book of psalms the "thees" and "thous" of the 17th century now are "you"; "hath" is "has." The psalms are printed in poetic format, as modern poetry usually is, instead of in columns of type unbroken except for verse numbers.

In 1943, Pope Pius XII told Catholic scholars the original Hebrew text had more authority and greater weight than any translation.

Oshawa Railw'y Union Threatening Strike

OSHAWA, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Union officials said Thursday night that 80 employees of the Oshawa Railway Company will strike Aug. 22 if their demands for contract changes are not met.

The union seeks a 40-hour week with no change in take-home pay, increases of eight cents an hour for bus drivers and seven cents for other workers.

Non - operating unions have scheduled a strike against the railways on the same date but there is no connection between the two proposed strikes.

Claxton Enjoys His Ride In Jet Plane

TORONTO, Aug. 11.—Defense Minister Brooke Claxton, aged 52, wriggled his way into Canada's new all-weather jet fighter, the CF-100 Canuck, in Ottawa at 3:10 p.m. Thursday. Thirty-two minutes later he was standing on the tarmac at Malton airport.

"It was a grand trip, lots of fun," he said, "but I had a terrible time getting in and out of the plane. I had one of those new parachutes on—the kind that sticks out in front—and I found it difficult to move around."

Mr. Claxton, grinning, said he would like to make many trips in jet aircraft. "I'd only been up in one jet before," he explained. "That was in an American P-80 during Operation Sweetbriar in February. I liked that spin, too."

Have Lots More

The defense minister, first top-ranking government official to fly in the 600-mile-an-hour plane, said the Canuck was the first of a large order by the government from Avro Canada. 'But we'll have more, lots more," he asserted.

At the controls of the plane was Bill Waterton, a Camrose, Alta., test pilot for the plane's producers. "I admire these jet pilots," said Mr. Claxton. "They really know their stuff. Until today I didn't realize Toronto and Ottawa were so close. I timed the trip with my own watch. From runway to runway it was only 32 minutes."

Immediately after landing, Mr. Claxton left the airport to make a hurried inspection of Toronto's Chorley Park recruiting centre, where he shook hands with and congratulated Gordon Johnston, 18 9 Nellis Ave., first recruit accepted by the Canadian Army for the Korean Brigade.

Obviously satisfied with the hum of activity at Canada's largest recruiting centre, Mr. Claxton was then rushed back to Malton. "I'm flying back to Ottawa," he said, "but not in a jet. It will take more than 32 minutes. Coming down our top speed was 575 mph. And that was only with 2-3 throttle."

New Folder Tells U.S. And Canada About Kawarthas

A new type of folder publicising the Kawarthas has been published by the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce. Off the press this folder titled "Call of the Kawarthas" has been sent to chambers of commerce, automobile clubs, railway ticket agencies all over Canada and the United States. The folder has also been sent to all ports of entry into Canada and to the Federal Government.

Attractively made up, the folder contains pictures taken in Peterborough and the surrounding districts. It also contains information regarding all tourist lodges and resorts registered with the Chamber of Commerce.

Included in the folder is a map of the Kawartha District which was financed by the retail merchants of the city as their contribution for publicizing this district.

Four years ago a folder was put out by the Chamber of Commerce, but this year's folder is a great improvement. According to Jim Frazer, manager of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, this folder is just the beginning of a stepped up campaign to put Peterborough and the Kawartha Lake District before the eyes of all tourists.

U.S. FORCES HOLDING POHANG AIRFIELD

Joint Army Approved By Assembly

No Practical Results Expected Soon; Serves As Warning

STRASBOURG, France, Aug. 12 — (AP) — Winston Churchill, backed by the European Consultative Assembly, urged West Europe's governments Friday to unite their armed forces for protection against Russian aggression.

Britain's wartime prime minister said such a force should be under the control of a single defence minister, but said he himself was not a candidate for the position.

The Assembly adopted Churchill's motion to set up the unified force 89 to 5 with 27 abstentions, but its action will have no immediate practical results. The group is a completely-unofficial parliament with no power to create a European army or defence ministry.

Churchill said his motion was intended as "warning and guidance" for the western world.

To back up the army of United Europe large armed forces should be sent to the continent from Britain and the United States.

Would Welcome Germans

Although he did not mention German troops in his speech, Churchill said afterwards he would be delighted to have them take part in the organization.

He scoffed at reports that rearming Germany would precipitate an immediate Russian attack:

"Believe me," he declared, "the long calculated designs of the Soviet government will not be timed or deflected by events of this order."

Churchill said that during the two years he estimated it would take to build up the European army "we are still under the shield of the atomic bomb, possessed in formidable quantities by the United States alone. In my opinion we have a breathing space."

WITH YANKS RIDING HERD on them from a jeep, North Korean prisoners—including juveniles — shuffle to stockade. They were taken in Naktong River battle.

US troops have driven Red defenders off the ridge guarding Chinju, breaking off threatening enemy push.

Police Hunt Teacher, Feared Slain

Find Bloody Car In Ravine, Man Missing Week

TORONTO, Aug. 12 (CP)—A missing Toronto high school teacher was hunted today by squads of city and Provincial police combing the area between Toronto and Lake Simcoe, 65 miles to the north.

They feared that 38-year-old Alfred P. A. Greene was the victim of foul play. His blood-spattered automobile was found abandoned early Wednesday in east-central Rosedale ravine.

That is the only trace found of Greene since he left his summer home at Atherley, a Lake Simcoe village, last Saturday. He was bound for Toronto and was believed carrying about $200 cash.

Fuel was added to the foul play theory by the discovery of Greene's empty wallet in the front seat of his car. A pair of broken spectacles lay nearby and a haversack, its contents strewn about, was in the back seat.

Suhpect Hitch-hiker

Police believe Greene may have picked up a hitch-hiker on his way to Toronto and was robbed. They are searching highways on the route in case his body was ditched there. A search of Green's Toronto home gave no indication that he had returned, and no trace was found of the missing man in the ravine near his car.

Provincial police, attempting to inform Mrs. Greene of her husband's disappearance, could not locate her at first. She was reported Friday night to be staying with friends at Atherley. Her two children were with her.

Greene is a lecturer in public speaking at Toronto's Danforth technical school. He is a graduate of the University of Toronto, and taught in Cornwall for some time after his graduation.

Were They Surprised

AT A SOUTH KOREAN PORT, Aug. 12—(AP)—A shipment of women's lingerie, hosiery, babies' bottles, bottle warmers and expensive luggage arrived at a South Korean port recently. Maj. Charles Whitcomb, U.S. Eighth Army central exchange officer for Korea, didn't know how the shipment reached the war front.

No Sign Of Break Sighted In Rail Deadlock

MONTREAL, Aug. 12—(CP)—With a country-wide strike against Canadian Railways set for Aug. 22 there isn't a sign of a break in the deadlock between union and management.

Latest development in the major labor fight was the rejection by union leaders representing 124,000 non-operating railway employees of an appeal by the presidents of Canada's two major railways.

Donald Gordon, president of the government - owned Canadian National Railways, and W. A. Mather, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, asked the union heads yesterday to rescind the Aug. 22 strike call and "thus enable calm judgment to be exercised in regard to the situation as it now stands."

Frank H. Hall, chairman of the negotiating committee for 15 international unions, said the telegram from the presidents had been received and he was advising them "there is nothing more that can be done." A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor and head of the two Canadian unions involved in the wage-hour dispute, also rejected the appeal.

The rejection followed release of a letter in which Mr. Hall accused the companies of delaying tactics in the face of union demands made 14 months ago.

GI Reinforcements Rushed To Naktong Line As Big Battle Develops

U.S. Troops Use Bayonets To Break Up Naktong Bridgehead Attacks; Drive Reds Off Ridge Guarding Chinju

TOKYO, Aug. 12—(CP)—American reinforcements rushed to choke off a new Communist flank threat along the Naktong River today as Communist pressure mounted in the centre of the Korean battle line. Units of the Army's 25th Division rolled northwards from the southern front where a five-day attack drove to within two miles of Red-held Chinju. They hit an unknown number of North Koreans swinging around the embattled 24th Division near Changnyong.

The battle for Pohang, eastern anchor of the Allied line, was quieter tonight. Allied forces still held the vital airfield six miles southeast of the port town and American planes were using it.

Pohang itself appeared to be half in Red hands and half a flaming "no-man's" land. Correspondent Leif Erickson reported from Eighth Army headquarters that American officers were confident of holding the airfield and recapturing Pohang.

Quickly Disappear

Max Desfor, Associated Press photographer, reported from Pohang that American tanks led a South Korean patrol into the centre of the city without drawing serious fire. A few enemy troops quickly disappeared, Desfor said. He reported there was no Communist fire hitting the airstrip.

United Nations warships stood by in Pohang Bay today ready to help defend the airport.

Commonwealth Occupation Force headquarters in Tokyo stated that Australian Mustang aircraft gave "a dazzling display of marksmanship" to knock out three Communist tanks and damage a fourth in a sortie near Waegwan.

The Australians also strafed enemy troops concealed in an orchard and rocketed and strafed enemy troops in the Yongdok area of the northeast front.

Huri Back Reds

Along the Naktong River line 50 miles west, Allied forces hurled back two new Red thrusts across the Naktong River in the Waegwan area near Taegu.

U.S. State Dept. Has High Hope For Propaganda

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—(AP)—State Department officials held high hopes today for success in the United States propaganda counter-offensive against Russia over who started aggression in Korea. The plan, sometimes referred to around the department as "Operation Figleaf," is to expose—up to a point—Russia's stalling tactics in the United Nations and its support of the North Korean communists.

The idea is to tell all the facts about Soviet conduct—by broadcasts, movies sent abroad, and the like—but to do this strictly as a propaganda campaign and not to make formal charges which might force an open break.

Officials said present American policy calls for continuing diplomatic relations with Moscow and for taking no steps to force the Russians out of the U.N.

The latest blast in propaganda campaign was loosed Friday by State Secretary Dean Acheson who made three charges against Russia and its delegate in the U.N. Security Council, Jakob Malik.

Acheson claimed in a statement (1) that the Soviets desire a Korean settlement which would be "abject submission to Communist control," (2) that Russian tactics in the Security Council are designed "to thwart the U.N. effort to restore peace and security" in Korea, and (3) that Malik has disregarded "the duties of his office" as council president.

Acheson also urged Congress to approve an $89,000,000 fund for a "campaign of truth" against Soviet propaganda.

Russians Have Last Word In UN Marathon

LAKE SUCCESS, Aug. 12—(AP)—The Security Council — still snarled up over procedure on the Korean question—wound up its second week of squabbling Friday, with Russia getting in the last word. The speech-making marathon resumes Monday.

Jakob Malik, as president, gave himself the floor Friday as Russia's delegate, to attack the United States in a speech designed to close out the council business for the week-end without danger of an immediate reply.

It followed a statement of Sir Gladwyn Jebb, chief British delegate, that Communist Imperialism wants to swallow up all Asia and must be stopped.

The non-Communist group campaign of trying to out-talk Malik was carried on by Jebb after the council failed to get Malik to make a ruling on seating the South Korean representative at the council table.

Malik tried vainly to make the council submit to him by voting on his proposal to seat both North and South Korean representatives—and Red China—before the council can consider anything further on the Korean question.

Concentrating On Asia

Jebb said that "repulsed in Europe, it is now clear that the dark forces of Communist Imperialism are concentrating for the kill in Asia."

He termed Malik's claim that the fighting in Korea is only civil war "patent nonsense."

Malik charged the U.S. built up the South Korean Army to invade North Korea, gave it supplies, and provoked an attack with guarantees from Gen. MacArthur that the South Koreans would get help from him.

Canadian Hoarders Back Objects of Gov't Wrath

OTTAWA, Aug. 12—(CP)—The hoarder, whose activities lead to shortages of goods, higher prices and unpopular controls, is back at work in Canada much to the disgust of leading goverment, business and consumer association officials. In retirement since the disappearance of wartime shortages, the hoarder again is at work in some sections of the country.

But a Canadian Press survey Friday indicated the hoarder may be left holding the bag this time.

Government, business and consumer association officials agreed there is no shortage of supplies of any kind and none is likely to develop unless there is excessive buying. In fact, the supply of some products was so good price drops were likely.

The officials condemned panic-buying and hoarding as "selfish, exceedingly foolish and unpatriotic." It tended to disrupt the whole economy of the country if carried too far.

Force Prices Up

J. H. Brace, chairman of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said "people who hoard must realize they are doing the country and themselves a real disservice since they will inevitably force prices up and make it necessary to institute an arbitrary and complicated system of controls . . ."

Spokesmen for major consumer industries with head offices in Montreal said that in many cases there is an oversupply of so-called scarce goods. Bargain sales later in the year should produce lower prices.

A government official said there are no shortages.

The government has not the power to reimpose the price and rationing controls in effect during the war and post-war years. That power has returned to the provinces. But the federal government could reimpose the controls by declaring that a national emergency exists and that such action is warranted.

Mrs. F. E. Wright, of Port Credit, Ont., president of the 12,000-member Canadian Association of Consumers, appealed to women to give the lead in refraining from panic-buying and hoarding. She said:

"There are no real shortages nor likely to be in this country unless the thoughtless, ignorant and selfish begin hoarding, creating artificial shortages, inflationary prices and all that these may bring."

Freak Cyclone Kills 4 Indians

STONY INDIAN RESERVE, Alta., Aug. 12—(CP)—Four Indians were killed and seven injured Friday when a freak cyclone smashed this southwestern Alberta Indian reservation.

A dark, funnel-shaped cloud swept through the area, about 44 miles west of Calgary, uprooting trees, demolishing log houses and ripping tents from their moorings.

Six Indian log houses, three of them occupied, were smashed. The four dead—including a woman and two children—were found in an area of about 50 square feet, nothing remaining of their log homes except the floor.

Persons in tents nearby escaped injury, primarily because the light dwellings were swept away and not smashed by the twisting winds.

The cyclone wreaked havoc over an area of only three square miles. Rescuers attempting to reach the scene of the destruction were hampered by tree-blocked roads.

The victims were Lazarus Dixon, Mrs. Peter Ear, an infant, and five-year-old daughter of Alex Ear. The seven injured were taken to Morley Indian Hospital, four miles from the reservation.

Hamilton Strike Mediation Asked

HAMILTON, Aug. 12. (CP)—Mayor Lloyd D. Jackson who Friday invited the Ontario government to mediate the city's strike of 1,000 civic employees said he is hopeful of finding a solution.

The mayor said he has no intention of trying to break the strike but he has been assured by the Ontario government that an attempt will be made to mediate.

Police Chief A. J. Chamberlain said he has no fear of an outbreak of violence because the strikers have won the sympathy of the citizens and any violence might alienate their support.

Hamilton's 2,000 residents were beginning to feel the lack of public services tied up by the strike. Street cleaners and garbage men have dropped their tools.

The Hamilton Civic Employees Union, however, Friday night gave members permission to dig graves in city cemeteries.

Some 350 tons of garbage and refuse has collected in the streets since the men walked out Thursday and is accumulating at the rate of about 90 tons a day.

No Announcement Yet Of UK Royal Birth

LONDON, Aug. 12—(AP) — The simple notice which will tell a waiting commonwealth that Princess Elizabeth has given birth to her second child, has not yet been posted on the gate of Clarence House.

Hushed crowds are waiting outside the historic home of Elizabeth and her husband, Prince Philip for the birth which a Buckingham palace spokesman said "is expected any day."

The princess remains in excellent health, say court officials. She keeps up with her correspondence and until Wednesday took daily walks in the grounds of Clarence House.

Sir William Gilliatt, the doctor who will deliver the baby, visited Elizabeth again today.

Two Trains Collide

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 12—(Reuters)—At least 10 persons died and 70 were seriously injured today when two trains full of workers on their way to the city colided in the suburbs of Rio de Janeiro.

60 Cities In Darkness In Maine Power Break

BIDDEFORD, Me., Aug. 12 (AP)—The lights went out in southern Maine last night as a power failure darkened 60 cities and towns.

Some 150,000 persons were without electricity for periods ranging from five minutes to an hour. The breakdown covered an area of 1,100 square miles in York, Cumberland and Oxford counties.

Central Maine Power Company officials said a switch breakdown on a Biddeford high voltage line caused a short circuit. District Manager Donald M. Libby said other stations in the area could not carry the added power load and were knocked out.

Failures began about 8:30 p.m EDT and spread rapidly.

Forest Fire Menaces Hamlet

ST. JOHN'S Nfld., Aug 12 (CP)—A forest fire raging in the Burin peninsula in Southern Newfoundland since Monday, which Friday threatened the hamlet of Winterland, is under control, Fire Warden Harold Smith reported today from the fire area.

The fire is burning in low scrub and second-growth three miles from Winterland, where Friday the 100 residents packed their belongings and prepared to beat a hasty retreat. Sunny weather is not helping the fire fighters and the warden said only rain could extinguish the forest blaze.

File Jammed In Carrier Tube

LONNDON, Aug. 12—(AP)—A metal file has been found jammed in a boiler tube of the 23,000-ton aircraft carrier Illustrious but there was no damage, an Admiralty spokesman said today.

It was believed that a careless workman was responsible, but routine investigations are continuing, he said.

The warship is undergoing repairs at Devonport.

This is the third time this year that Naval intelligence has been called on to investigate incidents on the carrier. Once signal flares were found in the boiler room and another time water was discovered in the supply of aviation gasoline.

There have been other recent cases of damage to warships. Loose bolts were found strewn in the gearbox of the destroyer Cavendish and sand was found in the bearings of the submarine Tally-ho while she was being refitted at Devonport.

Partly-Disabled Ship On Way To St. John's

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—(AP)—The partly-disabled Norwegian freighter Belfri is proceeding to St. John's, Nfld., accompanied by the United States Coast Guard cutter Spencer, the Coast Guard said today.

The Belfri, with a cracked hull, reported Friday that her china clay cargo was absorbing water and making the ship heavier. The Coast Guard cutter Dexter, which had been escorting the stricken ship, was relieved by the Spencer.

The Coast Guard here said the freighter was in "no immediate danger of sinking." The Belfri, with a reported 39 men and one woman passenger aboard, is due to arrive at St. John's Tuesday.

Arctic Authority Urges New N. Canada Boundary

MONTREAL, Aug 12 (CP) — A new boundary for Northern Canada which would take territory from Quebec, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, is advocated by Dr. Trevor Lloyd, a governor of the Arctic Institute of North America and an authority on Arctic geography.

Dr. Lloyd, Welsh-born professor of geography and chairman of the geography department, Dartmouth College, made the statement in a recent interview. He now is giving an Arctic course —physical, cultural and political— at McGill University's geography summer school at Standstead College, in Quebec's Eastern townships.

He has made comparable on-the-spot studies of this country's Arctic with Lapland and Greenland where he spent a year as Canadian consul.

The geographer's conception of the new north is that of a wide territory distinguished from the rest of Canada by such factors as isolation, climate, surface relief, lack of communications, absence of agricultural development and sparsity of settlement

He sees the area best treated as one administrative unit with Churchill, Man., as its capital.

His suggestion is that the present boundary of Northern Canada be reviewed and that a new line of demarcation be drawn from the northern limits of James Bay to coincide with the 55th parallel of latitude to include the port of Churchill, Ungava and Fitzgerald in Northern Alberta.

The four provinces affected would not lose administration of their northern territory irretrievably but only for a stated period of perhaps 25 years. He feels it highly probable that all four provinces would stand to gain by the arrangement.

U.S. Divisions Quarrel To Keep Korean Hero

POHANG AIR BASE IN KOREA, Aug. 12 —(AP)— A new young hero of the South Korean army marched tonight toward the liberation of fire-gutted Pohang.

Col. Kim Chi Che, 28-year-old commander of a veteran South Korea outfit, drove toward a junction with a strong American armored task force fighter base six miles southeast of Pohang.

Kim is leading a battle-hardened South Korean army element towards Pohang—one-third in ruins. His electric personality and success in combat has made him a hero.

Three divisions of the United States Army who have had him with them quarrelled to have him back.

Wherever he goes—so has his fame spread—civilians volunteer to join him. Therefore he raises his own replacements as he marches.

Plane Makes Emergency Stop

LONDON, Aug. 12—(Reuters) — A chartered Canadian Skymaster carrying 60 pilgrims back to Montreal from Rome made an emergency landing at London airport today when an unidentified man had a heart attack.

A doctor and an ambulance were at the airport, summoned by a radio message from the skymaster.

But the passenger refused to leave the plane to be taken to hospital. The man said he had recovered.

The plane took off again after the passenger signed a declaration saying that he wished to continue the journey at his own risk in spite of medical advice to the contrary. The plane was scheduled to arrive in Montreal at 1.30 p.m. EDT today.

Believe King's Pet Peeve Keeps Egypt From Helping

By STANLEY SWINTON

TOKYO, Aug. 12—(AP)—There is a widespread but unconfirmed belief among many well-placed Egyptians that Egypt's decision not to help the United Nations in Korea resulted from the direct command of King Farouk.

These sources say the monarch's prime reason was his peeve over American press criticism of his private life.

Even so, the decision is reported to have come only after a bitter secret cabinet session during which five ministers supported the U.N. Korean policy if only on moral grounds.

Prime Minister Nahas Pasha led the 10-minister majority which supported a policy of abstaining from all U.N. voting on Korea.

This was followed by an interpretation in some quarters that the action was a signal for a pro-Russian campaign in Egypt. The foreign minister, Salah Eddin Bey, put an official damper on this, however, at two press conferences.

He announced Egypt's belief that North Korea was the aggressor in Korea. But he did not change Egypt's U.N. position although he is reported to have wanted to.

The government's statement that it is not pro-Russian gained further weight when Egypt cast her security council vote against admission of Communist China to the U.N.

Special Cabinet Meet To Extend Conscription

LONDON, Aug. 12—(Reuters) —The Government's main purpose in recalling Parliament for a defence debate Sept. 12 is to demand extension of the period of compulsory service from 18 months to two years, it was reported today.

The lengthy cabinet meeting Friday, which preceded announcement of the recall, also was understood to have agreed on increases in pay for the armed forces.

This would not require parliamentary approval, whereas any lengthening of the conscription period would.

Political observers today deduced from the unusual duration of the cabinet meeting—it lasted more than three hours—that the proposal to increase the period of military service met with opposition from some cabinet members.

Many Tourists Thronging Spain's Capital

MADRID, Aug. 12—(AP)—This is the season when Spain's capital normally becomes a ghost city, but this year a welcome flood of tourists are keeping it alive.

Thousands of "Madrilenos" have fled the summer heat for cooler places in Northern Spain or in the mountains near Madrid. But their places here have been taken by the unprecedented arrival of visitors from all parts of the world.

Madrid has planned wisely for a flood of tourists in connection with pilgrimages to Rome during the Holy Year. Hotel accommodation has been multiplied by new hotels built on the top three or four floors of new business buildings. Dozens of these new places, charging moderate prices, are reaping a harvest.

Special Rate

The Spanish Gocernment made travel in Spain attractive by creating a special tourist rate of exchange of 25 pesetas to the U.S. dollar, instead of 10. Then this month it opened a new free market for foreign funds, with an initial quotation of 39.40 pesetas to the dollar, and told tourists they could sell their foreign exchange there. The result has been to make Spain the cheapest tourist area in all Europe for those with foreign exchange.

France appears to lead in the number of visitors to Spain. French cars are common on the highways.

There are many tourists from Britain, attracted by the relative economy.

Brazil has sent many tour groups and Venezuela is close behind. Argentina has contributed a large number, as have Cuba and Colombia.

Spain has become a popular place for Italians, also, and almost daily some of Italy's super-deluxe touring buses may be seen in front of the Grand Via hotels.

Most North American visitors have been delighted with the relatively low prices, the excellent food and wines.

Reinforcements

In the Changnyong area to the south, the Reds set up a road block between Yongsang eight miles south of Changnyong, and Miryang, 16 miles to the east. This was considerably south of the 24th division's position.

Erickson said the evident purpose was to drive against the 24th from the east while it was fighting a frontal attack along the Naktong.

Col. John (Mike) Michaelis, who commanded the main task force in the drive toward Chinju, led the reinforcements northward.

The 24th division Friday whittled down the bridgehead and gained more than a mile along the three-mile front in an attack that carried one Yank column to the river.

Use Bayonets

Farther north, troopers of the 1st cavalry division, bayonets flashing, thrust back an attempted river crossing at Kaepo.

AP Correspondent Lief Erickson said the Reds in "battalion strength" crossed the river in darkness and tried to set up a foothold beneath close-range supporting artillery fire. Of this force, 150 were killed and the others thrown back by late afternoon.

First cavalry headquarters said the North Koreans crossed at a wrecked bridge near Tuksong.

A part of the Communist force infiltrated Americans lines and took up positions behind the U.S. troops. Then other Red infantry launched a frontal attack and the 1st cavalry met it with bayonets. The Red force in rear came out of hiding simultaneously.

Get Infiltraters

Other elements of the American division went in to protect the rear. Both Red forces were routed and as they ran back toward the river American artillery bombarded the bridge.

The Reds threw a heavier force across the river at the same time about five miles north of Waegwan. A battalion of troops led by 10 tanks reached the east bank and hit the 1st South Korean Division.

Erickson said five of 10 tanks in action were knocked out Saturday morning and the drive was stopped. But he said the other five tanks still roam the east bank.

A headquarters spokesman said reports received at midnight Friday were that this thrust too had been hurled back across the river.

Expect Red Reinforcements

One of MacArthur's intelligence officers said the presistent stubbornness of Red troops fighting near Changnyong indicated they expected reinforcements. He speculated they might be waiting for help from the 9th and 14th North Korean divisions believed to be between Taejon and Waegwan.

If brought into action, these would swell the Communist force to six and perhaps seven divisions—between 60,000 and 70,000 men, along a 50-mile front aimed at Taegu.

This remains the "power potential" of a drive toward Taegu, the spokesman said.

The resistance of the Red forces east of Chinju is becoming "disorganized," the spokesman said.

American conquest of the commanding high ground above Chinju put big guns within two miles of the blackened city

Can Cut Down Thrust

While holding these positions, the Americans can cut down any renewed thrust toward Pusan. But the spokesman warned remnants of the 6th North Korean division still were aggressive in the sector and "enemy tactics are not based on withdrawals."

As part of their objectives the Americans also took the town of Sangmum, about five miles due east of Chinju.

American Marines brushed through light opposition and advanced to a point within 2½ miles of Chinju, AP correspondent Stanley Swinton reported by telephone. Marine units also were fighting Reds trying to break out of the trap.

Allied aircraft continued to blast troop concentrations, convoys and gun emplacements behind the front lines, from the southern sector to Pohang.

A heavy force of U.S. B-29 bombers made a concentrated attack Saturday noon at Najin in the extreme northeast corner of North Korea.

Other B-29s hit key communications targets. More than 20 main rail and highway bridges were bombed Friday.

A U.S. navy patrol bomber caught 10 small steam vessels off the North Korean coast between Wonsan and Masudan and left them all in flames, the navy reported.

Drive Teaching Forest Values

FREDERICTON, NB —(CP)— Woodland etiquette is being taught to the inhabitants of New Brunswick in a current campaign sponsored by the local section of the Canadian Forestry Association.

Object of the two-month campaign is to promote better understanding by the individual of the role the forests play in his life and his responsibility toward them.

The drive is taking the form of a series of regional meetings of interested groups. Brief addresses on fire protection, woodlot management, wildlife protection and soil conservation are followed by pertinent films.

Local service clubs, agricultural societies, boards of trade and chambers of commerce have volunteered their assistance. The provincial lands department has provided the association with a sedan delivery truck to transport the lecturer and equipment for the two-months tour.

This is the first time that the New Brunswick section of the association has undertaken such a campaign, although similar tours have been made in other parts of the country.

Major M. Flannigan To Speak In City

Major Morgan Flannigan, who is at present Public Relations Representative for Toronto and district for the Salvation Army will be the special speaker on Sunday night at the Peterborough Salvation Army temple.

The Major served as a chaplain with the Canadian Army during World War II, and he saw service on the West Coast, also in the United Kingdom and on the continent, finishing up in Germany in the Canadian Occupation Zone. Major Flannigan was in charge of rescue and relief operations during the Noronic disaster.

Pilot Hit By Rocket Fired From Own Plane

A U.S. AIRBASE IN KOREA, Aug. 12 (AP)—Lieut. Joseph C. Miles was hit by a rocket he fired from his own Mustang fighter.

Miles brought back a 50-pound chunk of rocket to prove it. The airman fired the missile and hit a Red tank.

Almost simultaneously he felt a jolt through his plane. When he tried to lower his wheels for a landing, he learned the reason.

A chunk of rocket apparently richocheted from the tank and lodged in the plane's wheel-well.

Miles landed safely.

Quebec Man Has Own Deer Ranch

VERDUN, Quebec (CP). — A 150-acre farm in the Laurentians that was hardly worth farming prompted Joseph Lareault of this Montreal suburb to open his own private deer ranch.

Lareault, a Verdun alderman, purchased the small farm north of here three years ago. Tests showed the soil was unsuitable for farming, so he built a fence and converted the lot into a deer sanctuary.

Stocking the ranch came naturally. One day three young deer wandered in and nature did the rest. Now, despite trouble with stray dogs and poachers, a fair-sized herd lives in the enclosure.

Soon Mr. Lareault plans to add several elk to his preserve. The animals, descendants of elk from the royal forests of Germany and Poland, will be turned loose among the deer on the ranch.

Judge Laramee Given Appointment

QUEBEC, Aug. 12 (CP)—Judge Arthur Laramee of Montreal Juvenile Court has been appointed chief judge of the new court of social welfare, Premier Duplessis announced Friday.

The court of social welfare, created by legislation adopted at the last session of the legislature, replaces juvenile delinquency courts. The change was part of a general overhauling of laws governing rehabilitation of juvenile delinquents.

Premier Duplessis at the same time announced other changes in the judicial domain. Jurisdiction of Quebec magistrate's court will included municipal and school problems starting Sept. 1. This covers cases arising from application of the Quebec Cities and Town Act and the Municipal Code. Formerly, these cases were handled by superior court.

The social welfare court, which takes in other social welfare duties besides juvenile delinquents, goes into operation next Wednesday.

The premier said contributions to the provincial government committees for the relief of fire-wrecked Rimouski and Cabano now amount to $812,691, the premier said.

Payments have already been made from the relief fund to homeless in Rimouski busy with reconstruction, he said.

Alleged Atomic Thief Trie Slashing Wrists

LONDON, Aug. 12 (Reuters)—William Ralph Wakeham, 35, accused of stealing a British atomic energy official's suitcase and briefcase, slashed his wrists in his London prison cell today.

The suitcase was reported to contain secret papers, since recovered.

Police said at the time there was no suspicion of espionage.

Wakeham, due to appear in court later today, was taken to hospital, where his condition was said to be "not serious."

Taking No Chances

BUFFALO, N.Y., Aug. 12 (AP) —Mrs. Olga Kosa, 27, slashed her three-year-old daughter to death Friday night with a bread knife and scissors, police reported. Then the woman cut her own wrists, chest and abdomen, turned on gas jets in her apartment, fashioned a noose from an apron and hanged herself from a nook in the kitchen.

New Government Ending Socialism In New Zealand

WELLINGTON, NZ. — (CP) — New Zealand's new government has taken a major step in reversing the Socialist trend of the Labor government's 14 years in office by offering the state air services for sale to private enterprise. The previous government bought out all internal air services and established a state monopoly.

The new National Party government's offer is its first attempt to return a large nationalized undertaking to private control and it has been met immediately by a Labor threat to re-appropriate the services, without payment of goodwill, if the Labor party regains power in the future.

Since it came into office, the new government has been occupied principally with reducing the volume of controls built up by Labor. Many price controls, real estate sales and rent controls, house building restrictions and limitations on the use of currency held abroad have been abolished. All rationing has been lifted. The import licensing system is undergoing an extensive review with a view to cutting its operation to a minimum.

Among the state enterprises which were losing money was the National Airways Corporation. It was formed in 1945 by the purchase of privately-owned airlines. Most of these, including the line operating the main trunk routes, Union Airways, were being run at a profit. Since then the state has had a monopoly of regular internal air services.

Labor Party Hostile

Announcing the government's intention to withdraw from internal air services and sell to private enterprise, Minister of Civil Aviation W. S. Goosman said: "As matters stand, private operators are prevented from establishing air services, although they may be satisfied they would pay their way, while the National Airways Corporation holds a monopoly and runs at a loss. The government believes that private airlines can be operated successfully and that by giving them the opportunity to do so the taxpayer will be relieved of the present burden of losses."

The proposal came sharply up against Labor Party hostility. The Opposition Leader and former Prime Minister, Peter Fraser, declared that if the Labor Party was returned to power in the future it would forthwith take over the airways again. They would be taken at exactly the selling price, with additions for improvements and deductions for depreciation.

Prime Minister Sidney Holland condemned the Labor attitude as an attempt to thwart the will of the people who had declared at the election against state trading. He said the Labor statement did an injury to the country as it might discourage purchasers and affect their bidding for the state lines.

Denmark Has Vacation Resort For Poor City Cart-Horses

COPENHAGEN (CP) — Denmark, which has a reputation as a tourist centre and a vacation land, now has a resort with a difference.

It consists mainly of a large shelter and a wide pasture. The host is a veterinary surgeon and the guests are cart-horses.

The "hotel" was established by an animal welfare association to give the hay-burners a much-needed holiday in the fresh air. The idea was born last summer after considerable publicity was given the story of a Copenhagen carter who was given permission by his employers to take his horse with him into the country on his summer holiday.

Hippopathologists (horse experts) agreed with the carter that city horses need a holiday in the country. Their main ailment is sore feet and a week or so in the grassy meadows can work wonders.

Normal stay at the "hotel" is two weeks. They are weighed on arrival and departure and their health is closely checked by the resident "physician." Their shoes are left outside the main door, as in most hotels, but here it is to prevent them from hurting other "guests" when kicking their heels. There is also a special wing for temperamental individuals.

Their diet is watched by the veterinarian, but includes many of the tit-bits which they get but rarely during their working days.

Main ingredient is plain grass, but extra vitamins are included.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Aug. 12 (CP) — Grain prices generally recorded sharp declines and all May futures dropped to seasonal low levels in trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange Friday. Increase in selling and recessions on United States markets accompanied by increased hedging sales prompted the declines.

During the last two days, 1,000,000 bushels of wheat was allocated to the United Kingdom and 600,000 sold to Switzerland. Ecuador took 20,000 while Columbia purchased a small parcel. Class two wheat was unchanged at $2.06.

Disabled Find Work In Factory

MOOSE JAW, Sask—(CP)—A retail store has opened here to sell nothing but goods manufactured by disabled veterans and other handicapped persons.

It will serve as an outlet for merchandise manufactured at the Disabled Civilians' Workshop here. This factory was opened three years ago "to help disabled veterans to help themselves."

It employs a staff of 24, of whom 20 are disabled and produces about $48,000 worth of goods a year. These include silk and rayon dresses, cotton house dresses, sheets, pillow slips, coveralls babies' diapers, nurses' and waiters' uniforms, and hospital garments.

Idea behind the scheme is to train disabled veterans to support themselves rather than to depend on direct assistance from the provincial social-aid branch.

During training, board and room are provided by the government and an allowance of $5 a week is paid by the workshop. When trained, employees are paid a regular monthly wage. Eventually, many of them take regular employment in the garment industry.

Both the store and workshop are jointly owned by the Saskatchewan government and the Handicapped Civilians' Association of Saskatchewan. The workshop is 30-per-cent subsidized.

Large Scale Search For Nfld. Herring

ST. JOHN'S Nfld. —(CP)— There's a major search going on in the coastal waters on Newfoundland and Labrador. The quarry is the silver-bellied herring.

The Newfoundland government is back of the search, which if successful will mean a larger catch and longer season for the herring fishermen.

Seven ships are in on the search, including two Icelandic vessels subsidized by the government, four owned by the federal government and one owned by a Curling, Nfld. company. Up to now herring have been few and far between along Newfoundland's coasts.

Stock Markets Unsettled At Week's Close

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Stock markets were unsettled as the trading week closed, dropping off a bit Friday after general firmness in the preceding days.

They reflected the uncertain international situation, as they have done since the Korean fighting started. On one hand, there is confidence in continued high business activity, and on the other there is some apprehension over what a war economy might bring in the way of controls.

Business knows that whatever happens it is going to be busy and will have to meet heavy demands for production—so it proceeds to get ready. But the investor doesn't know how much money business will make out of all this activity.

Toronto Stock Exchange was closed Monday for the civic holiday, but other markets showed strength in quiet trading with industrial and rails showing best.

Drops Off

The advance continued Tuesday but dropped off in later trading. Wednesday was again strong. Selling pressure reduced early gains Thursday and the softness continued yesterday.

On the week Toronto indices, based on representative stocks, showed the following changes:

Industrials up 9.70 at 247.01; Golds down 1.96 at 77.35; Base Metals up 3.56 at 127.76; Western Oils up 1.92 at 79.28.

Changes in Montreal averages were:

Banks up 0.36 at 30.81; Utilities up 1.4 at 79.3; Industrials up 7.6 at 159.7; Combined up 5.5 at 132.9; Papers up 17.95 at 497.97; Golds off 0.03 at 52.6.

In New York the Associated Press average of 60 stocks advanced .7 to 77.4.

Labor Board Rejects 2nd Globe Application

TORONTO, Aug. 12—(CP)—The Ontario Labor Relations Board Friday turned down a second application by the Globe Printing Company for review of a board decision certifying the Toronto Newspaper Guild (CIO) as bargaining agent for circulation department employees of the Globe and Mail.

The Guild was certified by the Board last July 20. The Board Aug. 1 refused an application by the company for review of its decision. In turning down the second application, made Aug. 8, Board Chairman P. M. Draper said "The Board does not intend to take any further action in this matter."

The company contended that a "substantial number" of employees had repudiated the Guild shortly before the Board's hearing of the Guild's original application.

Mother of Two Nabbed In Atomic Spy Inquiry

By ED CREAGH

NEW YORK, Aug. 12 (AP)—The Federal Bureau of Investigation today nabbed suspect No. 7—a 34-year-old mother of two children—in the Henry Gold-Dr. Klaus Fuchs atom spy case.

She is Mrs. Ethel Greenglass Rosenberg, accused of conspiring with her husband Julius and others to recruit her brother, David Greenglass, into gathering "classified information concerning the atomic bomb for the Soviet Union."

The small, impassive Mrs. Rosenberg was held in $100,000 bail after Miles J. Lane, chief assistant U.S. attorney, said she and her husband made preparations to leave the country after the arrest of the confessed atom spy, Harry Gold.

"If the crime with which she is charged had not occurred," Lane told Commissioner Edward W. McDonald, "perhaps we would not have had the present situation in Korea."

Doesn't Explain

Lane did not explain his remark.

Presumably he meant that possession of a stolen A-bomb secrets gave the Communists enough confidence to press beyond their former borders.

Rosenberg and Greenglass were arrested earlier on spy charges. Greenglass formerly was an army sergeant stationed in 1945 at the Los Alamos, N.M., A-bomb project.

The FBI said they and Mrs. Rosenberg were involved in a conspiracy with Gold, the Philadelphia chemist who has admitted giving the Russians highly secret data stolen by the British atom scientist, Dr. Fuchs.

Gold is awaiting sentence.

Like Mrs. Rosenberg and the other Americans, he could be sentenced to death.

Fuchs is serving a 14-year term in a British prison.

Mrs. Rosenberg spoke only once during her arraignment. She said "Yes" in a low voice when the commission asked if she was a U.S. citizen.

Plastics Recovering

FRANKFURT, Aug. 12. (AP)—The German plastics industry, which went virtually out of business at the end of the war, is slowly but steadily increasing its output. In the war year of 1943 the whole of Germany produced 250,000 tons of plastic materials a year. In 1949 production in West Germany alone amounted to only 57,000 to 67,000 tons, a spokesman of the West German plastics industry said. This year's production may be 10,000 tons higher.

Winnipeg After Big Storm Pitches In To Right Things

By JACK SCOTT

WINNIPEG—There was a remarkable and sort of sad sight outside our door the other morning.

We are parked in a trailer camp almost in the heart of Winnipeg. The parliament buildings are across the street, the ball park across the other.

When we awoke we found that the grounds of the trailer park were alive with wrens, busily loading up their beaks with bits of straw and twigs and flying off into the heavy maple trees. There were a hundred or more of them, I'd say. They were all building nests.

There was a good deal of other evidence in that view from our trailer door of what the night had done. It was Monday morning and Winnipeg, the wrens and the Scotts, had gone through, if you'l pardon the expression, a hell of a night.

You'll have read in last Monday's paper about Winipeg's epic thunder storm in which the wind blew up to 68 miles an hour (just seven mph short of hurricane strength) and of the two deaths and the fantastic toll in damage done to a city that has had more than its share of heavenly wrath this year.

But I expect that in other parts of Canada the story didn't give much of an idea of what its like to live through a storm of that intensity and some personal notes may be of passing interest.

I know that reading the papers here with their list of casualties, human and otherwise, really didn't tell the story of a quarter of a million people cowering in the night under the whiplash of this "worst storm in 28 years." And I hasten to add that nobdy cowered any more than your humble correspondent.

With A Roar

The storm lasted for 40 minutes. It caught everybody by surprise, including the weatherman, who had predicted a few light thundershowers and who (slyly reported the Tribune) had his windows open wide when the blast hit.

It was about 12.30 a.m., a hot, muggy night. The kids were abed. Brown Eyes and I had been sitting outside watching the sheet lightning off on the horizon and hoping for a breeze.

It came with a soundless wallop. The trees all suddenly bent. Our canvas canopy ballooned out like a spinnaker. The lightnnig flared through the maples overhead. We bolted for the trailer. And then it REALLY began.

Afterwards most people described that 40 minutes as "a nightmare" and it was that, all right. The wind against the flat side of the trailer coming in gusts, hit with a roar. Our aluminum home shuddered under the impact. Through the windows we could see the dust swirling crazily. The lightning came about every three or four seconds and the rain struck like a wave of water.

I find it hard to sort out any distinct impressions in that montage of furious sound. When the lights went out each glaring tongue of lightning seemed to be a direct hit and there was a mounting crash of noise.

The heavy awning broke loose and whipped against the side of the trailer. A heavy limb of the maple we had parked under crashed to our rear, and in the lightning flash we saw that we were sitting in a lake. Through the uproar we heard the screaming of fire engine sirens.

The two kids had dived into our bed and under the covers, and I was dying to join them.

Next day everybody seemed anxious to prove the most cowardly under that ordeal, but this kind of fear is the worst of all. There is no fighting back and no way to assess the situation in logical terms. We were all as helpless as the wrens and, I'm sure, just as scared.

Next Day

In its own way, the morning after was just as weird as the night.

It was a wonderfully fresh, bright morning, by chance, a civic holiday in Winnipeg and in our trailer camp everyone was up early to assess the damage.

The grounds were littered with broken branches and flooded in the low areas. My hammock hooked to two cottonwoods, was at the far end of the camp buried in the mud. Across the way a tall brick chimney lay neatly on its side on a house roof. The ball park fence was down.

It may be that Winnipeg learned to accept disaster calmly during the flood. Or it may have been just the glorious day. Whatever it is, the reaction of this city was amazing.

When we went on a tour of the suburbs at noon everyone was out cheerfully cleaning up the mess, laughing together over the recent terror. We stopped to chat with many people and met none who didn't take this philosophically. Like the indomitable wrens, people simply pitched in to get things right again.

The most interesting observation I have heard on this wild night came from a man here in the trailer park. He is an arthritic and he and his wife had been trapped in their trailer when a tree fell across the door.

As some of us boasted about our nervous condition next day, this man interjected a sobering thought.

"All through the storm," he said, "I kept thinking to myself, 'This is what it will be like in the next war for the civilian, to just sit and wait and hope that the next bolt from the blue falls on some other guy.'"

CANADA NEEDS
MEN TO TRAIN AS ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNNERS

A major requirement of Canada's defensive system today is men trained for anti-aircraft operations. Charged with the defence of vital areas, the men of the anti-aircraft units are equipped and trained in the use of modern scientific equipment — electronics, radar, radio and telephone.

There are very few more important jobs than service in an anti-aircraft unit for young men who want to make sure that Canada is well defended against any eventuality.

To enlist you must —

1. Be a Canadian citizen or British subject.
2. Be between 17 and 29 years of age.
3. Be single.
4. Meet Army test requirements.
5. Volunteer for service anywhere.

How Much For Defence?

A New York Times survey shows that Canada has been spending two per cent. of her national income on defence, compared with 7.6 per cent. in Britain and 6.4 per cent. in the U.S.A. Last week President Truman proposed to increase American spending on defence to ten per cent. of the national income. Britain is prepared to increase her expenditures to the same percentage. The ten per cent. movement should not stampede Canada into a 1.6 billion dollar defence spending hysteria. (Ten per cent. of Canada's national income would amount to that tremendous sum). Defence budgeting on percentages of the national income has no special virtue or relativity. Because the U.S.A. or Tanganyika or Shangri Li spends such and such a per cent. of its income on defence is no reason for Canada to do likewise.

* * *

The ten per cent. yardstick is no valid gauge for judging whether Canada is spending enough on defence and carrying her fair share of the load. The Toronto Financial Post points out that on a basis of population Canada has been spending, even before recent increases more for defence purposes than any other Commonwealth country, Britain excepted, and more than any other of the Atlantic Treaty nations except the U.S.A. and the U.K. It also remarks that "on a per capita basis, the U.S. is probably 50 per cent. wealthier than Canada". The Financial Post points out another element ill-considered by those who would determine defence policies on a basis of comparative ratio:

> The overhead of running a country of Canada's size and population is relatively much larger than the overhead of a country like the U.S. How would the ratio fiends take that important factor into account? Are the peoples of various countries being taxed in proportion to their real ability to pay?
>
> How are you to compare defence costs and the actual value of the defence contribution to be made? The annual cost for pay, pensions, allowances, clothing, food, etc., of a private soldier in Canada is around $2,600. A recent figure from the U.S. which seems to be roughly comparable is about $5,000. A recent estimate for a French soldier is about $300 a year. A lieutenant-colonel in the Netherlands Army gets less, we understand, than a U.S. private.

* * *

Canada's last budget provided for expenditure this year for national defence of $425 million; last year $365 million was spent on army, navy, air services and defence research. These are large sums, amounting to more than fifteen per cent. of the budget expenditures, in comparison with only six per cent. ($34.4 million) spent in the year 1938-39. Obviously defence expenditures must rise sharply in the next months, but to talk of spending ten per cent. of the entire national income is absurd: that would be nearly 70 per cent. of the total of this year's budget.

Fig Leaves For Rome's Statuary

A traveller in Italy writes us that some of Rome's famous or spectacular statues have recently had fig leaves added to them. Sculpted representations—ancient and Renaissance—of the naked human form have long been among the glories of Italy. If it is these which have been desecrated by fig leaves, then we must ruefully ask to what depths the post-war Italian has sunk? If it is the modern stuff in Mussolini's grandiloquent new sports and arts centre on the outskirts of Rome, we do not give a fig whether the statues are fig-leafed or not. Those figures are big and muscular, intended to be heroic and noble but without the subtlety of art to make them so.

This trend towards clothing statues must, however, be viewed with alarm, particularly in Italy, where the human form is not ordinarily considered to be disgusting or wicked. We are sure that the Roman church, in its historic wisdom, has had nothing to do with the fig-leafing, even if this is Holy Year. Can the desecration be laid to North American business and tourists? Along with the tourists, the soft drinks and the movie-love stories, has Italy imported North American prudery? Has Italy's aesthetic fibre been softened by the post-war American invasion?

We are relieved to hear from the time correspondent that Michaelangelo's young David in Florence has not had fig-leaf-laying hands put on it.

Our Discovery of the Kingdom of the Saguenay

Other newspapers are discovering craters in the Canadian North, so we would like to report on our own discovery in the nearer north, of the "Kingdom of the Saguenay", as Quebec propagandists call it. Admittedly we are a little late in the discovery—luxurious cruisers have sailed up the river itself to Bagotville for many a summer and the C.N.R. serves the district—but the discoverers of the crater are late too; it has been there for three or four thousand years. Further, the great area of mountains, lakes, minerals and forests in the Laurentians—30,000 square miles—has a new passageway discoverable: a splendidly smooth paved highway called the Talbot Boulevard which cuts northeast from Quebec city through the very heart of the district. This road for the first time opens the Kingdom of the Saguenay to easy motor traffic. Tourists are just discovering it.

* * *

The Talbot Highway, five cars wide, begins some two dozen miles north of Quebec, leaves villages and resorts behind and enters the Laurentide Provincial Park, running magnificently through it for a hundred miles. The scenery of this uninhabited, hitherto almost inaccessible area is incomparable. Thence onward another dozen miles from the northern gate of the Park to —mirabile dictu!—a bright, busy, invigorating town of 30,000 people, Chicoutimi, the capital of the Kingdom of Saguenay.

* * *

Chicoutimi is itself only the first of a dozen marvels of the northern kingdom. It has 30,000 people but not a single industry. It is a modern city in the centre of mountains and northern forests and mighty waters. Chicoutimi exists on its own pride (its citizens, mostly French-speaking, have that pride which self-development in isolation gives), its proximity to Arvida aluminum factories, hydro-electric power developments, and pulp-wood ports. It is spectacularly set in the Saguenay basin scooped out by glaciers thousands of years ago.

* * *

Arvida, four miles away, is another wonder of the area: a smaller, extraordinarily neat, even beautiful company town, the centre of the world's aluminum industry. (The Arvida plant is 1½ miles long and ¾ mile wide.) Nearby are two of the largest hydro-electric plants in the world: Isle Maligne and Shipshaw. Shipshaw is bigger, in its capacity, than Boulder Dam. Twenty per cent. of all the electrical energy produced in Canada comes from the Lake St. John-Saguenay. Leading to Shipshaw from Arvida is a handsome, graceful bridge across the Saguenay, made entirely of aluminum. It was opened this summer. Farther west, a few miles, are other towns, industrial or agricultural, like Jonquiere, St. Joseph d'Alma and Kenogami, and the great Lake St. John itself, discovered 300 years ago, isolated until this century. To the east of Chicoutimi a dozen miles is Bagotville on Ha! Ha! Bay, and Port Alfred with dock facilities handling over a million and a half tons of exports and imports, and great paper mills with 200,000-cord wood-piles by them.

* * *

Chicoutimi enthusiasts call the Kingdom of the Saguenay the Cinderella of Canada. From 1759 to 1828 it was owned by the Hudson's Bay Company. The first settlers did not enter it until 1838, the second small group came in 1850, by which time the Hudson's Bay Company had sold its exclusive rights. These stout pioneers and their descendants worked hard in field and forest, raised large families (their environment and story are told in Maria Chapdelaine), and lived in self-reliant isolation until the first decades of this century, when rail, plane, and now roads, have opened the district for industrial exploitation. Now there are 150,000 people in the Saguenay, a majority of them young in years as in spirit, strawberries ripen in July, hotels have modern bars, and there is even some night life in Chicoutimi, as well as a cathedral.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A Colorado woman is in the news because she wants her husband to pay her $5 for each kiss. He will doubtless find that he can get them cheaper elsewhere.

Fall fashions, we read, will demand the new "guitar look". Meaning, we presume, a long neck, voluptuous curves at the waist, and a decided spread at the bottom.

The occasional car with brakes which squeal is a small annoyance, but a bus with shrieking brakes is a confounded nuisance. Its brakes are bigger, and therefore can presumably squeal louder, and it passes the same houses, the same front porches and the same quiet bedroom windows every twenty minutes. Some of Peterborough's buses could do with a little oil on their brakes, or whatever one puts on brakes to keep them quiet.

Fifty Years Of Sibelius

By PAUL SJOBLOM
(In Finlandia Pictorial)

EXACTLY half a century will have passed this July since a Sibelius symphony was first heard beyond the borders of Finland.

The First Symphony of Sibelius was given its premiere in Helsinki on the 26th of April, 1899; and a bit over a year later this elemental work, which heralded the advent of a new giant among symphonists, was introduced to audiences in various European musical capitals. The fiftieth anniversary of the world premiere of the symphony was celebrated last season by special performances of it by orchestras in Finland.

IN the spring of 1900 the composer and critic Karl Flodin wrote prophetically in his book Finnish Musicians: "Sibelius is not only Finland's first and, so far, only composer of genius, but the equal by virtue of his great creative gifts of the foremost tone poets of any country. It is truly high time that Sibelius' best work become known beyond the confines of his native land. Sooner or later this is, indeed, bound to happen, for whatever is a product of inspiration, originality and genius must in the end burst the bonds imposed by unhappy circumstance. And genius belongs to the world. . ."

Scarcely could Flodin have imagined that "the world" would hear the voice of Sibelius within a period of only a few months after these words of his were written. A fund was privately collected to send the orchestra of Helsinki's Philharmonic Society to perfom at the Paris Exposition. On July 3 the orchestra started out on its historical mission. Concerts were given along the route in Stockholm, Christiania, Gothenburg, Malmo, Copenhagen, Lubeck, Hamburg, Berlin, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, Brussels, and at last Paris, where the tour came to a triumphant close with two concerts, on July 30 and August 3. The core of the program of works by contemporary French composers was the breath-taking new symphony by Sibelius.

SIBELIUS went along with the orchestra as assistant conductor, but lacking any opportunity to perform himself his duties were confined to taking bows and receiving ovations—though often he let conductor Robert Kajanus do even this for him. The tour turned out to be more of a pleasure trip than anything else for the composer, who as a young man immensely enjoyed travel and derived much inspiration from it. (In fact, the only places he could really concentrate on work were some rural hideout in Finland or some foreign city. "In Helsinki all melody died within me," he said when he pulled his roots out of the Finnish capital in 1904 and moved to the country).

Everywhere the Helsinki orchestra appeared Sibelius was hailed by critics as a rising star in the musical firmament. His originality and power of imagination excited general attention, and he was recognized as a towering figure among composers of the North.

◇ ◇ ◇

SIBELIUS himself, observed: "The Paris tour was, on the whole, a pleasant and refreshing experience. I made many interesting acquaintances on it. . . . In Paris I became acquainted with old Johan Svendsen, who was at that time Court conductor in the Danish capital. He was very much delighted with my music and promised to do his utmost to make it better known in Denmark. He was particularly struck by my First symphony. He eagerly urged me to take steps to get it printed."

◇ ◇ ◇

SIBELIUS' biographer Karl Ekman writes that "the Paris journey was the first stage of the conquering march of Sibelius' music through Europe." This is obviously a sentence written in uncritical enthusiasm, for it is well known that Sibelius' music never conquered more than a slight segment of Europe, England being the scene of its greatest triumphs. It is the Anglo-Saxon world where Sibelius' genius has been recognized for what it is; elsewhere, for the most part, critics have been singularly deaf to the qualities in his music that reveal him as a creative artist comparable to the supreme masters of the past. The acclaim showered on Sibelius during the tour of the Helsinki orchestra fifty years ago was probably in part inspired by sympathy for the Finnish people in their struggle against the Russification measures inaugurated a short time before by the Czar. More than anything else, the music of Sibelius was interpreted as an expression of patriotic protest against tyranny. Its more enduring qualities of artistic inspiration and structural mastery were missed by the musical chauvinists of the continent, who have always found it hard to acknowledge contemporary genius outside their own country.

THE experience of the man who was to become known as Sibelius' apostle, Olin Downes, music editor of the New York Times, on hearing the First Symphony for the first time is interesting and instructive. This was back in the year 1907 and the performance was by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Carl Muck.

"I was badly prepared for this experience," Downes recalls, "since, although at that time, in my twenty-first year, I had already been writing criticism in the Boston Post for a few weeks, I had, in spite of my self-assurance, a degree of belief in the authority if not infallibility of older music critics than myself. (I have changed!)

"In the Boston Public Library is a treasure-room which Mr. Sibelius may know, for it was shown to him on the one visit he made to America in June of 1914. There, in the case, was the score of Jean Sibelius, Symphony No. 1, in E minor. A valuable attribute of this collection of music was the habit of its founder of pasting into the back pages of the orchestral scores many newspaper criticisms or other printed commentary which had appeared about them on various occasions.

◇ ◇ ◇

"AND here was a clipping, by some German critic of obscure fame, who remarked, with an academism typical of many individuals of his race, that the new symphony by a young Finn had evident talent. It had 'stimmung', but unfortunately its form was inchoate and obscure. It was another case of a young composer who undertook big things but who could not handle the ideas, etc., etc. Then, none too accomplished a score reader as I was, I read as intelligently as I could the music. It looked interesting, in themes, and in the orchestral combinations. Ah, but of course that was the 'stimmung', acknowledged by the veteran critic. So I went to the concert with my opinion pretty well prepared; interesting, 'stimmung', colour, fresh, lyrical themes; promising but vague and unsatisfactory in form.

THEN the concert commenced. I had not before nor have I since then felt a similar evocation in my own consciousness of something vast, great, lonely, something of northern shadows and lights, something mystically of a heroic land and its past . . . I lived to be plunged in one instant into the natural world; to find a music possessed of nature's force and life-giving energy; and to hear the note, again, and at long last, of the epic—which had disappeared from all other modern music—and of the tragic, which must inhere in any artistic creation born of a consciousness of life and present in any other than an evasive attitude toward all human destiny.

"And then the soul of a young man who so greatly needed such assurance awoke. Here, oh God, was again grandeur, honour, nobility; again the dignity of the human soul and the cry of the human spirit which nothing can kill, and therefore which never dies. This, and the magnificent colour of the 'northern orchestration', as it is now properly called, an instrumental scheme not in existence before Sibelius.

"A hero was in the world and had spoken."

GEARING UP

Re-Armament Reforms

(SUNDAY TIMES, LONDON)

When we combine the actual and contingent needs of defence, the total requirement may well appear too vast to be sustained without so straining our economy that the struggle against Communism would be lost at home before it was fought abroad. We can look those cumulative needs in the eye only because we are part of a wider Atlantic and United Nations system of defence. But that proposition is far from having been fully applied in the actual defence policies of the Western Powers, nor have its consequences in easing their defence loads been more than fractionally reaped.

To do so depends upon three main reforms. The first is to establish a combined staff headquarters empowered to work out both world-wide strategic plans assigning each country its due role, and systems of instant unity of command in any threatened theatre. The second is to press on urgently with uniformity of arms and equipment. This not only cuts production costs, eases mutual aid, and enables unity of command to work smoothly; it also greatly reduces the aggregate need for reserves of arms and equipment up and down the world by making possible central pools of material and of productive capacity.

The third reform indicated is a combined programme of research and development. This part of defence being now colossally and increasingly expensive, the need is all the greater for economising in effort, brain-power and capital equipment by concentration, specialisation and the fullest exchange of results.

These three objectives all imply a high degree of mutual trust and of readiness to suspend the claims of sovereignty in the wider interest. They may be unattainable on the scale of the whole democratic world. But that is no reason for not pursuing them urgently where they can be achieved, especially between the Commonwealth and the United States. Rearmament adequate to the dangers of today requires more than men, money and arms. It requires the courage and vision of the highest statesmanship.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Mark well, O Job, hearken unto me; hold thy peace, and I will speak. (Job. 33: 31).

Furthermore Elihu answered and said . . . Let us choose to use judgement; let us know among ourselves what is good . . . Therefore hearken unto me, ye men of understanding: far be it from God, that he should do wickedness: and from the Almighty, that he should commit iniquity. For the work of a man shall he render unto him, and cause every man to find according to his ways.

Yea, surely God will not do wickedly, neither will the Almgihty pervert judgement. (Job 34:1,4,10-12.)

Letter To The Editor

WITH THE TROJANS

Sir: We noticed on your Aug. 7th editorial page a letter with a query, in regard to Boys' Town and Walter Bent. The Trojan A.C. is pleased to state that Mr. W. Bent is now associated with us as a member of our executive. We feel that we are very fortunate in having Mr. Bent as a member of our organization and feel that recent adverse criticism of Mr. Bent is unfounded. We have in our possession a letter from the organization for whom he formerly worked which says (in part):

"We found that he possessed special ability for handling young boys in sports and other group activities. His work in this regard being quite satisfactory."

We hope that with the assistance of Mr. Bent and others we will be even more successful with our boys' work in Peterborough.

Yours truly,
CHAS. H. FOSTER,
Sec. Trojan A.C.

Progress of Peterborough: XXXI

Peterborough Fears American Invasion Democracy Denounced As Wild Notion

By HOWARD PAMMETT, M.A.

It is often forgotten today that for 60 years after the War of 1812-5, Canadians feared an invasion of American republicanism. American traders and settlers were suspected as enemy agents; Methodists, Baptists and other "dissenters" were thought disloyal by the Tories, though these sects by 1830 had severed most ties with the United States. British regulars were stationed at the larger towns and in forts along the frontier. The Canadian militia was strengthened; every able-bodied man 16 to 60 years old was required to train yearly with his township company on the King's birthday (from 1837 on May 24), bearing his own rifle and supplies. The Muster-Rolls for Northumberland Militia in 1821-2 show Capt. Z. Burnham's Cobourg Company had 45 men, Capt. A. MacDonald's Asphodel Company 41 men, Lt. F. Burnham's Smith Company 46 men, and the Otonabee Company 55 men. As retired British officers settled, the companies were built up and given more training; the Otonabee militia, for example, trained at Major Anderson's on Rice Lake. Social conviviality exceeded military drilling at these affairs, however.

The Newcastle District reflected the growing strife between authority and democracy prevailing in 1820-50. Also there was rivalry between Port Hope in Durham and Cobourg in Northumberland, both having many links to the backwoods; to their society events and their courts of assize came people from the back townships regularly; each town had merchants and promoters with branch offices and stores in Peterborough and other northern towns; each had its government officials and politicians seeking office. Fothergill of Port Hope, who represented Durham in the Assemby 1824-30, was dismissed as King's Printer in 1826 and lost his Peterborough mill-lease for radical ideas; Rev. Strachan of the Family Compact in 1827 listed Assembly members with no religion, and noted "Fothergill least of all".

In 1830, however, Fothergill moved to Pickering and became hostile to Mackenzie and the radicals. Durham thereafter sent to the Assembly G. S. Boulton, Jesse Ketchum and John Brown; Brown was a moderate reformer, but after political troubles at Port Hope in 1833 and the sale of his Peterborough establishments soon after, he retired from politics in 1836. In the Northumberland riding, H. Ruttan and A. McDonnell, Family Compact supporters, ran against J. G. Bethune and Dr. J. Gilchrist. Reformers, in 1834; the first two won easily. Yet even among the gentry there were rival commercial groups in which Port Hope and Cobourg interests intermingled; Hon. Z. Burnham's group included McDonell, Rubidge, Hamilton, Langton, Need, and E. Burnham; Hon. T. Stewart's group included Bethune, Brown, Boswell, Ferguson, Kirkpatrick, Strickland and the Traills.

Grievance Meeting

Need mentioned in Feb. 1833 a grievance meeting at Peterborough organized by 'a few low radicals'. Placards were pasted on the walls, and advts. in the journals announced the expected arrival of an arch-agitator to take part but at the appointed time the honest loyal part of the community mustered in such overwhelming force that the malcontents saw no chance of carrying out their resolutions, and fairly slunk off the field with their leader, without shewing fight". Soon after, a Port Hope reform meeting was broken up by "desperados", and such clashes were common at Cobourg. In Feb. 1834, Langton wrote: "I feel myself fast growing a Tory", but two months later: "I feel myself fast approaching Radicalism again but not of the sort of which that factious wretch Mackenzie is leader".

The gentry, like common settlers, had grievances against the Government, especially about land. Ryerson and the Methodists campaigned against Anglican control of clergy and school lands, and the 1835 endowment of 57 rectories by Governor Colborne. However, Ryerson in 1836 came out against Mackenzie, one reason being his desire to get a royal charter for Upper Canada Academy, newly-established at Cobourg "for the education of Canadian youth, and the most promising youth of converted Indian tribes—to prepare them for schoolmasters". Ryerson's "Christian Guardian", opposing radical papers like Hart's "Plain Speaker" and Radcliffe's "Cobourg Reformers," swung many moderate reformers away from Mackenzie. Incidentally, although the Governors and the Tories disliked Ryerson and the Methodists, Upper Canada Academy received its charter in 1936 and a grant of £4100 in 1838.

Peter Robinson Ousted

The Reformers won an Assembly majority in 1834, and after extensive investigation, issued "The Seventh Report on Grievances 1835", pledging loyalty to the Crown but demanding an end to autocratic rule, corruption and land favouritism. The British Government then made the mistake of sending out as Governor Sir Francis Bond Head, an obtuse bigoted reactionary. Head made a pretense of correcting the worst abuses (including the removal of Peter Robinson from the Land Office) but soon dissolved the reform Assembly and campaigned at the head of the Tories under the slogan "Monarchy vs. Republicanism", in an atmosphere of hysterical flagwaving against "Yankee revolutionists...degraded outcasts...vile democratic republicans". Every means of fraud, intimidation and bribery was used: although every man with 40 shillings freehold had the vote, voting was by open show of hands, and the Government withheld land titles from all who voted radical. Head told the Newcastle District electors: "If you choose to dispute with me and live on bad terms with the Mother Country, you will quarrel with your own bread and butter!" To the Tories it was a real battle under the banner "Victory or Death —The Rebels Must Be Defeated!"

In Durham, G. S. Boulton and G. Elliott, Tories, were elected. Need wrote: "It was thought advisable to show an imposing majority on the side of religion, order and true liberty; all the freeholders of our settlement to the number of nearly a hundred marched in procession to the polling booths to record their votes for the constitutional candidates." In Northumberland, Tory candidates Ruttan andMcDonell won over reformers Gilchrist and Boswell. Langton told how Irish voters were taken by steamer to Sully to vote, with free whisky and money for all who shouted for McDonell, and clubs used freely to frighten off reform voters. "There was astonishingly little fighting considering the number of wild Irishmen we brought down, but they were altogether too strong for the Yankees."

MY GARDEN

A Garden is a lovesome thing, God wot!
Rose plot,
Fringed pool,
Ferned grot—
The veriest school
Of Peace; and yet the fool
Contends that God is not—
Not God! in Gardens! when the eve is cool?
Nay, but I have a sign:
'Tis very sure God walks in mine.

T. E. BROWN (1830-1897)

Detest Democracy

Head sent 31 loyal Addresses to London, including four from Newcastle District, announcing his victory over "republicanism", ("The people detest democracy") and demanding dictatorial powers to stamp out all unrest, as well as his claims for a salary increase and a baronetcy. But tension grew through 1836-7 as abuses became worse and depression added to other troubles. Early in 1837, on learning that Mackenzie planned a meeting in Cobourg, the Kawartha gentry determined to break it up by force; they had grudges against him, the latest being the revelations in the Seventh Report on Grievances of the favours showered on the 89 magistrates and other gentry of the Newcastle District. After a ball in Peterborough Government House, the young bucks set out by sleigh for Cobourg along the Cavan road, joined enroute by other Tories. When they reached Cobourg, the local Tories had already seized the building, and the Peterborough sleighs lined up before the doors to keep out the Reformers; when the latter tried to hold an open-air meeting nearby, it was drowned out with shouts, songs, and bugle calls. Yet this flouting of democracy had the opposite effect; Rev. Green wrote Ryerson that in the Cobourg region "there are 20 rebels to one sincere Loyalist". The Ryerson group did not help by expelling 32 Cobourg radicals from the Methodist Church because they supported Mackenzie.

Militia Gather

Head's refusals to obey the Colonial Secretary's instructions ended in such insolent accusations that in November 1837 he was ordered to return to Britain; unfortunately this dispatch did not reach him before he precipitated rebellion. An interesting sidelight is contained in a letter of Nov. 9, 1837 from Capt. J. Knowlson of Cavan to Adjutant John Huston of Port Hope, informing him that the Durham Militia were ready for emergencies, and declaring "Few there are in our Regiment I am convinced that would not grasp the sword in one hand and the British flag in the other, and sooner than strike their colours or resign them to the enemies of the British Constitution would proudly make them their winding sheet, their death shroud. Such Sir are the sentiments of our officers and men...." He urged action against "Papineau and his minions" in Lower Canada, but within a month rebellion in Upper Canada found Governor Head quite unprepared and without any regular troops. His circular calling out the militia reached Strickland at Lakefield on December 7, when he was working in his orchard (it being a very mild winter).

At 11 a.m. next morning, Capt. Cowall led 400 men south by road Port Hope; they were joined en-route by Durham Militia, and 36 hours later encamped at Bletcher's Tavern three miles north of Port Hope. Within a couple of days Col. McDonell with the 2nd Northumberland and Col. Brown with the 4th Northumberland Militia joined them, including Major Anderson with 170 Rice Lake Indians and Major Moodie with 200 Smith and Douro men, bringing their total to 1,000; Brown brought along two "rebel spies" (one of them Dr. Gilchrist) who were jailed at Amherst. Just as they were ready to march toward Toronto, a courier arrived to tell them to go home, as the rebels had been defeated at Montgomery's Tavern. In the meantime, some Cobourg, Port Hope and Cavan militia had marched to Toronto under Burnham and Boulton, among them being Robert Rogers of Otonabee, Birdsall's son-in-law. When Mackenzie's little army seized Navy Island in the Niagara River, some of these militia were sent to man the frontier, and Rogers took part in the destruction of the American steamer "Caroline", which had been supplying the rebels, and which was cut loose and sent over the falls aflame on the night of December 29.

Major Gets DT's

Rumors flew around Peterborough, as reflected in the pages of Stewart, Moodie and Traill; Mrs. Traill wrote Dec. 9: "A report has reached us that 400 Indians had come down on Toronto and slaughtered a number of inhabitants. . . Cobourg proved loyal beyond expectation." and Dec. 14: "It is reported that Mackenzie is somewhere in the township of Mariposa, endeavouring to raise fresh troops." Col. McDonell thereupon led 300 Peterborough militia to Lindsay, charging down upon the little settlement with trumpets and drums added to cheers and musketfire to deafen the astonished villagers and farmers waiting to have their grain ground at Purdy's mill. Major Murphy, Lindsay storekeeper, had told the authorities that Purdy was a rebel, and the militia seized him and several others quite without warrant, taking them to jail in Cobourg, where they were held without trial for weeks. The informer Murphy got the postmastership held formerly by Purdy, but it is pleasant to record that after starting a distillery, Murphy got delirium tremens from drinking his product and left the country. Farther north, Captain Wallis received an order on Dec. 19 to "beset" two Haliburton roads whence Mackenzie might escape to Quebec; Dennistoun with 20 Fenelon and Verulam militia spent some frigid nights in the woods, before they were ordered home on Dec. 23.

12 Jailed

Officially, 900 men were arrested as Mackenzie supporters, but actually many thousands were terrorized by overzealous militia, particularly around Toronto, London and Niagara, including firing of homes, thefts and other abuses. Some of the worst excesses were blamed on Orange militia men, which is ironic because from 1836 on the British Government and the Governors were trying every means to suppress the Orange societies and parades; even in 1840 the magistrates were instructed to discourage them, but without success. The postmasters were ordered to censor mail, report suspicious strangers, and in other ways keep track of all unrest. In the Newcastle district, however, beyond searching some homes, upsetting hayloads to see

Its 5,000 Rocks and Multi-Hued Flowers Make New Riverside Garden A City Delight

By COLETTE FERGUSON.

"Five thousand rocks and then some," commented the city gardener, Thomas Metcalfe while viewing the city rock garden at the north end of Riverside Park. However it is not only the rocks that make this spot one of the outstanding beauty attractions in the city. Approximately 40 different varieties of rock plants and annual flowers are fused into a magnificent panorama of color.

A cemented rock wall, three feet high around the 175 foot semi-circular base serves as a foundation to keep the rocks on the slope from slipping out of position. Three niches in the wall have been conveniently equipped with benches for those who prefer to enjoy the beautiful surroundings in a more restful position. Flagstone walks are placed both at the top of the garden and in a semi-circular path running through the centre. A niche in the centre of the garden will be completed with a sun dial or fountain at a future date.

The rocks in the garden were brought by trucks from the Buckhorn and Burleigh Falls districts and a great number of the flat stones used in the base wall and walks were taken out of the river bed near the Quaker Oats Co. A number of the rocks are limestone and red granite.

Different varieties of rock moss, cactus, javanese rock plant, garden heather and other varieties of rock plants already are filling up the spaces and crevices between the rocks. A few perennials and shrubs such as small pines, junipers, ball cedars, tulips and dwarf iris have also been planted. Annual flowers including petunias, pansies, marigolds, portulaca, sweet aylsumn, pinks and sweet william are only a few of the blooms that make this 50 foot slope resemble a flower rambow.

Begun Last Fall

This rock garden came into being last fall. Previous to that time the site was covered with unruly grass that defied any efforts to keep it cut and trimmed. Work began about the middle of October, last year. Approximately 60 loads of top soil were trucked in to cover the clay. During an interval when the dam at the Quaker Oats Co. was under repair the low river level allowed labourers to obtain rocks from the river bed. The base wall was built first and then the rocks were put in position on the slope These operations were under the supervision of Parks Superintendent Armar Butcher. It took 12 men a month to prepare the rocks before gardener Thomas Metcalfe was able to begin planting.

Since that time a pipeline has been installed and the garden is watered every day. Shade is provided by four locusts and one elm tree.

More and more citizens of the city and tourists are finding their way to this beautiful site which was the result of imagination, planning and hard work on the part of the Parks Department.

Some Hints on Horticulture

SUMMER LAWN CARE

In hot weather it is not necessary or advisable to cut grass quite so often or so short. The lawn may need more watering, however. Experts caution against sprinkling. One good soaking every week or ten days during a dry spell is worth a dozen of the other kind. Most weeds in the lawn are easily disposed of with a spraying or two with 2-4-D.

Of course there is little to be gained in killing out a bad patch of weeds with the new sprays unless the bare place following is reseeded with good lawn grass. It also helps matters to water and fertilize the lawn about a week after applying the 2-4-D to encourage new, quick growth of grass to fill in where the weeds have been destroyed.

WHY WE CULTIVATE

Killing weeds is only one of several reasons for cultivating flowers and vegetables. Even if it were possible to have chemical weed killers, which would destroy all but the flowers and vegetables, we would still need to cultivate. This stirring of the soil with a rake, hoe or whatever is used is essential to let in air, to absorb moisture and to distribute plant food. In dry parts of the country it is also essential to keep the soil from drying out A good practice is to cultivate gardens or hoe crops regularly after every good shower. Wait, of course, a few hours or so until the soil is just dry enough to work.

SOAK IT WELL

Having water available for the garden is a big advantage. If the supply is limited to what can be pumped by hand from a well or cistern then it is well to confine to a corner of the kitchen garden where the lettuce, onions and a few short rows of beets and carrots are concentrated and also, of course, to a few favorite flowers. But if there is a hose and lots of water then the whole garden and lawn will benefit, and in dry weather soak. Light sprinklings are of little use. They will just keep down the dust, which is of doubtful advantage, or when applied to the lawn will encourage shallow rooting. It is far better to soak thoroughly once a week in dry weather. This encourages the roots of grass, flowers and vegetables to go down deeply where they will find more plant food.

Fishing In Lake Galilee Brings A Large Evening's Catch

By PHILIP TOYNBEE

At six in the evening, when the sun was beginning to fall across the lake towards the Galilean hills, we climbed into the lorry outside the kibbutzim (or settlement) dining hall, and set off for a night's fishing.

Moshe, Jacov, Dov, Ephraim, and a dozen more—newcomers from Morocco and Singapore, and some old hands (or "salts," except that the water of the lake is as sweet as sugar) from Germany and Austria.

We screamed down the new road with the pride of new possession. We passed a little brown Arab village on the lake-side and two casual smugglers riding down on horseback from the Syrian hills.

At thre other Kibbutzim we called to collect more fishermen (for our own settlement of Ein Gev belongs to a fishing co-operatives which includes three others), and the lorry was soon packed as tight as the sardines we hoped to catch. Dov, from Morocco, was singing a gay little, far-away song, while Moshe vigorously competed on his mouth-organ with patriotic Hebrew marching songs of the Palestine War.

Nearly all these fishermen, except the charge hands, were young men of twenty. No girls, for the work is too heavy and the hours too long even for the alarmingly robust, seemingly indefatigable girls of these hot settlements.

Licensed Eccentrics

The fishermen are the licensed eccentrics, the free-est and easiest members of these free and easy communities. Because their working hours are from six in the evening until half-past seven the next morning, because they must sleep through the day from eight until four with only two crowded hours of daytime leisure, they are willingly allowed a few privileges. During the ten days a month of bright moonlight, when fishing is impossible, they are released with a little money to relax and enjoy themselves in Haifa and Tel Aviv. And in Tiberias we stopped to buy (coming from a communal society like kibbutzim the word has an outlandish, almost an improper sound) a few bottles of beer, a few packets of cigarettes. We whistled politely at the pretty girls of Tiberias, as the lorry rocked and bumped through that confused little modern town.

Our destination was Kinnereth, a fishing community at the north-west bend of the lake, five miles from Capurnaum. Here, after we had disposed the gigantic nets on the decks of the three little boats, we lay down indolently to eat a meal of privileged variety, to sing, to talk, to argue with energy but without earnestness on the old, recurring political issue of Mapai-Mappam. Gorged with the unaccustomed food I was already feeling sleepy as the sun went down—sleepy but full of a limitless benevolence, deeply infected with the unforced good spirits of my companions. Occasionally I was stirred by the strange sound of high little voices talking the clipped, inaccurate English of the Far East. And there, in the light of the hurricane lamp, were the neat, brown, eastern faces of the young men from Singapore.

Now it was dark, and the six "light-boats" were towed away from the shore by a subdued motorboat. On Galilee the Arabs still fish as the Galilean apostles fished, but the Jews have imported from Sweden a more efficient and unlike most innovations, an even more picturesque method. These light-boats are anchored in places where the shoals are known to be, their murmuring oil lights shining down on the water from the stern, and attracting, by a fatal curiosity the sardines, the carp and the catfish. Also a strange indigenous fish which is found only here and on the upper lake of Hula, and which, alone among fish, nurtures its eggs and its young, fighting ferociously with gigantic enemies to guard its vulnerable offsprings.

Across the Bay

Half an hour afterwards, we ourselves — three fishing boats each with its "carrier" boats behind it — were towed out towards the little constellation of lights which lay invitingly across the bay. "Gershon! Gershon!" we called across the dark water for our allotted light. When we heard his answer it was time for us to leave the procession and to row, standing up to strain at the huge oars, sweating and sighing in the heat of the night. Yet it was a quiet, almost a sinister approach. Nobody was laughing now; a tensity of expectation possessed the boat, each member of the crew waiting for the order to let dow the net, each with his special, essential task.

The order came, the net began to be released as we slowly circled the light, behind us. Once the circle had been completed the hardest work of the night began, that slow, painful dragging at net and ropes, the urgent struggle to unravel a confusion, the patient but dexterous rearrangement of the nets as they came up dripping and fish-spangled from the clear, warm water.

To me the catch seemed gigantic as I stood, ankle-deep in the effervescent splutter of fish, seizing each larger one and throwing it to the far end of the carrier boat. But though this same operation was completed four times that night, and always with a bulging net, they looked at me, with blase and disappointed eyes as I waded admiringly in what had seemed to me a recurring miracle of fishes.

Yet we were singing again as we drove back round the lake, in the low early sun which was already beginning to burn from above the hills of Syria. To Hanan, the oldest member of the party and the fishing expert of the lake, I talked of Christ's miracle. He refused to dismiss it. There was one spot, he said, where a warm spring bubbled up from the bottom of the lake and where, at certain times, the fish were so plentiful that they leaped out of the water on to the decks of the boats.

Hanan had read the New Testament for the first time when he had begun to study fish and fishing. Many learned books had been written about fishing on Galilee, he said, but none more vivid or more accurate than the Gospels.

Australia's Soldier-Farmers Put On Land's "Easy Street"

By WILLIAM FITTER

SYDNEY (by airmail)— Australian veterans of World War Two who decided, with the help of grateful State governments, to go farming after hostilities ceased, are now on "'Easy Street".

One man who took up a sheep run in the Western Division of New South Wales in 1946 started with a personal capital of 100 pounds. Today his assets, including equity in the land, plant and stock, are worth about 35,000 pounds. His gross income from wool this past season was 8,000 pounds, giving him an approximate net income of 7,500 pounds.

The reason? Three exceptionally good seasons, high wheat prices and still higher wool prices, plus generous terms of land tenure.

When the Australian armed services began to demobilise, the state governments decided to avoid the pitfalls of land schemes which followed the 1914-18 war and which ended in misery for many soldier-farmers. New South Wales, which led the way, insisted that soldier-farms should be larger and should be leased in perpetuity at a low rental, not bought outright within 20 years, as before.

In the Eastern and Central Divisions of New South Wales, where 92 per cent of the farms are, the rent charged is two and a half per cent of the 1942 value of the land. In these divisions the state government had to buy war service settlement land from freehold owners. But in the Western Division, which is about two-thirds of all New South Wales, all land for closer settlement is Crown property and as the state was not put to the expense of purchase it was economically possible to rent farms to ex-servicemen at a very low concessional rate.

The maximum rent chargeable is set by law at 1s 6d per sheep per annum. Most soldier-settlers are being charged about one shilling per sheep, which is anything from two shilling to five shillings less than the current market value of the leases to non ex-servicemen. This means that a soldier-settler running 3,000 sheep —an average number—on a block of which the lease's market value is 5s per sheep per annum has an asset worth 12,000 pounds, and, at today's prices, a yearly wool cheque of 5,000 pounds in return for his 150 pounds a year rent.

Some Restrictions

There are, of course, certain restrictions. The settler cannot sell out and take a quick profit. A condition of his lease is that he must live on his holding for five years. The lease cannot be transferred for ten years, except to another qualified ex-serviceman, and after that the sale of the lease is still subject to the government's approval.

Not every ex-soldier with ideas of farming can obtain a property. First be must show the Land Department that he is qualified and competent, and that means experience of the type of country he proposes to farm. "Outback" sheep farming is very different from the mixed farming of the coastal lands, with their regular rainfall. A man must know which of the native grasses and scrub bushes to nurture, for his sheep will exist on them when drought which hits the Western Division every few years, has dried out all other feed.

Having satisfied these requirements, the would-be soldier-settler must then enter a ballot for properties as they are made available. And he will need luck, because there are invariably 500 to 800 qualified men in the ballot for any good block. If his name is drawn, all his hurdles are over. The state government will then finance the building of a home, fencing of boundaries and other structural improvements, the cost to be repaid over a long term at two and a half per cent interest. The government will also advance money for the purchase of stock, plant, and equipment at three and three-quarters per cent interest. And to carry the settler over his starting period, before his first wool cheque can be earned, the Federal Government grants him a living allowance of up to £5 15s a week for the first year. This does not have to be repaid.

Nearly 1,500 ex-servicemen have been placed on the land to date and there is still a long waiting list. Whether future settlers will acquire their farms on such generous terms as the 1,500 is doubtful. In a recent test case the High Court ruled that the government could not resume land for soldier settlement at its 1942 value because Australia's written constitution lays down that when the government acquires any property, it must offer "just terms."

Despite that judgment, the New South Wales government announced last week that it would push on with further large-scale land requisition for both ex-soldier farms and general closer settlement. It believed that public opinion will support its policy of ensuring that men willing to leave the cities, with all their amenities, for the hard, lonely life of the "outback" are not handicapped with heavy mortgages. As evidence of the success of its scheme to date, it can point to the fact that the men it has already helped have repaid more than 42 per cent of the three million pounds advanced to them for buying plant and stock.

Petes Grab Off a 5-4 Win Over Brampton Excelsiors

Hamilton	21	12	9	24
Mimico	23	12	11	24
Weston	23	2	21	4
Toronto	18	0	18	0

The Petes yanked out a 5-4 OLA senior "A" verdict over Brampton in Miller Bowl last night before more than 2,000 cheering fans to go within striking distance of the group leaders.

STILL IN FRONT — Arn Dugan is still in front of the other OLA senior scorers as he sniped two goals here last night to help the Petes beat Brampton 5-4 and go into a third-place tie with the Excelsiors.

It was a tight, close-checking contest, a bit dull in spots, but generally exciting and clean. Both sides were shy a few regulars, Brampton missing Archie Browning, runner-up in scoring to Arn Dugan, who kept atop the heap with two points in this encounter.

Dootch Vitarelli, young Rocky Batley (a junior), and Sid Wright, of Cornwall, scored the other points for the Creighton crew. Bob Thorpe, Dootch Vitarelli and Don Ashbee each had an assist. Nick Ferri had a goal and an assist for the Excelsiors, with Lew Landess, Al Garbutt and Ollie Raine each counting one. Whitey Severson suffered a cracked rib in a collision during the third heat and had to retire for the duration.

Fine Net-Minding

Both goalies turned in a sparkling effort, neither Ralph Speck nor Sam Arthurs giving away any cheap ones. A few shots were partly screened, but they saved some almost-sure goals. The checking was close and sometimes rugged but no deliberate rough stuff was seen. All the Petes toiled hard, though minus regulars like Jim Kinna, Ron Horton, Jack Breakspear and Pup Curtin. They used Gary Robinson and Rocky Batley of the juniors, and the boys went well. The Excelsiors were short several regulars, too, and 15 minutes late arriving.

Ferri counted early in the first with a hot angle shot in close. It was evened up shortly when Dugan got credit for a goal, being checked hard at the crease and the ball rolling into the cage. Dootch Vitarelli shortly put the Petes up on a pass from Thorpe, and Dugan tallied another before the frame finished on Don Ashbee's assist. Though Jack Ashbee (Don's uncle), of Brampton, was off at the time in the second stanza, Landess scored a nice one, and later Garbutt faked the defence out of position to race in and tally to make it 3-all at the half.

Tight Going

Jack Ashbee drew a slashing penalty in the third and Lou Vitarelli got it for a similar offence. Severson then went off hurt, and Raine's slap shot on Ferri's pass beat Speck to put the visitors one up. Don Ashbee was chased for roughing but returned in time to see Rocky Batley check, recover the ball and tear in alone to score a nice one and tie it up. Sid Wright's screened shot on a pass back from Dootch Vitarelli near the period's end proved the winning goal. Each side in turn pressed in the scoreless fourth chukker, in which there were no penalties, and the crowd went after Referee Chuck Davidson for some of his decisions. It was exciting lacrosse the final several minutes with Jerry Fitzgerald stalling neatly in the last minute of play.

Australian Tennis Ace Beaten By Sweden

RYE, N.Y., Aug. 12—(AP)—The Australians suffered a shock when their youthful Davis Cup tennis ace, Frank Sedgman, took a five-set beating from Sweden's Lennart Bergelin in the opening match of the inter-zone finals Friday. But they haven't too much to worry about.

When the challenge round opens against the United States Aug. 25 at Forest Hills, L.I., the down under netters probably will be back at their old stand. Fortunately for them, the Swedes have only one Bergelin.

Torsten Johansson, the No. 2 player for the European zone champions, was far out of his depth when he faced John Bromwich, the old master of the Aussie team, in the second of Friday's matches and went down 6-2, 6-3, 6-0.

This, coming after Bergelin's thrilling 2-6, 6-2, 7-5, 1-6, 6-3 upset of Sedgman, returned things to their proper perspective.

Lamotta To Defend Title September 13

NEW YORK, Aug 12 — (AP) — Middleweight champion Jake Lamotta probably will defned his title against Laurent Dauthuille at Detroit's Olympia Sept. 13.

Nick Londes, matchmaker of the International Boxing Club's Detroit branch, met both parties Friday. He scheduled conferences today and tomorrow.

According to Londes, Lamotta wants a $60,000 guarantee. The champ also wants Dauthuille's handlers to post $20,000 in cash as guarantee of a return bout in case he loses the crown.

Raybestos Wins

Raybestos edged Woollens 8-7 last night in a fine fastball fixture. They scored a run each in the second, fourth and seventh frames with three in the third and two in the fifth. Woollens got one each in the second, sixth and eighth, and two apiece in the third and fifth. Revoy had a homer and single for Woollens, as Schell hit two doubles. Crampton and Giles had two hits each for the winners. Teams:

Marines Gain The Finals From Ashby's

Defeating Ashby's 5-4 andw 3-1 at the Bowl last night in a girls' softball double-header semi-final series, Outboard Marines moved into the league finals against Westclox. These teams clash at three this afternoon in the Bowl and in a double-header there tonight, resuming Monday night if necessary in the best-of-five finals to declare a winner for the PWSU playdowns.

The opener last night was a nifty one with Marines playing heads-up ball and coming strong in the late frames. Pat Williams hurled superb ball and had fine backing, as she kept the hits well spread out. Ashby's too fielded well, but M. Stewart was reached for 15 hits and they got excited in tight corners. P. Williams, S. Wakeford, J. Reynolds, and L. Jordan were the pick of the fielders. M. Carr and P. Williams each had three safe blows for the victors and J. Reynolds two for the losers, 10 of whom went down on strikes.

A Swell Scrap

Another grand game was seen by a fair crowd in the 55-minute nightcap. Marines were at their best of the season. They got but eight hits off D. McFadden, while Ashby's were held to seven by E. Whittaker. However, Ashby errors hurt their cause, figuring in on all three runs for the Outboards. The losers' lone marker was an earned one. M. Freeman and C. Callan looked good defensively for Ashby's, while M. Carr and M. Behan were best in the field for the Marines. E. Whittaker and V. Page had two safe blows each for the victors, with E. McFadden, L. Jordan and M. Stewart getting two each for the other side. There were six strikeouts a side. Teams:

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Both the Peterborough and the Kawartha golf clubs are fortunate in having competent and popular committees in charge. And capable pros like Lex Robson at Kawartha and Gord Harrison at Peterborough. Chaps who do their main work of teaching in fine style, and can also go out and turn in a real show in competition. Nor should the work of the head greenskeeper be forgotten. They have an important job to do if the members are to be kept happy. Bob Clifford at the Peterborough Club recently was sent on a course at Guelph re keeping greens in shape, and has been doing an excellent job. Nor could golfers in the big Civic Holiday weekend tourney at Kawartha complain of the course which was put in shape by Bill McIntosh.

* * * * * * *

Jon Hope, writing on golf in the Annual Golf Review —an excellent treatise on the game—admits that all courses aren't kept perfectly, adding: "But golfers, as a fraternity, are not vicious beings and appreciate that such a direct accusation is unfair. I have found that there is a realization among golfers that mechanization can help the greenskeeper but does not compensate for the general lack of labor, nor the acute shortage of youngsters joining the gentle craft. Also, in common with the farmer and the aviator, the greenskeeper is still waiting delivery of a device for controlling the weather."

* * * * * * *

Fancy Guy Named Joe

Whilst jotting down notes out on the fairway, we are reminded that Joe Kirkwood will be at the Peterborough Club on Aug. 26 from two p.m. to five in connection with sports' centennial week. He'll do a nine-hole exhibition, then a period of trick shooting and finally hold a golf clinic for those interested. The famous pro trick artist from the States was here some years ago and amazed all spectators with his golfing wizardy. He can make a golf ball do everything but say "uncle"—or he may have mastered that by now. Anyway, we've never seen his equal on the links for fancy stuff.

* * * * * * *

Don't look now, but the Petes' lacrossers are right up there snapping at the heels of the group leaders in the hot OLA senior "A" race. Their nifty 5-4 win o'er Brampton here last eve actually puts them half a game up on the Excelsiors and right next to Owen Sound, though Brampton has the same number of points because of playing one more game. If the Creighton crew can win tonight right in Brampton they'd be sitting pretty for the Owen Sound visit here next Wednesday. In any case, the Creighton crew are rolling right along and proving quite a headache to all and sundry in the senior setup. Quite different from last year, huh?

* * * * * * *

Dugan Keeps Scoring

Arn Dugan continues his hot pace atop the group snipers, scoring two more last p.m., whilst his rival Archie Browning didn't play. Sid Wright, Dootch Vitarelli and young Rocky Batley—of the juniors—each scored a goal for the winners, while Dootch, Don Ashbee and Bob Thorpe assisted on one apiece. None of the visitors got more than one counter. Whole gang clicked well before better than 2,000 cash customers in a clean but close-checking tussle. Not as fast as it might be but it ended up in hot fashion as time ran out on the Excelsiors. Both goalies looked fine and kept the score down with some great saves. Better save your dimes up, folks, for that big one Wednesday, the Petes being away next Friday.

* * * * * * *

It's Marines vs. Westclox at three this aft in the Bowl to open the girls' softball best-of-five loop finals. Same teams then have a twin bill there tonight and also Monday, if necessary. The winner goes to Kingston next Wednesday in PWSU intermediate "A" playdowns. These league finals for PWSU rights deserve big crowds. Marines looked real impressive last night in eliminating Ashby's in two semi-final frays by scores of 3-1 and 5-4. Two dandy duals between the inspired Outboards and the usually steady Ashby's, but errors hurt the latter's cause in the first tilt. Pat Williams proved the best pitcher of the evening and she had okay backing.

PMLA daytime schedule for next week is in tonight: the tadpole Shrimps beat Hurricanes 6-4 as the peewee Petes took Lions 12-5 ... Lindsay interests are discussing the possibility of senior "B" hockey there ... Junior West returns to work in Peterborough next week ... Hamilton and UEW have a soccer exhibition at three this aft in King Edward Park ... Rays won 8-7 in fastball from Woollens last gloaming ... Bell plays Loblaw's at King Edward on Monday in the civic loop ... Rays and Westclox mix it in fastball on the Quaker diamond ... Senior ball Petes are in Oshawa at 2.30 this afternoon and play Merchants at 6.30 p.m. in Bowmanville ... They may play New Toronto in Bowmanville on Tuesday, too ... Here and There In Sport

By The Canadian Press

The pace-setting Philadelphia Phillies of the National League have announced termination of a working agreement with Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League — and no one seems to mind. Bob Carpenter, Phils president, said the decision was mutually agreed upon, adding that Philadelphia intends to arrange a hook-up with another Triple-A club. Toronto is in seventh place and some fans have indicated disappointment this season at the failure of the National Leaguers to come through with worthwhile aid.

Bermuda's touring cricket team is still unbaten. The squad defeated Brantford Friday, scoring 154 runs for nine wickets, then getting the side out for 47. The victory was added to decisions over Montreal, Ottawa, Peterborough and Oakville, all in easy fashion. The Bermudians will be in London Friday, then to Buffalo, St. Catharines and Hamilton.

Contracts for two championship fights were signed in New York Friday. Willie Pep of Hartford, Conn., world featherweight king, signed to defend his crown against Sandy Saddler of New York, former champion, in the New York Yankee Stadium Friday, September 8. The other signing made official Ray Robinson's defence of his Pennsylvania middleweight title against Jose Basora at Scranton, August 25. The date was changed from August 23.

Bob Paffrath, halfback with Ottawa Roughriders last year, is reported to be driving to Edmonton to try out with the Eskimos of the Western Interprovincial Football Union.

L. J. H. Gunn, of Toronto, has been elected president of the Canadian Cricket Association, meeting in Winnipeg. He succeeds W. E. N. Bell. Matthew Dodds is new secretary-treasurer.

Ontario and British Columbia meet today to determine the Dominion cricket tournament championship at Winnipeg.

Both teams have won four games. Ontario Friday won a low-scoring game by five wickets and one run from Alberta. Finalssores were Alberta 32, Ontario 33 for five.

The other game was close. After Manitoba made 97, B.C. came from four runs behind as the last man went in to end with 98 and one wicket to fall.

Manitoba and Alberta will also play off today for third spot.

Daintry Chisholm, of Royal Montreal, won the Quebec women's golf championship Friday, defeating Mrs. G. Pyke, of [illegible] club, 3 and 2.

Coin Flip Makes Dr. Stanton Winner Of Race

By JACK SULLIVAN

TORONTO, Aug. 12 (CP)—Dr. Stanton, nine-year-old bay gelding that cost Lindy Fraser, of Forest, Ont., $500 four years ago, and developed into the greatest money winner for a gelding pacer on the North American continent, won the $15,000 Canadian Cup Friday—by a flip of a coin.

The gelding that "looked like a truck horse" to Fraser when he first saw it, ended the two-heat race in a tie with Linda's Boy, owned by Mrs. William J. Tillner, of Warsaw, N.Y., and driven by Lorne Tolhurst, of Tillsonburg, Ont. Dr. Stanton won the first with Linda's Boy fourth. Their positions were reversed in the second heat.

Officials of the Thorncliffe Raceway, sponsors of the 42-day harness racing meet wich ends August 19, decided to toss a coin to determine the winner. Mrs. Tillner called it heads—the half dollar landed tails on the paddock grass and the $2,500 cup went to Dr. Stanton and Fraser, veteran of 30 years' driving on Canadian and American tracks.

Largest Purse

The $15,000 purse was the largest in the history of the sport in Canada and a crowd of about 10,000 saw the event.

The winning owners each received $3,437.50 and it brought Dr. Stnton's lifetime earnings to $118,600.

Dr. Stanton went to the post at 6-to-5 odds in the one-mile first heat. He was far back for a half mile, made his move on the last turn and won going away in a blazing stretch drive. The Diplomat, owned by the Pineridge Stables of London, Ont., was second, a nose ahead of Royal Man, owned by Ed Cobb, of Washington Court House, O., and driven by Bill Rouse.

Far Off Record

Dr. Stanton's time for the mile was 2.06 2-5, far off his two-minute flat record, but Fraser said he was "coasting" at the finish.

The gelding was a prohibitive 1-to-3 favorite for the second dash over 1 1-16 miles with Linda's Boy at 7-1. It was Oro G Herbert, owned by William H. Herbert and Son, of London, Ont., Linda's Boy and Dr. Stanton for the first half but positions changed quickly on the final bend.

The three were bunched on the rail and at the finish it was the American-owned horse by half a length in front of The Diplomat which charged up on the outside. Sam Hy, owned by Wes Litt, of Stratford, Ont., and driven by Harold Wellwood, was third by a neck over Dr. Stanton.

Petes Trounce Lions

Petes trimmed Lions 12-5 in peewee lacrosse yesterday. Davis and Coombs slipped in goals in the first from Mountney and Rogers. Coombs, Kent and Davis hit it in the second with the former and Kent assisting for Petes. Reid and Trudeau were snipers for Lions with Ellis and Parry aiding. Kent got two and Coombs one for Petes in the third, Rogers aiding once, as Ellis hit the mark twice for Lions. In the fourth, Kent and Coombs each scored two, Kent and Davis having an assist each. Teams:

Lions: Chapman, Riel Ellis, Reid, Parry, Moffat, Patterson, Trudeau.

Petes: Heffernan, Roberts, Kent, Davis, Coombs, Rogers, Mountney.

Referees: B. McDougall and J. Fitzgerald.

Crescents Trim Athletics 21-6

By The Canadian Press.

Owen Sound Crescents are all alone on top of the Ontario Senior Lacrosse Association series again today.

The Crescents vanquished their nearest challengers, St. Catharines Athletics, in convincing 21-6 style Friday night It gave Crescents a full game lead over St. Kitts and Peterborough Petes who defeated Brampton Excelsiors to move into a second-place tie with the Athletics.

Owen Sound were ahead all the way, with St. Catharines' usual late kick coming too little and too late to do anything Doug Gillespie played a fine two-way game for the Crescents with one goal and seven assists.

Top goal-scorers were Jack Mason with five, and Rusty Slater with four for the winners. High-scoring Jimmy McMahin had two for Athletics.

Colborne Defeated By Cobourg Team 5-4

COBOURG, Aug. 12.—Weens Jamieson had enough left in the seventh inning here Friday night to get the last two men to face him with the tying run on base as Cobourg Legionnaires whipped Colborne Dodgers, 5-4.

Jamieson struck out 11 and gave up nine hits. Cobourg won the game in the first frame when they got to Bill Ball for all their runs off four hits.

Tommy Hogan and Fred McMillan led the winners with two for four, while Frank Ball, with three for four, was best for the losers.

COACH BAMFORTH WILL BE IN CHARGE OF THE MEETING!

Bickford of Braves Pitches First No-Hitter Since 1948

By JACK HAND,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Vern Bickford's no-run no-hitter first in the majors since 1948, may be the spark to ignite another pennant fire in Boston.

No longer do the Braves field customers chant that old refrain "Sain and a day of rain." Their 48 pennant formula is outdated.

Bickford, once No. 3 man behind Johnny Sain and Warren Spahn, can hold his own with the best, giving Billy Southworth a strong 1-2-3 pitching punch.

Five games behind the league-leading Phillies, the persistent Braves have a good chance to make the grade. After they finish with the dazed Brooklyn Dodgers tomorrow, they move into Philadelphia for two vital games.

Walking only four, the 29-year-old Bickford allowed but one to reach second base

Barney Victim

Brooklyn, whose Rex Barney pitched the last no-hitter against New York, Sept. 9, 1948, was the victim.

Carrying a 7-0 lead into the ninth, Bickford wavered momentarily. He walked pinch-hitter Jim Russell. After retiring Pee Wee Reese, he walked Gene Hermanski, sending Russell to second base. But Duke Snider rapped a double play ball to shortstop Buddy Kerr to end the game.

Bickford's 14th victory came at the expense of Carl Erskine, making his first start since his recall from Montreal.

The Braves clipped a full game off the Phils' lead when New York's Sal Maglie knocked off the pace-setters 3-1. Al Dark's two-run homer and an inning of wildness by soldier Curt Simmons gave the Giants their 18th triumph in their last 21 games.

Ewell Blackwell, Cincinnati right hander, held St. Louis Cardinals to four hits and left them in fourth place, 6½ games behind the Phils. The Reds took it 5-2.

Dump Pittsburgh

Chicago defeated Pittsburgh 3-1. The Pirates who just broke a 10 game slump Thursday, scored their lone run on Danny O'Connell's homer.

Everybody fattened up on the second division clubs in the American except Detroit and Boston. The Tigers were held to a split at St. Louis and lost ground all around.

Dizzy Trout bested Ned Garver for a 4-3 Detroit victory in the opener when Don Lenhardt dropped a throw on a possible double play ball in the 10th inning.

Outfielder Ken Wood cut down two consecutive runners at the plate in the second game, won by the Browns 2-1. Although he held St. Louis to five hits, Hank Borowy lost his first start as a Tiger.

Edge Chicago

Cleveland moved to within three games of Detroit by shoving across two runs in the ninth to edge Chicago 3-2.

Joe DiMaggio rode the bench and his sub, Cliff Mapes, hit a seventh inning home, that gave New York a 7-6 edge over Philadelphia. The Yankee Clipper was benched by manager Casey Stengel who said he was "dead tired." DiMaggio has missed many games because of injuries but this was his first benching.

Cuban Sandalio Consuegra stopped Boston with six hits to give Washington a 5-2 triumph.

Montreal Edges Syracuse 2-1

By The Associated Press

The never-say-die Montreal Royals are back in the thick of the International League pennant race, 3½ games behind Rochester.

The Royals edged Syracuse 2-1 Friday night to move up. Clyde King bested lefty Jim Prendergast. Each gave up six hits, but Prendergast contributed to his own defeat, committting an error that allowed Montreal to pick up a first-inning run. In contrast, King drove home what proved to be the winning tally in the fifth inning.

Buffalo handed Baltimore a setback in its fight for second place by sweeping a doubleheader from the Orioles, 7-6 and 8-7. The twin losses left Baltimore two games behind Montreal.

Springfield also won a doubleheader, downing Toronto 3-2 and 16-0. The Cubs ssored 10 runs in the seventh inning of the nightcap. Ed Oswald smacked a two-run homer for Toronto in the first game.

Jersey City spanked Rochester 10-3, aided by Stan Jok's three-run homer in the fifth.

Galloping Ghosts Have First 1950 Workout

COBOURG, Aug. 12.—Robert Cooper, coach of the Cobourg Galloping Ghosts, sent his squad through the first workout of the season here Thursday night. Thirty candidates worked the two-hour session of the running, passing and calisthenics. Four backfielders from Trenton, three of them members of the RCAF, brightened the drill.

Most of last year's team will be back except for flying wing Ireland Quigley and middle Ernie Austin. The latter has joined the active service and Quigley has retired.

The Ghosts will play with Dundas Bombers, Peterborough Panthers and Oshawa Red Raiders. The team will depart from double wing style this season and will adopt the T formation.

Peterborough Churches in Review

Grace United

Pages of time were leafed over on Friday night, November 17, 1948, when the dedication and the first worship service of the Grace United Church were held. It brought back memories of the same ceremony more than 40 years ago when the mission church of St. James was a tent.

The service was under the direction of the Rev. E. E. Pugsley, of Norwood, then chairman of the Peterborough Presbytery. The Rev. M. J. Aiken, of St. Andrew's Church, conducted the dedication service. Assisting were the Rev. Dr. D. Bruce Gordon, of Trinity Church, the Rev. H. G. Douglas, of Knox Church, the Rev. A. A. Partridge, of Mark St. Church, the Rev. George Murray, of Keene, chairman of the Home Missions committee, and the Rev. E. W. Rowland, the pastor of the church. R. W. Harrison, the builder in charge, presented the keys to Mr. Aiken who presented them to Mr. Pugsley.

The Rev. J. R. Lang, M.C., was the guest speaker. He was assistant secretary of the Board of Home Missions.

At the service Mr. Rowland received the keys from Mr. Pugsley. Mr. Rowland predicted that the church would be a centre of power in the community. Its Sunday school started with only 10 pupils and now has 110. Rev. Rowland now has 150 families on the calling list.

The church cost $7,000 to build and the property was donated by the Hon. G. N. Gordon.

BURNED IN 1923, the senior temple of the Salvation Army in Peterborough was rebuilt the same year and opened in 1924. The fire occurred on January 10, 1923. The temple is still on its original site on Simcoe St.

Mark St. United

The Rev. J. W. Butcher, minister of the Peterborough Circuit of the Bible Christians Association, held the first regular preaching services of Mark Street Church in the Ashburnham town hall in 1871.

On Sunday, January 21, 1872, the first service of the congregation, organized by the Rev. G. H. Copeland, was held in the town hall. The church was built and dedicated in September 1872.

In June 1873 Mr. Copeland was succeeded by the Rev. William Quance starting a series of ministers to hold the pulpit. Ministers since 1900 have been J. A. Moore, A. L. Thompson, J. G. Lewis, C. H. Coon, C. E. Cragg, a Mr. Phillips, R. A. Whattam, G. Ross, R. Bamforth, R. T. Richards, A. E. Thornley, C. D. Daniel, E. W. Rowland, A. M. Partridge and at present B. S. Morwood. Mr. Morwood succeeded Mr. Partridge after Partridge had served for two years.

Under the pastorate of the Rev. J. E. Moore the old church building was redecorated and a basement constructed for a social and Sunday School purposes.

The lot upon which the present church was built was purchased during the pastorate of the Rev. C. E. Cragg. The Rev. R. T. Richards was the first minister when the United Church was formed and was followed in July 1927 by the Rev. A. E. Thornley under whose pastorate the present church was built.

The work on the new church began in August 1928 and the building was opened on March 3, 1929. The general contract went to T. E. Ephgrave. The Rev. Dr. J. W. Pedley of Toronto was the special preacher for the opening ceremonies, assisted by the Rev. J. E. Moore, and Rev. Thornley.

George St. United

George Street United Church is among the pioneer churches of Peterborough.

The first church was built in 1834, a small frame building, on land granted by the legislative council. The site is described in the deed of the grant as Lot 1 and 2 north McDonnel Street and west of George Street.

The increase of the congregation soon required another and larger church. This was built in 1844. The older building was redecorated and used as a parsonage. It served the pastors for a number of years until 1895 when the Rev. W. R. Young was pastor and the new parsonage was erected on Water Street.

An increased congregation demanded a larger church, and in 1874 the present one was built. The cost was $60,000. The architecture was modelled after that of the Metropolitan Church in Toronto and erected by the same builder. The spacious basement was used for social functions and a Sunday School until it became necessary to erect in the 30's a modern building immediately north, joined to the church building.

Pastors of the church have been: 1835, John Black, Wiliam Deverell; 1936, John Armstrong, Hugh Montgomery; 1837-1839, Anson Green; 1840-1841, William Davidson; 1842, Asa Hurlburt; 1843, William Coleman, William Darlington; 1844, Thomas Darlington, Robert Demorest; 1845, S. P. Ladow; 1846, William McCullough, Thomas Cleghorn; 1847 William McCullough, Joseph Slater; 1848, George Goodson, Charles Turner; 1849-1851, Isaac Howard; 1852-1853, John Gemley; 1854-1856, William Poole; 1857-1858, William Scott; 1859-1860, Henry Lanton; 1861-1863, John Carroll; 1864-1865, James Brock; 1866-1868, Joshua Johnston; 1869-1871, George H. J. Thomas; 1920-1925, W. Harold Young.

Since Rev. Young's time the ministers have been: J. E. Todd J. E. J. Millyard, who just celebrated 50 years in the ministry, Maxwell C. Parr, and H. L. Roberts. Mr. Roberts resigned in September, 1944, due to ill-health. During the period from September to November, Dr. J. R. R. Cooper, a retired minister, assumed the preaching duties. Dr. James Semple then became minister, with Dr. Cooper assisting.

St. James' United

An epoch was marked in the history of Methodist congregations in Peterborough on Sunday, March 28, 1909, by the dedication of St. James Methodist Church. The sermon was preached by the Rev. J. P. Wilson of Lindsay while the service of dedication was read by the Rev. R. McCullough of Omemee, president of the Bay of Quinte conference.

The trustee board was composed of A. W. Cressman, B. F. Ackerman, D. W. Dumble, W. G. Morrow, G. E. Rawlings, A. E. Prest and a Mr. Stabler.

The quarters on Aylmer St. near Romaine St. were soon too small and an organization meeting was held to arrange the building of a church.

On Sunday, April 27, 1917, the new church was formally declared open. The old church building was used as a Sunday School but so co-ordinate with the main building that the division could not be noticed. The church is situated at the southeast corner of Aylmer-Romaine streets.

The architecture is of Gothic design, the plans prepared by William Blackwell and the entire construction carried out under the supervision of Harold Fry. Through the generosity of Trinity Church the pews, organ, electroliers and some of the windows were presented.

The building committee was composed of the Rev. Benjamin Greatrix as chairman, A. E. Priest, W. G. Morrow, B. F. Ackerman, A. W. Cressman, F. Kitney, Henry Robinson, Thomas Brown, Alvah Wilson, J. O. Fife and Samuel Deyell.

The minister serving the church have been H. M. Manning, J. G. Brown, John N. Clarry, Benjamin Greatrix, E. F. Chapman, J. Douglas Richardson, J. H. Dudgeon, Anson Moorhouse. The present minister, the Rev. F. W. Craik has been with the congregation for the past 14 years.

St. Andrew's United

Rev. J. M. Roger, a pioneer clergyman of the Church of Scotland, was sent to Canada in 1833 as a missionary. He settled in Peterborough and organized the first congregation, the original St. Andrew's Church.

On May 30, 1835, a grant of land was made and the church fronting on Brock St. was erected in 1836.

The disruption of the Church of Scotland took place in 1843 and the pastor with the majority of the congregation declared themselves in sympathy with the new Free Church.

In 1857 the growth of the congregation combined with a formal order from the Church of Scotland compelled the members to evacuate, eventually forming the congregation of St. Paul's.

By this separation St. Andrew's pulpit was left vacant. This vacancy was filled by the Rev. James Douglas. Then followed the Rev. D. J. MacDonnell who was ordained in 1866. His pastorate closed in 1870 when he was called to Toronto.

The Rev. K. McLennan succeeded Mr. MacDonnell and remained until 1876. During his pastorate the congregation voted to enter the union of church in Canada in 1875, thus separating from the Scottish Kirk and becoming a member of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

On June 29, 1877 the Rev. Alexander Bell succeeded Mr. McLennan and Mr. Bell in turn was succeeded by a Rev. Alexander McWilliams. The Rev. J. G. Potter, the next pastor, remained with the congregation until 1910 when he accepted a call to a Montreal church. The pulpit was then filled by the Rev. James Rollins, who during the First World War served overseas as a chaplain. In his absence the Rev. T. H. Mitchell and Rev. W. L. H. Rowand supplied. Mr Rollins resigned in 1924 and the Rev. James Gordon was called. He served until 1928 when the Rev. Charles V. McLean was called. The present minister, the Rev. M. J. Aiken, came to Peterborough in 1945 filling the vacancy left by the Rev. Dr. E. W. Young who was inducted into St. Andrew's in 1937.

The congregation used the old stone church until 1884 when it decided to build a new church. In March of the next year the old church was torn down and the building of the new one commenced. The laying of the corner stone took place on June 25, 1885 and the church opened in December.

In 1913 a new organ which was one of the marvels in the city at that time was built into the church. In 1917 the entire church was redecorated and in 1924 a modern Sunday school was built.

In June 1925 the congregation joined the United Church of Canada.

St. John's Anglican

St. John's Anglican Church started when the first settlers were building homes for themselves.

The setlers' religious needs were met by the Rev. Samuel Armour who was born in Londonderry, Ireland, and was a graduate of Glasgow University. In 1820 Mr. Armour came to Canada with his father and Sir John A. MacDonald.

On his arrival in York he discovered no Church of Scotland and so took orders in the Church of England. He was ordained in September 3, 1826, by the Rev. Charles James Stuart, the Bishop of Quebec, in the parish church in York. That same year he came to Peterborough as the first headmaster of the government school. The building, on the grounds of the present Central school, was a plain log structure serving the double purpose of a school and church.

Mr. Armour was later appointed rector of St. John's Church in Cavan and was succeeded by the Rev. R. H. D'Olier as rector of Peterborough. Mr. D'Olier's health failed during his four years here and he returned to Ireland where he died in 1839.

During Mr. D'Olier's time plans were made for the erection of a church. Tenders calling for the construction appeared in 1831 in the Cobourg Star. The contract was awarded to Joseph Scobell for the sum of £1,200. A private subscription of £100 permitted a clock to be installed in the tower.

The first subscription list was dated November 23, 1833, containing the names of 100 persons. The corner-stone of the church was laid in 1835 and four years later the building was completed on the site of the present church.

The land was granted to the church through the influence of the ablest men in the district, the most of whom at that time were Anglicans. These grants took the form of certain deeds which were handed over to the trustees of the church on November 5, 1835.

Th Rev. C. T. Wade succeeded Mr. D'Olier and in turn was succeeded by the Rev. R. J. C. Taylor, a resident of Peterborough some time prior to his appointment.

Mr. Taylor was known as Parson Taylor because of his genial personality.

The Rev. Mark Burnham, a native of Cobourg, took charge of St. John's Church in 1852. He never was inducted as rector but served three years. Mr. Burnham retired then to conduct missionary work in the settlements of Otonabee and Warsaw. During his time a pipe organ was installed in the church.

On his resignation his place was filled by the Rev. J. W. R. Beck, in 1856. His pastorate was the longest in the history of the church. During his time the church debt was wiped out, the Sunday School erected, the church renovated and a chancel added and the new seats installed. In 1882 a new organ was installed, the choir properly vested and the grounds laid out in their present condition. Mr. Beck died in 1889.

The Rev. Canon J. C. Davidson, joined by the Rev. C. B. Kendrick as assistant, took the place of Canon Beck. Canon Davidson went overseas in World War One as chaplain of the 93rd Battalion from Peterborough. He served actively in the hospitals of France and England. During his absence the Rev. Canon Cornish, of Yorkton, Saskatchewan, took over the duties.

In 1920 Canon Davidson was appointed Archdeacon of Peterborough. He was succeeded by the Rev. R. C. Blagrave who served as vicar until the death of Mr. Davidson when he was made archdeacon. In 1936 Archdeacon Blagrave exchanged parishes with the Archdeacon of Hamilton, the Rev. W. P. Robertson who is still with the parish.

Rebuilding Of A Nation Requires Men Of Vision

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

The Old Testament books of Ezra and Nehemiah tell the story of two men of vision and courage who led an exiled people from Babylon back to the Jewish homeland. It is also the story of the rebuilding of Jerusalem.

The great story has a present-day aspect for Jews once more are seeking to fulfill their age-long dream of living in the historic Holy Land. In that ancient time many Jews remained in Babylon, where they had established roots in their exile, and gained considerable prosperity. There they built so strong a Babylonian Judaism that it lasted until the 11th century A.D.

Similarly many Jews of today will continue to make their contribution to the lands in which they are so well established. But the homing instinct is strong in some, and thousands of displaced persons still dream of finding a secure place in a Promised Land.

Let me recall briefly the events leading up to the life and work of Ezra and Nehemiah. The Northern Kingdom of Israel was established after Solomon's death, when 10 tribes rebelled under Jeroboam.

One hundred years later the armies of Babylon overwhelmed the Southern Kingdom of Judah and carried most of the people to exile in Babylon. A vivid account of that exilement is to be found in Psalm 137.

The best things in life are sometimes valued only after they are lost and the Israelites in exile recounted the sins of the past and their failure to heed God's command and call.

When King Artaxerxes inquired as to the cause of the evident sadness of his cupbearer, Nehemiah, he found this devout Jew troubled over the desolate state of Jerusalem. The king commissioned Nehemiah governor, entrusting him with power to lead an expedition there.

Nehemiah was a soldier, a man of action, and a man of spiritual devotion as well. The great spiritual leader in the movement of restoration, however, was Ezra.

Ezra, a revivalist at heart, championed the rediscovery of the "Law of the Lord." Through public readings of the Law and organized worship in the Holy City, Ezra launched a successful movement against the idolatry in certain high places.

It is unfortunate that the detailed achievements of Ezra and Nehemiah have not been recorded in a chronologically clear order. Through the centuries scholars have found the two books difficult to read because of vague references to time and circumstance.

It is my opinion, however, that the first expidition failed. I beleve the later work of Nehemiah made reconstruction possible, as well as the religious revival and the national restoration.

Minor details, though, are unimportant beside the actual achievements of these great leaders, who accomplished their purpose in spite of delays, enemies, and countless frustrations. The devotion of Ezra and the courage of efficient Nehemiah, triumphing in a great era of Jewish history, combine to form an inspiring story.

Father Just Over Operation Lives In Tent With Wife, Five Children

Living north of Buckhorn is a man, his wife, and five children, ranging in age from two to 16. Their home is a tent for which there is no floor. The husband, Reg., is 42 and just out of hospital a week after a kidney operation. The wife is not working steadily. In two more months, the nights will be colder, and Reg. will have advanced no farther with his plans for a house.

Puts Trust in God

Reg says he isn't worried. "I've put my trust in the Lord, and he'll see us through this," he said.

Inside the tent is a clutter of furniture and a hard dirt floor, covered here and there by rough planks and bits of carpeting.

Two of Reg's daughters are carrying papers "to help fill the breadbox." On Friday afternoon, Reg's wife was helping out at one of the summer resorts. But it was only an afternoon job.

Reg didn't know when he'd be able to get up and work on his house. He has most of the lumber waiting in Buckhorn. He owns the lot his tent stands on. But until he is well enough, he can't build for his family.

Until this spring, Reg and his family lived in a house on the lot next to the one the tent is on. The owner of the house died, and his executors sold it, and Reg had to leave.

Neighbors Will Help

His neighbors say they'll have a building bee when Reg is well enough to help out a bit. They realize he can't do it himself now. But Reg still has to get a job when he gets well.

He's done just about everything. Since he came out to Canada in 1924 from England, he has worked as a cook and a blacksmith in lumber camps; a fireman on boats and as man-of-all-work. Until shortly before his illness he was working in a factory in Peterborough.

Reg said "I told my son this spring that nothing could come between me and building my home. But I guess I was wrong. I guess that's how the Lord shows us he is still around."

Change Of Heart

"I used to be a regular hellion," he said. "I'd be out with the boys, drinking, and such like. But about two years ago, I saw it wasn't getting me anywhere, and I settled down and put my heart in the Lord."

He lifted his Bible from the bed, and said, "I keep that there all the time."

Though Reg's faith is strong, his flesh is weak. Not a tall man, he has lost more than 30 pounds from his formerly solid frame. His left knee is stiff and he can barely walk.

He said he hadn't been past the door of the tent since he had come back. "Every time I think my leg is better, I walk a bit, and then the pain comes back worse than before. That's what I wanted fixed when I went into the hospital in Peterborough. But they said my kidney was causing the trouble."

Seven Weeks in Hospital

Reg stayed seven weeks in hospital, and a week ago Friday he was told he could go home. He stayed two days more and then came back to Buckhorn. His incision is still draining and according to his doctor, will drain for an indefinite period.

"I haven't got much pride left," said Reg. "I'll try anything, I guess. I've had lots of experience. I ought to be able to find work somewhere."

Reg doesn't know where he's going to work. He doesn't know when he'll be able to start on his house. And by the time he finishes his house, winter will be here. That is, if he gets it started in time.

No Special Work For Canadians In Korean War

OTTAWA, Aug. 12 (CP). — Present plans do not call for special training for Canada's new brigade and it will adapt fighting methods to any battle area where it happens to be sent, Brig. John M. (Rocky) Rockingham said on Friday.

The man who has been chosen to lead the force to Korea or elsewhere told newspapermen that the 5,000-man force will be designed to fight with other units—not as a lone, commando-like force.

It will get regular infantry training in Canada and will use Canadian weapons, though he would like to see it equipped with the new U.S. tank-busting bazooka. Everything possible will be done to whip it into shape as quickly as possible.

As for the possibility of the special force ever seeing Korea, he said if some one could tell him how long Korea will last he might be able to supply the answer.

"My instructions are to train this force and take it to fight in Korea or wherever it is sent," he said.

Weighs Answers

The tall, rangy, 38-year-old brigadier from Victoria, who led the Highland Infantry Brigade in the Second World War and once destroyed a German machine-gun nest single-handed, met the press in the lounge of the parliamentary press gallery. He wore his tartan dress uniform and weighed his answers carefully, explaining with a broad smile that he was just back in military harness after four years of civilian life.

Leaving the Parliament Buildings after the press conference, Brig. Rockingham ran into Field Marshal Sir Claude Auchinleck, who is in Ottawa on tour with a group of British schoolboys. He had never before met the famed British desert commander and they chatted for a few minutes.

As they parted, Sir Claude wished the big Canadian soldier well in his new assignment.

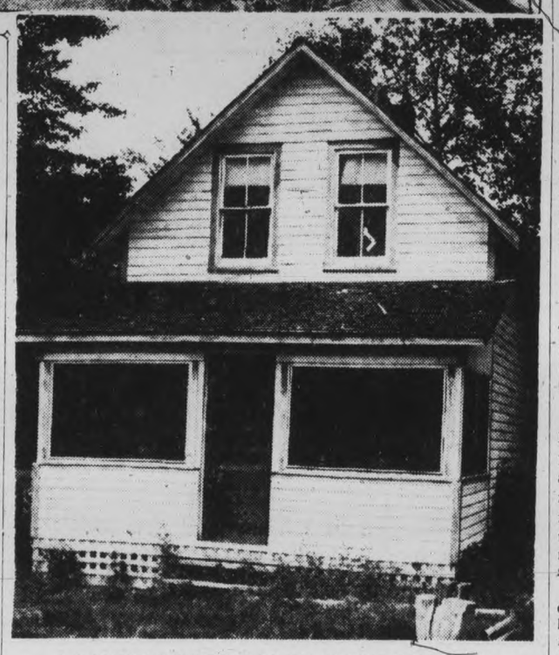
At his conference, Brig Rockingham was asked if he had seen a statement by E. D. Fulton, Progressive Conservative M.P. for Kamloops, advising men not to volunteer, but to hold out for general conscription of manpower. Brig. Rockingham said he did not agree with that view.

Right To Volunteer

He believed it was "the right of every man to volunteer if he wishes." And he did not think Mr. Fulton's statement has had any effect on recruiting, judging by the response to the army's call.

He said he was pleased to note that about 55 per cent of the volunteers were veterans. With these battle-experienced men, and perhaps a few from the regular forces, it would be possible to train the force more quickly and that was one of the main objectives.

The volunteers would be sent first to regular army training camps. Later—he could not say how much later — they would be gathered together as a force at a central point, probably Petawawa where he may have his headquarters. There they would get final training as a brigade.



A FAMILY OF SEVEN LIVES IN THE TENT shown in the picture ABOVE. The father, released from hospital a week ago, is unable to work. The mother cannot get steady employment, and the only source of income, other than odd jobs the mother is able to find, come from two of the children who carry newspapers. BELOW is the house in which the family once lived. The owner died and his executors sold the house. The father, whose children range in age from two to 16, has lumber ready for a house, but cannot work on it until he has recovered.

Three Charged After Robbery And Beating Up

COBOURG, Aug. 12—(ENS)—Three youths were remanded until Monday on $2,000 bail when charged on Friday with beating and robbing Nicholas Sispatol, of Seymour township.

The accused are Ronald Elliott, 17, Roland Sandford, 21, of Belleville, and Garth Badgley, 22, of Cannifton. The trio is alleged to have stolen $80 from the man near Hoards Station.

Wilfred Ferguson, of Cobourg, charged with a traffic violation, was remanded until Monday, when the case came up in court Friday.

Because he had applied for enlistment in the army to serve in Korea, Douglas Drinkwater, of Cobourg, was remanded out of custody until called upon. Drinkwater was charged with assaulting his wife. Mrs. Drinkwater told the magistrate that things were going smoothly again in their home.

James Quinn, 53, Port Hope, occasioned some merriment in court Friday when he appeared on a drunk charge. It was not his first by any means, and Magistrate R. B. Baxter commented that he was able to note down the particulars from memory. Chief W. Graham, of Port Hope, said that it might be better for Quinn if he were taken off the "list" insofar as beer was concerned and that beer might satisfy his desire to drink without Quinn getting into the heavier type of liquor. Chief Graham observed that Quinn was well behaved and a good worker when sober.

"How long have you been on the list?" enquired the magistrate.

"Just as long as you have been on the bench—nine years," said Quinn.

"That's right," said the magistrate with a smile.

"Well, I am fining you $10 and costs and there will be a request to the Liquor Board to take you off the list as far as beer is concerned and we'll see how it works out. I can't help but think that the beer is going to feel out of place in your stomach after all the stuff that you have poured down there," declared Magistrate Baxter.

Play For Robeson

MOSCOW, Aug. 12. (AP)—A play, depicting the life of American singer Paul Robeson, will be presented here soon. The play, entitled "John, a Soldier at Peace", is expected to portray various episodes in Robeson's life including his appearance at the 1949 Peekskill, NY, rally, which ended in rioting, and the state department's recent action taking away his passport.

TEMPERATURE SLIDES TO 37

The temperature slid to a chilly 37 Friday night and this morning had more the feel of a bright September day than mid-August. By nine a.m. the sun had warmed the air to bring the thermometer up to 66.

Fractures Hip In 15-Foot Fall

In hospital today with a fractured hip and broken wrist is Cletus Sullivan, 27, R.R. 2, Peterborough.

He was injured Friday when he fell 15 feet to the bottom of a concrete sedimentation tank at the new sewage disposal plant.

Onlookers said his grip slipped as he and a crew of other workers were placing machinery into the tanks. Sullivan was on the centre catwalk and working on an angle iron at the time of the accident.

After the accident he was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where his condition is reported as good today.

Centennial Year

Did You Know These Facts?

THAT the saw mills in Peterborough county had a bumper year in 1866, when 50,650,000 feet of lumber passed through the mills. When those employed in the lumber business had taken their share, the remainder was transported to Port Hope, either via Peterborough or by boat or scow to Lindsay and from Lindsay to Port Hope by railroad. At Port Hope it was worth $12 per 1,000 feet.

THAT the Auburn Mills of Peterborough won the Gold Medal of the Dublin Exhibition in 1864 for the best Canadian tweeds and at the Montreal Exhibition a silver medal was awarded for similar cloth.

THAT a wide variety of liquors including a large quantity of Cobourg whiskey was advertised for sale by a hardware and grocery merchant in Peterborough in November, 1847.

THAT four pieces of paper money dated 1836 and 1840 issued by local banks have been discovered recently and placed in the centennial exhibition. One is for 50 shillings and another for 20 shillings, bearing the signature of George Hall, president of the Newcastle District Loan Co. The other, for one dollar or five shillings and $3 or 15 shillings, bear the signature of W. Hamilton, president of the Niagara Suspension Bridge Bank.

THAT the county rate for the year 1866 was $3,207.

THAT in 1832 the rate for Otonabee township, including Ashburnham, was $224. There were 213 houses, a population of 862 and a total assessed value of $46,724.

THAT in 1857 the Otonabee rate had risen to $2,187.

THAT pupils at Union School were presented with cards every week if they proved themselves to be Honor Pupils. The cards were printed and were for no scholar who had received a mark for disorder, absence, tardiness, misdemeanour or imperfect recitation.

THAT this, and a great deal more information about the Peterborough district from the time the early settlers came from the British Isles to the present day, is contained in the centennial exhibition at the Public Library.

Can Shoot Elk Only In North Department Says

The open season on elk has been declared only in the area north of the French and Mattawa Rivers and does not include Peterborough County where they were introduced 12 years ago. Since elk were brought to Apsley and Buckhorn they have reportedly been flourishing and no evidence has been seen here of infection from a parasitic disease which is the reason why hunters are being allowed to shoot them in the northern districts.

Wrong Information

A Toronto paper carried on Friday the intimation that there would be an open season on elk during the deer hunt this fall but since then the Examiner has received the following from the Department of Lands and Forests.

"An open season on elk, or wapiti, has been established in Ontario north of the French and Mattawa Rivers, it is announced by the Hon. H. R. Scott, Minister of the Department of Lands and Forests. Dates will be identical in each area with open seasons on deer. Any person who has bought a deer licence and wishes to try for an elk can get the necessary permit from the nearest departmental office.

"Elk are not common and are present only because of the release of breeding stock some years ago. However, it has been found that each group of elk is acting as a focus of infection of a parasitic disease of deer, and their increase is not desired. Any elk taken by a hunter is likely to be in good shape."

50 Cups Of Tea From One Spoon

CAPE TOWN, Aug. 12.—Mr. Peter Antoniades, a Greek cafe proprietor in Johannesburg, has a secret which if his claims for it are justified, may set the tea industry of India and Ceylon by the ears. He claims to be able to make 50 cups of tea from one spoonful of any kind of tea.

His secret lies in a white powder, his own composition, which he mixes with the tea. He will not reveal the formula.

He recently demonstrated his feat to a newspaper office in Johannesburg. Reporters tasted the beverage brewed by Mr. Antoniades from a teaspoonful of tea, a portion of his white powder—enough to cover a threepenny-bit—and boiling water. They said it was no different from tea brewed in the ordinary way.

"I have been using this process for the past six years," said Mr. Antoniades. "Sometimes I serve more than 600 cups of tea made in this way in one morning and I have never had a complaint."

With the cost of sugar and milk and his overhead expenses, the total cost to him of a cup of tea in his cafe was not more than a farthing.

The price of tea in South African cafes is sixpence a cup.

Cadets Attend Camp At Banff

Cadet Major George Fanjoy, 678 George St., and Cadet Lt. James Sloan, Lakefield, are spending three weeks at the National Cadet Camp, Banff, Alberta.

The Banff Cadet Camp, now being held for the third year is attended by cadets from all parts of the Dominion as a reward for outstanding service with their respective corps during the past three or four years.

Two-thirds of the camp life is made up of holiday activities including scenic tours through the mountains, trail rides, swimming and boating. The camp is situated about five miles from the town on the road to Lake Minnewanka.

For one week of the three, the cadets move out to Bivouac Camp on the Cascade River where training consits mainly of fishing, mountain climbing, exploring, woodcraft and fieldcraft.

Ban 2 More Papers

DUESSELDORF, Germany, Aug. 12. (AP)—Two more Communist newspapers have been banned in the British occupation zone for putting out stories "prejudicial to the prestige and security of the Allied forces." The papers Neue Volkszeitung (New People's Newspaper) and Volksecho (People's Echo) have been suspended for 90 days. Since Aug. 3 six Red newspapers have been suspended by the Western Allies.

Sons of Otonabee Pioneers Broke Land In Harvey, Lie In Sandy Lake Cemetery

By HARRY THEOBALD

A rural community's respect for the dead, and thereby so much more for human life and the brotherhood of mankind, is inscribed on a headstone in Sandy Lake cemetery, Harvey township. The engraved words are: "In memory of an unknown Indian, erected 1949, by Buckhorn Women's Institute".

Workmen in a gravel pit near Lakehurst, a year ago, came upon a skeleton without any mark of identification other than a carved pipe nearby, larger than the average pipe used by present day smokers.

Official examination could only speculate about the circumstances of a death beyond any local recollection, and apparently from natural cause. Opinion assumed that this frame, bleached in the loose gravel, may have been the body of an Indian who died along a path of portage many years ago.

The bones were carefully removed to the cemetery of the Lakehurst section of the township, and the women of Buckhorn's Institute paid for the simple enduring stone. Some day the facts of the finding of that skeleton may be translated to a legend of the cemetery when this generation too has passed away.

It is not a crowded place, this trim burial ground in the centre of Harvey. Its grass is clipped to lawn neatness, a credit to the sentiment of the people who maintain it. Faded flowers on graves that are not of recent spading, reflect an abiding spirit of remembrance and family affection and love that have outlived the years and their intervening cares and distractions.

Then in Back Country

Apart from the graceful and well kept appearance of that little cemetery are some other impressions that may be gleaned from the substantial monuments. Such family names as Essen, Shaw, Renwick, Nelson, Shearer, Thompson, Cameron, and others are strikingly familiar associations with another part of Peterborough. And then it comes to mind that sons and daughters of the first settlers of Otonabee took off to Harvey township, nearly a century ago and later, to make homes of their own on a farther frontier of this county when the distances between township boundaries were rather long journeys. Then, Lakehurst was remote from Keene and Mather's Corners, and the horse and buggy roads were difficult driving.

So, there is a chapter of local history in those gravestones. Another traces to World War II, and briefly cites one family's sorrow, laudable pride, too, it seems, in the sacrifice of its son.

This is the inscription: "In memory of John Earl Chase, son of John Albert and Anne Chase. Born Jan. 4, 1914. Lieutenant in Royal Regt. of Canada. Killed in battle near Regalbuto, Sicily, Aug. 1, 1943, while serving with the 48th Highlanders of Toronto."

Grief still hovers around that splendid granite not only in the bereavement of that family, but virtually of the universal generation that lived in the time of the madmen of Hitler's Germany, Mussolini of Italy, and the oriental end of their Axis in Japan.

That cemetery facing a Harvey township road seems to give fresh value to the price which freedom loving people paid so far from the fading fighting lines beside the Mediterranean Sea.

The land of Harvey township rates agriculturally down the list of Peterborough's rural communities, but with its lakes and

Collegiate Girls Outstrip Boys Grade XIII Exams

Girls ran away with the honors in the Departments Upper School examinations at the PCVS when the results were announced this week.

Four girls each earned eight first class honors papers which meant they had more than 75 per cent in each examination paper. Each slipped once into a second class mark which is a mark between 68 and 74 percent. They were Joyce Beggs, Jessie Blackwell, Margaret Capron and Mary Elizabeth Rowell.

One boy, Fred Green, won eight firsts, but his ninth paper was a third class mark—between 60 and 65.

Another male student, William M. Bigelow, writing 10 papers instead of the usual nine, earned seven first, two seconds and a third.

There were many other firsts won by the 88 students who tried the examinations last June. It is believed when the tabulating is finished, PCVS may have made its best showing in many years.

Jackson Enters Soap Box Derby

Herbie Jackson, 1950 soap box champion, will enter the soap box derby races in Oshawa next Wednesday. Son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Jackson, 166 Parkhill Road east, Herbie will defend his championship won there last year when he triumphed over other contestants to win the invitation meet. Two years ago in the same event he placed second. Richard Miller also of Peterborough, won the championship that year.

As last year the Oshawa Motor Sales and the Oshawa CRA will present the invitation meet as the feature attraction of the Oshawa Soap Box Derby which runs from 9 a.m. until 8.30 p.m. Wednesday. About 12 soap boxes from Peterborough, Hamilton, East York, Toronto and Port Perry will challenge the Oshawa champions for prizes of $25, $20, $15, and $10.

Entries from outside of Oshawa include Lester Robertson of East York and Bobby Jackson, an Oshawa boy who last Monday won the Port Perry championship and who will represent Port Perry on Wednesday. All the out-of-town drivers will be guests at the Oshawa Racing Car Derby dinner after the day's sport.

With a Hamilton soap box car will come a tragic story. The car will not be carrying its driver who won this year's Hamilton championship and whose ambition it was to win the Oshawa invitation event. The boy, 15-year-old Bob Lemmon was stricken with luekaemia soon after the race and died.

Next Wednesday his best friend, Clifford Crosby, 1949 Hamilton champion, will be in the driver's seat seeking the honors for his pal and Hamilton.

2,000 Ontario Men Wanted To Help Store Western Crop

Prairie provinces' farmers will receive assistance with this year's harvest from 2,000 Ontario agricultural workers, William Mellis, manager of the National Employment Service office, announced today.

Already, he added, nine district farmers have registered at the office to go on this year's excursion and any others interested should contact the local office. Applications will be accepted at the office next week.

Pay this year is $6 a day for experienced stookers and higher day rates for thrashers. In addition the men will receive their board. If weather prevents work, the men will receive only their board.

To join the excursion it is essential that the workers make transportation arrangements through the National Employment office. The officials there have the authority to issue warrants covering a portion of the cost of the journey. The transportation portion is issued with the understanding that the men will accept harvest work on the farm to which they are assigned by officials in prairie provinces. This transportation offer will be good for the return trip from October 15 until November 30.

This year 22 western farmers worked in the Peterborough area assisting with the local harvest. Eight Newfoundlanders came east under the same plan. Several farmers have received permission to return home as the work here is nearly completed. The remainder will be returning between August 15 and 30.

Police Deny Reports $11-A-Day Jobs Open

SIMCOE, Aug. 12 — (CP) — Provincial police said Friday there's nothing to reports that $11-a-day tobacco harvesting jobs are available in this southwestern Ontario district.

They said that, with the harvest well under way, practically all jobs are filled. Latecoming workseekers are wandering the streets of Simcoe, Delhi, Langton and other district centres.

Police said some Quebec laborers have complained of paying $20 for a truck ride from Montreal to Simcoe on the understanding that they would get jobs in the tobacco fields at $11 a day plus board.

Has Record Cargo

CHICAGO, Aug. 12 — (AP)— The Wilfred Sykes, largest freighter on the Great Lakes, will dock at Indiana Harbor today with a record cargo of iron ore. The ship, owned by the Inland Steel Company, left Superior, Wis., Wednesday with 18,821 gross tons of iron ore. A gross ton is 2,240 pounds. The load was almost 100 tons more than the previous record, establishd in 1947 when the Benjamin F. Fairless carried 18,725 gross tons.

Movie Column

Reporter Finds He's Missed Movie Scoops

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 12 (AP)— You have to stay alert if you want to keep up with the Hollywood news.

I discovered that this week. I went blithely off on a two weeks' vacation while all heck was breaking loose in Hollywood.

For instance, when I left town Errol Flynn was cooing over the Romanian beauty, Princess Ghika. He swore they would be wed in the fall and he would settle down. Now I return to find Flynn has tossed the princess aside for Patrice Wymore.

Could Reach Far

This is an incident which could have reached as far as the State Department, except for the fact that Romania is Red and the princess is not.

Let's take another news break. A couple of months ago, Betty Hutton broke with her husband, Ted Briskin. For several weeks she acted convincingly gay at various night spots with other men. She took over microphones for song sessions and generally gave a good impression of Mary Martin's mood in the number, "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right out of My Hair."

So what happens? Betty reconciles with Briskin in Chicago.

And Bette, Too

When I left town, Bette Davis had returned from divorcing the voluble William Grant Shelly in Mexico. She declared her reported romance with Gary Merrill was part of the Hollywood fable. Besides, his wife was divorcing him in slowpoke California, which required a year for married couples to cool off.

But—what do you know?—Now Bette is Mrs. Merrill, thanks again to Mexican justice.

All this has confused me no end and I am listening to the broadcasters and reading all the columns so I can catch up.

Workmen Rescued

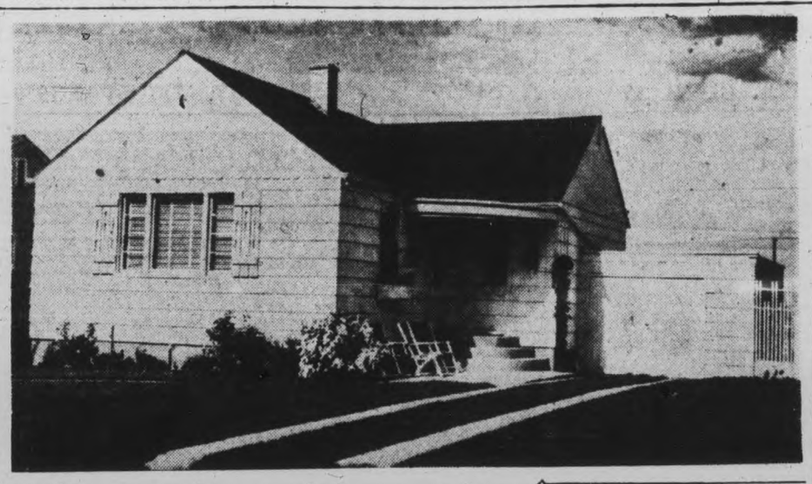
PORT DOVER, Aug. 12 (CP)— A workman was rescued Friday after being buried up to his neck for half an hour in a sewer cavein. Firman Smith and two other workmen were digging a seven-foot sewer trench when the walls caved in. Firemen and public utility workmen dug him out in half an hour.

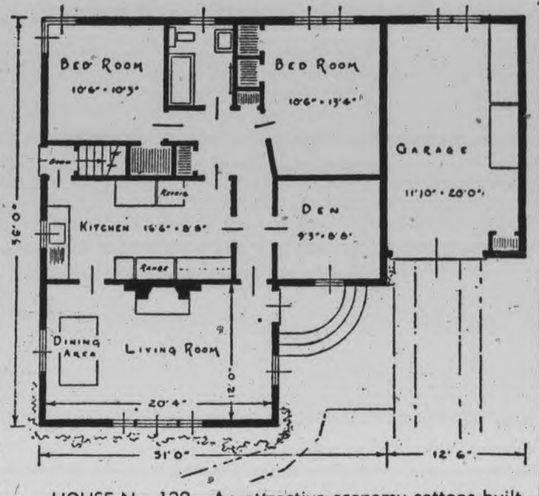
Expensive Game

HAMILTON, Aug. 12 (CP). — A card game played in the back seat of an automobile Friday cost Alexander Pawlo $275. Pawlo said he met two strangers who invited him for a drink. All three got into an automobile. The cards appeared and they started to play a game in which the holder of the highest card wins. One of the men drew an ace and snatched Pawlo's money. Pawlo was ordered out of the car and the men drove off.

Gifts For Zoo

OTTAWA, Aug. 12 — (CP).)— Five timber wolf-pups, 24 chipmunks, and eight raccoons left Canada this week by steamship for Edinburgh, Scotland, the Resources Department announced Friday. The animals are a gift from the Resources Department to the Royal Zoological Society of Scotland for exhibition at the Edinburgh Zoo. The wolf-pups came from Banff National Park, and the chipmunks and raccoons were captured in Georgian Bay Islands National Park, Ontario.





HOUSE No. 129—An attractive economy cottage built of wide cedar clapboards painted white. Gable ends are of vertical boards with "V" joints. Roof and concrete steps are dark red, shutters are pale blue. While the owner who erected the house required only two bedrooms, the den could easily be used as a guest room, or as a family bedroom. There is a full basement, which includes a recreation room. Laundry facilities are handy to the basement steps. Omitting garage the house contains about 15,800 cubic feet. Peterborough Fears American Invasion if they contained refugees, and such arbitrary acts, there were few abuses; only twelve were seized and jailed (quite contrary to law): Wm. Purdy, Wm. Richardson, Jos. Pearson, Jacob Kellar, John Davis, S. V. Wicklin, F. Ferguson, Peter Nix, Chas. Powers, Dr. J. Gilchrist, M. Merriman, Robt. Waller. After a few weeks in jail without trial, they were all released. A group of Cobourg radicals also escaped in a schooner to join Mackenzie's forces threatening to invade Canada.

Early in January 1838 the 4th Northumberland were again called out; of 800 men who gathered at Peterborough from Otonabee, Smith, Douro, Dummer, and Asphodel, Col. Brown of Ashburnham selected 350, fitted them with muskets, ammunition and food, and led them to Toronto with Strickland and Birdsall as Captains; the rest were left as a reserve under Col. Crawford. In six days they reached Toronto and after a rest were inspected by Governor Head, who drew on his imagination in writing later: "On finding a body of the Hon. Peter Robinson's settlers self-assembled in line before Govt. House. . . . I of course went out and thanked them, and told those who had no fowling-pieces that they should immediately receive muskets and ammunition. 'If you Honor will but give us arms,' exclaimed a broad Irish brogue from the ranks 'the rebels will find legs.'" Some were drafted into the Queen's Own Battalion which served until May on the Niagara frontier, but the majority were sent home. When rebels invaded the Prescott area in Nov. 1838, 300 militia were called to Peterborough and drilled by Col. McDonell and Major Cowell until May 1839, under officers Boswell, Benson, Kirkpatrick, Fraser, Murphy, Carver, Ferguson, Strickland, Need, Hall, Brown and Rubidge; Dr. Hutchison was surgeon.

"Tyrant" Sir George Arthur

The British Government compounded its errors in 1838 by sending out Sir Geo. Arthur as governor; Arthur was formerly governor of the convict colony, Van Diemen's Land (Tasmania) 1824-36, where he was notorious as "a most brutal tyrant" while growing rich on land speculation. He carried on Head's campaign against "those perfidious enemies, republican democracy and responsible government." After several executions, the transportation of nearly 100 radicals to Van Diemen's Land, and other persecutions, even the British Government had to rebuke him for brutality. Meanwhile, in May 1838 Lord Durham landed in Canada as Administrator, and prepared his famous Report recommending responsible government and most of the other reforms the radicals had been advocating. The Tories were incensed at this "appeasement"; a Newcastle District Grand Jury in May 1839 declared the Durham Report "a seditious, false and dangerous libel." When Tories and Orangemen tried to break up meetings of the "Canadian Chartists" advocating Durham's reforms, there were fights at Cobourg, Peterborough and other places, but common-sense eventually triumphed over bigoted reaction, as responsible government came in the 1840s. Ten years later, in 1849, it was the Tories who carried their hatred of responsible government and democracy to the extreme of attacking Governor Lord Elgin, burning the Parliament buildings, and demanding annexation to the "republican" United States, only to be defeated by the Canadian people.

B.C. Hydro Dams To Harm Salmon

VANCOUVER —(CP)— Another stand in British Columbia's fisheries-hydro controversy is included in the annual report of BC Packers Ltd.

If the provincial government dams the south fork of the Quesnel river for hydro-electric purposes, the report argues, a portion of the sockeye pack will be destroyed.

The Aluminum Company of Canada's planned power development in the Nechako area is possible without great loss to fishing interests, it says, but adds:

"This is a situation which clearly calls for joint planning and cooperative approach."

Buckhorn Institute Host To Two Branches

APSLEY Aug. 12 —(ENS)— Members of the Apsley and Chandos branches of the Woman's Institute attended the Buckhorn branch meeting on Tuesday.

Those from Chandos were Mrs. E. Tanner, Mrs. V. Tanner, Mrs. S. Johnson, Mrs. A. W. Bott and Mrs. T. Rusaw.

Drowns In Canal

CORNWALL, Aug. 12 (CP) — John Malloy, 21-year-old mill worker, was drowned Friday in Cornwall Canal when he fell from a boat loaded with pulpwood. Bernard Plumador, a fellow worker, jumped into the water in an attempt to rescue him. The body was recovered three hours later.

A Narrow Escape

FORT ERIE, Aug. 12 (CP).— Boys swimming in the Niagara river who cry for help just for fun almost caused the death Friday of seven-year-old Billy Huggins. Billy got in some weeds and called for help. Former reeve Herbert Guess, who said he has often answered cries for help only to find someone is pulling his leg, hesitated to go to the boy's assistance. He finally got out the boat, however, and pulled the exhausted boy to safety.

Good Quality Plastering Needs Expert Workmanship

Good quality plastering requires a proper type of base, careful measuring and mixing of the ingredients and expert workmanship. Metal lath, wood fibre or gypsum base sheets are the most widely accepted bases for plastering and should be applied in accordance with the manufacturer's directions. Plastering should be at least three-coat work over masonry walls, wood lath, gypsum plaster board, fibre board base or metal lath.

Plastic quicklime, hydrated lime or calcined gypsum may be used on all interior work but quicklime should not be used in any work unless it has been slaked for at least seven days. Hydrated lime should stand not less than 24 hours before mixing and using.

Care should be taken to ensure that the base of "brown coat" is made as smooth as possible and all corners properly squared.

The finish coat should be applied before the brown coat is completely dry or after it had been dampened. This consists of lime-putty or hydrated lime mixed with plaster of paris to produce a hard setting material.

The total thickness of the plaster from the face of the lath should be not less than one-half inch. Grounds, which should be set for baseboards and door and window trim, serve as a guide to judge the thickness of the plaster. They are also essential for nailing on the trim when the plastering has been completed.

See Danger Lessening Of Formosa Invasion

TAIPEI, Formosa, Aug. 12 — (AP)—Every day that passes lessens the danger of a Chinese Communist invasion on Formosa this year, informed sources contend.

However, preparations are increasing to meet any assault on this island citadel of Chiang Kai-Shek's Nationalists.

Defence works are being constructed along the west coast facing the Red mainland. New air fields are being built and old ones expanded. Nationalist troops are receiving intensive training.

Architect Helps Translate Your Ideas Into Reality

Very few prospective home builders have adequate experience in planning, construction, legal affairs and finance to carry through the building of a house without additional expense, serious errors and a great risk of wasted time. An architect is trained through schooling and experience to efficiently design, control and direct all phases of building.

As your agent, the architect translates your various wishes and ideas into an effective, efficient and economical structure. Having determined your living habits and requirements, he prepares working drawings and specifications that clearly describe what and how the contractor is to build. He obtains and studies bids from reputable contractors and when approved and accepted by the owner, completes the proper contracts necessary for your protection.

During construction, he acts as an impartial judge of the fulfillment of drawings and specifications and acts as your agent with the contractor. He charges for his fee a very small fraction of the cost of your home and is more than made up by experienced planning and resulting economies.

The Contractor

When your contractor is selected, there should be clear and definite understandings recorded in the form of contract, working drawings and specifications. It is to the advantage of everyone concerned . . . owner, architect and contractor, to have listed beforehand everything that is to be done, furnished and time of payments. Neither should ask nor be expected to give more than has been agreed upon.

A transaction as complex as building a house is almost bound to meet with the occasional misunderstanding. Home building can be most enjoyable when the contractor is expected to do only what is shown in the contract . . . so make it complete!

Heating Systems

Types of heating systems you may choose from include:

Gravity Warm Air: This depends on the principle that cold air is heavier than warm air

Forced Warm Air: Air circulation is boosted by a fan or blower. Cool air is returned through return-air ducts.

Gravity Hot Water: This system depends on the fact that cold water is heavier than hot wate .

Forced Hot Water: A circulating pump circulates the water through the system.

Actual transfer of heat to the rooms may be by conventional radiators, convectors or by baseboard heating. With panel or radiant heating, the heat (hot water, steam or hot air) is transmitted through the floors, walls or ceiling by means of ducts or coils in the construction.

Wiring And Lighting

Electrical systems of a house should be designed not only for present equipment and needs, but also for new appliances that may be bought and installed in the future.

Good home wiring means adequate capacity wiring leading into the house; adequate number of circuits with adequate capacity; adequate number of outlets and switches. There are three types of circuits in the home: general purpose circuits for lighting only; appliance circuits for toaster, vacuum cleaner, etc., and individual equipment circuits for such equipment as electric ranges, clothes washer, etc.

Be sure that you have an adequate number of switches and outlets and that they are conveniently located. Check these items: Ceiling outlets, clocks, radios, range, toaster, waffle iron, refrigerator, mixer, dishwasher, washing machine, attic fan, automatic heat controls, water heating, heating blanket, razor, etc.

The Expansible House

Many families wish to build now . . . but costs prevent them from building the house of their choice. This can be met by designing the plan so as to allow building a small but complete living unit now, leaving necessary provisions for additions at a later date.

Whenever possible, it is desirable to plan for additional rooms to be placed in the rear so as not to display the junction of the two periods of construction. Work the complete plan carefully at the beginning, and the construction of the expanded part will be less expensive.

Storage Space

Nothing is more important to the livability of a house than adequate storage space. Near the front door you'll need a convenient coat closet A place in the kitchen or convenient to it is needed for brooms, mops, and other household equipment. A linen closet is another must. Adrated by closets to obtain added joining bedrooms are best sepasound insulation. Provision must also be made for storage of trunks, storm windows, screens, gardening equipment, etc. This can often be provided with a deep bank of closets across the end of the garage.

Farmer Finds Weather Packet In Field Of Oats

William Hanbidge, RR 3, Peterborough, found a surprise package in his oat field Thursday morning. This package was a heavy cardboard box weighing two and three-quarter pounds, containing transmitter, temperature diaphragm and a wet battery. Attached to the box was a burst balloon, a parachute and several yards of rope.

A message on the side of the box dispelled any fears that Mr. Hanbidge might have had that it was some kind of bomb. According to the message, this meteorlogical instrument was released by the United States Weather Station. It was sent aloft by means of a balloon. It broadcasts back to the station the temperature, pressure and humidity of the air through which it has passed.

When the instrument reaches a height of 12 miles, the balloon explodes and the parachute opens allowing the box to float down to the ground.

Mr. Hanbidge did not see the instrument come down, but he believes it must have arrived sometime during the past three weeks.

Fashion Flashes

Lots and lots of gray flannel this autumn. Gray flannel suits cut on classic lines or softly tailored, with horseshoe neckline and colorful velvet touches have won endorsement from store buyers. Some have matching top coats.

✧ ✧ ✧

The Spanish mood pervades many millinery collections. Small hats, shaped like those worn by performers in the bullring, the sides pointed or curled down, give a Spanish note, aided by such trimmings as braid and ball fringe.

✧ ✧ ✧

Contrast marks many of the finer fashions. An early fall afternoon dress, a one-piece dress of nubby wool, is horizontally striped all the way down by strips of knitted-in silk ribbon knot. Color is deep plum.

✧ ✧ ✧

Time is out in the guise of many pretty watches. For bracelet wear there is a charming gold ornament in the shape of a tiny lantern, one side of which opens to reveal a set-in watch.

✧ ✧ ✧

Bigger than ever alligator bags are forecasted for fall. A new model, almost oval in shape, on a curved, step-down frame, is almost a foot long. It has an extended gusset effect and a little outside pocket.

✧ ✧ ✧

In line for the feeling for reversible clothes, there will be turn-around skirts for fall. Cut on wrap-around lines, these skirts offer a nice twosome of fabrics. A typical number is in taupe jersey and deep brown velveteen.

✧ ✧ ✧

Colorful clothes are ahead for smart wear next season. A new color, wisteria, is used for a silk satin evening suit, the jacket with a horseshoe neckline that reveals a soft pink lace blouse. The pink lace appears under the winged collars and cuffs of the jacket.

✧ ✧ ✧

A steady growth in demand is seen for the hat that offers a good compromise between the tailored casual and the dressy, a sort of softened casual, as it were. Deep loganberry shade is used for a fall hat made with a draped and tucked cushion brim, and a slightly pointed, but otherwise flat crown. Long pheasant quills add line and interest.

✧ ✧ ✧

New beauty marks Alaska sealskin coats for next Winter. New techniques make the skins very soft and very supple, and added to the new mutations is a rich deep taupe that somehow combines deep brown, gray and black.

✧ ✧ ✧

Big season ahead for fine flannel suiting. English flannel for a smart ensemble, the topper in oxford gray, the suit in light gray. The topper has a collar of the lighter flannel, and the suit has dark accents in the form of bandings on the collar and at the pockets.

Blue Otter Coat Is Trimmed In Pink Mink

CHICAGO.—Furs in color? You may think it's just a fad—but wait until you see the quiet richness of midnight blue otter topped with a little neckpiece of pink mink, for instance

Other coats in colored fur, introduced here recently by the Associated Fur Industries of Chicago include pastel mink in soft new shades—ranch, heather, aleutian, kobuk, royal pastel, silverblue, breath of spring and white. short cape jackets of muskrat dyed a moss green in one instance, a soft raspberry color in another.

A brief cape jacket, with buttoned waistcoat, is made from gold Russian broadtail. There are wide, wide, gathered sleeves that can be pusned up.

Scarlet For College

On the novelty side, for college campuses, there is a scarlet mouton, three-quarter-length coat.

Dyers have been working for a long time on these colored furs, according to the executive secretary of the industries. They believe women will like them, just as they have come to like more color in their homes, and in clothing other than furs There's no particular reason, the furriers think, why fur coats should stick to "protective coloration" on city streets and boulevards, though the animals that first wore them needed protective coloration in the forests.

THIS TRAVEL PERFECT SUIT, left, has slim slit skirt of copper corduroy and a dashing belted jacket with new high pockets. The suit comes with matching pillbox. The fur-trimmed suit, right, is an important fashion revival. Persian lamb is used as lavish accent to the pockets and collar of a buttonless topper, swinging over a slim, slit skirt.

JACOBY ON CANASTA

Now that he has taken up canasta seriously and is playing as much canasta as bridge, Larceny Lou is really enjoying the game.

His luck has been excellent and his larcenous plays have been succeeding with monotonous regularity. So far his tricky plays have really been bringing home the bacon.

For instance, here is one that worked wonderfully.

Both sides needed ninety. Lou was the first player and picked up his hand: Joker, deuce, ace, ace 10, 9, 6, 6, 6, 5, 3. The three spot was black. He was the first player and the up card was a king. Lou drew a second five and promptly started his larcenous campaign. It would have been good conservative play to meld joker-ace-ace and play for a normal good hand, but Lou was after bigger fish. He disdained melding and discarded one of his three sixes.

The next player threw a six and Lou's partner a nine. The dealer now took the discard pile with joker-deuce-nine-nine from his hand and threw back the king. This left the dealer with only nine cards. Two of them were the sixes he had taken from the discard pile.

Lou drew another six and discarded it without ever putting it in his hand. This was a typical Lou play. He wanted to convey the definite impression that the one denomination he was not interested in was sixes.

* * *

At his next play the dealer drew from the stock and discarded one of his sixes. Right here is where Lou really showed his genius. He passed up the six without batting an eyelash and simply drew from the stock. Then he discarded his deuce thereby freezing the discard pile. This sensational play was the one really good one made by Lou up to that point. His other plays were brilliant but no guarantee went with them. This was almost guaranteed.

It was a cinch that another six spot would be discarded to Lou soon. Probably the very next round. If not, Lou had one black three for his next discard. Of course, Lou's partner might lose the discard pile, but he was discarding to a man with only nine cards and should be able to play safe.

Sure enough. The six was discarded at the next round. Lou put down his two remaining sixes and joker-ace-ace, took the discard pile which was finally of worthwhile size and was off to a big winning hand.

Victorian Velvet Leading Autumn Parade of Hats

By MURIEL NARRAWAY

LONDON—(CP)—Velvet, sumptously reminiscent of Victoria music-hall days, has moved to the forefront of autumn hat styles.

Panne velvt, plush velvet, ring velvet, plain and cord velvet are used in many colors both for trimming and foundation.

The postilion hat, in snuff-brown felt with high square crown, has a tiny, deep-sided brim trimmed with black velvet. A huge snuff-brown buckle on the front crown frames the wide ribbon-band of black velvet winging out on either side.

Obtainable in donkey brown, deep chocolate, dusty tan, mustard and tangerine, it sits squarely on the head, a perfect topping for deep highwayman collars.

A huge picture hat in black ring velvet has oval brim trimmed centrally with huge white wings.

Boaters

An autumn boater in burnt gold panne velvet is trimmed with a wide black velvet ribbon which finishes in front in a huge winged bow.

Khamseen and black velvet make a bonnet with high front and side drape. A whirlwind ornament rises from the back crown like a conical whirl of smoke.

A white velvet "seashell" rises to a conical crown which supports a black velvet ridge of paradise plumes. The draped side ends in a smaller seashell.

Berets retain their popularity, especially in velvet. The aparche is still popular with many different drapings, and oriental turban styles are lavishly decorated. There are also many clothes and cloche-bonnets.

This year's autumn colors lend themselves especially to the richness of velvet, in such shades as maple glace (a burnt sugar), vintage wine, plum and blueberry, shellblonde, tangerella, orchid and dusky pinks, snuff browns and subtle greys.

Gloves On Hat Unique Note In Paris Styles

PARIS—(AP)—You have to wear your gloves — preferably well stuffed—on top of your hat nowadays to be a la mode in Paris.

French hat designers are showing this unique trimming on the new fall hats now being paraded here.

A hat show given by topflight designer Paulette featured derby-shaped caps with "clenched fists" rising from the crown.

Other highlights of the show were monk's hoods, helmets of feathers surmounted by wings and halo hats worn back to front.

The hoods seem just the thing for an icy winter day. They fit over contrast-colored skullcaps and snuggle around the neck before merging into brief shoulder capes. Paulette makes them in shaved plush, velvet or wool jersey.

Paulette shows a neat line in veils. She uses cobweb fine gold mesh sprinkled with rhinestones for 'mask' veils and fine black tulle spattered with sequins for veils draped with curtains into fullness at each side of the face.

Woman Lawyer Had Tough Time

LONDON —(CP)— Miss Margaret Hyndman, one of the first Canadian women to be admitted to the bar, told British reporters it was a tough struggle.

Twenty-five years ago, the justice who admitted her grudgingly said she would never have a case. If she did, he hoped it wouldn't be tried before him.

Two weeks later barrister Hyndman appeared before the doubting justice, lost her case but won on appeal.

Miss Hyndman, who practises in Toronto, was in London for an international conference of career women.

WOMAN SAVES LIVES OF MEN TRAPPED IN FLAMING COUPE

Miss Cecilia Folkard, of Renfrew, Ont., rescues trio after automobile crashes into tree

1. Three men from Ohio were driving in a coupe over a little-travelled Frontenac county road. Their mission—to find a summer cottage — might easily have ended in tragedy . . . for their car suddenly hit a washout on the narrow road. Out of control, it rolled over three times, crashed into a tree and burst into flames!

2. Miss Folkard, old age pensions investigator for the Renfrew district, was driving behind the Ohio car when the accident happened. Snatching a fire extinguisher from her own car, she ran to the blazing, smashed coupe. In a few seconds she had put the fire out — but the car doors were jammed. The men were still trapped inside!

3. Racing back to her car, Miss Folkard took a tire iron from the trunk and ran back to the wreck. It took cool nerves, great determination as well as physical strength to try open one of the doors and then release the men. We hope to express the thanks of these men . . . and the praise of every thinking Canadian . . . by presenting Miss Cecilia Folkard with The Dow Award.

THE Dow AWARD

THE DOW AWARD is a citation presented for acts of outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Canada Savings Bond. Of Interest to Women

DOROTHY DIX

Many Couples Wed For Yea Don't Really Know Each Oth

One of the most curious things about marriage is that a husband and wife can live together for forty years without ever really getting to know each other. They never have more than a speaking acquaintance and are as ignorant of what their mates really think and feel of the impulses that motivate them, of what lies deep down in each other's soul as if they were casual strangers who were meeting for the first time.

Dorothy Dix

It seems impossible that two people could exist in the close intimacy of marriage even for a month without having penetrated the secret chambers of each other's heart and mind and having a good working diagram of each other's character. But it is not only done. It is a common happening. There are plenty of husbands and wives who never guess the answer to the human riddle to which they are married.

Can't Buy Suitable Gifts

A familiar illustration of this is to be found in the custom husbands have of thrusting checks into their wives' hands on Christmas and on anniversaries with the adjuration: "Buy something for yourself. I don't know what you want." Or, worse still, of wasting good money on buying things for their wives that their wives especially loathe and abhor.

It is incredible that a man should not know his wife's tastes when she talks about them continually and makes them the touchstone by which she lives. It is unbelievable that a man should not know what his wife wants when she spreads hints all over the place about how much she desires a new washing machine or a car or an emerald bracelet. And you can't imagine a man looking at his wife every day for years and years without discovering whether her companion indicated green or black in a frock, and whether she could wear misses hizes or stylish stouts.

As a general thing women are much better acquainted with their husbands than their husbands are with them. Women have had to study masculine psychology, since every wife's well-being and her ability to get along with her husband depended upon her knowledge of his idiosincrasies of temper and temperament, and generally what made the wheels go 'round. It was only by the possession of this inside information that she could manage him, as the phrase goes, and gently and insidiously lead him into doing those things that she wished done and leaving undone those things to which she objected.

Many women, however, are so abysmally stupid that they never learn even their husbands' taste in food or the subjects of conversation that are like a red flag to a mad bull to them or the fact that you sell them any idea if you make the right approach. For it isn't what a wife says to her husband, but the way she says it. It isn't what she does, but the way she does it that makes him eat out of her hand. And any wife who really knows her husband can't turn the trick.

Think Husbands Cold

Half of the unhappiness of marriage, so far as wives are concerned is the direct result of their not being acquainted with their husbands. Take, for instance, the one thing that women shed more tears over than anything else, the one thing that makes marriage seem ashes and dust to them and that is their husband's coldness to them. Their husbands taking them for granted. Ninety-nine women out of a hundred believe that this is proof that their husbands no longer love them.

They are not well enough acquainted with their husbands to see that they are the volcano-under-ice type. The men are dumb when it comes to expressing their feelings. Love-making is an agony to them. They don't know their husbands well enough to realize that they are saying it with pot roasts and cars instead of love talk and orchids, and that they feel that working themselves to death to make their wives comfortable ought to be proof enough of their devotion.

I know a woman who has been in a state of tears half of her married life because her husband likes to tease her and she takes all of his kidding as fault-finding, and she has never seen that it is really humorous petting. And I know another woman who thinks her husband is a tightwad because he is always talking about her extravagance and she knows him so little that she doesn't understand that he wouldn't have her to spend less for the world, and is only calling attention to her finery.

And I know a couple who have been most unhappy together and whose marriage has been a failure, because they are so little acquainted that they do not know that what each desires is to be jollied and flattered and made much of by the other.

The thing that we all crave more than anything else in life is to be understood. What a pity that husbands and wives so seldom really get acquainted.

Crippled Doctor Guides Children

SASKATOON —(CP)— Dr. Ann Carlsen, child guidance director of the Jamestown, ND, school for crippled children, in an excellent example for handicapped children to look upon.

For what she accomplished in her work with crippled children is done under the constant burden of her own extreme handicap.

Dr. Carlsen was born without arms or legs. She handles herself expertly on artificial legs.

She passed through here on her way home from Regina where she attended the opening of a four-week clinic for cerebral-palsied children.

In an interview, she said the crippled child's future depends on the help given by parents. She emphasized that mothers and fathers of cerebral-palsied children should realize their child's illness was no one's fault and that, with patience, work and understanding, these children can be made happy, self-sufficient and worthwhile citizens.

6—In Memoriams

JAMES—In loving memory of Lewis Boyd, who passed away August 12, 1949.
Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here;
Think of him still as the same, I say.
He is not dead—he is just away.
—Ever remembered by father, mother, brothers and sisters.

SUTHERLAND—In loving memory of Mrs. Ernest G. Sutherland, who entered into rest August 13th, 1948.
There's an open gate
At the end of the road
Through which each must go alone,
And there in a light we cannot see
Our Father claims His own;
Beyond the gate our loved one
Finds happiness and rest,
And there is comfort in the thought
That a loving God knew best.
—Ever remembered by husband, daughter Gladys and sister Edith of Winnipeg.

woods it is beautiful country, and the first settlers marked out many a farm that has continued in fertility to this day.

One of the graves is the lasting resting place of Robert Shaw, a reeve of the township for years, and a Warden of the county in 1914 who died in 1929 at the age of 74 years. Beside him is his wife, Janet Nelson who was 45 at her death in 1902.

Capable Administrator

"Bob" Shaw was more than a local personality. He was widely known throughout the county and in the city of Peterborough, a capable administrator and leader whose counsel was regarded with respect by his municipal associates.

His seatmate was Charles Coben of Galway-Cavendish. This may not be the proper place to mention a detail of the country records, but the proof readers of the list of Wardens printed in the annual minutes should see to it some time that his name is spelt correctly.

It may be recalled now without any invidious inflection, for there was none then, that Mr. Coben, warden in the war year of 1915, was of some German descent. At any rate when the county council had passed a resolution authorizing a large grant of the people's money for war purposes, particularly the Canadian Patriotic Fund, it was adopted by standing vote. It was Charlie Coben who sang out as he glanced around the silent half circle of the council chamber . . . "God Save Our Gracious King", and the council caught his cue on the second word.

There are other familiar Harvey names on those memorial stones. Darius Hall, 1880-1938 and his wife, Margaret McKinty; Andrew Shearer, 1854-1928, and his wife Lydia Byram; Absalom Hunt who died in 1916, aged 61 years, and his wife, Martha Jane Hall.

Alexander Thompson, died Oct. 1936 at the age of 89, and his wife Mary Knox Cameron who was 77 at her death in 1935.

John Adams, died in 1908 at 89; his wife Elizabeth Reynolds. William J. Irwin, 1874-1944, and his wife Mary Elizabeth Stewart. George Harrison, 1946 aged 83; John Elliott, died in 1903 at 69 years; his wife Jane Taylor, who died in 1908 also at 69.

Thomas H. Fulton and wife Martha J. Calvert, 1863-1936. W. J. McIlmoyle, died in 1925, and wife Betsy Northey, died in 1929.

John Smith, 1845-1922; and wife Ellen Renwick, 1847-1924. Hector Stevenson 1888-1937; and wife, Sarah Calvert.

James Orr Weir, 1845-1929; wife, Mary Ann Shaw, 1851-1929. Wm. Parse Chase, died April 10, 1915 at 85; wife, Elizabeth Comrie, died May 22, 1919, aged 84.

William Weir, died 1914 at 78; his wife Lydia Nelson, died 1906, aged 63 years.

James Hunt, died 1883, aged 63; his wife Alicia, died 1886 at the age of 56. William Renwick, died in 1886, 78; his wife Ann Clark died 1906 aged 96; "Natives of Scotland".

Archibald Wilson, died Nov. 22, 1915, aged 78; and wife Ann Stevenson, died Oct. 25, 1932, aged 86 years; their daughter Isabella, 52, died 1916; son, Archibald, died Jan. 6, 1945, aged 75; daughter, Agnes, died Sept. 12, 1945, aged 70.

Ann Johnston, wife of Thomas Fortune, died in 1876, aged 36.

B 29's Strike Northern Port

TOKYO, Aug. 12. (AP) — A powerful force of B-29's, striking within 17 miles of Russian territory, blasted the North Korean port city of Najin today with 500 tons of bombs.

It was the northernmost blow American forces have struck in the Korean war.

The raid carried American bombers to within 110 miles of Vladivostok. Najin is just 17 miles from a junction of the borders of North Korea, Manchuria and Russia's maritime territory.

The Superforts came in from sea in formation through a heavy overcast and bombed by radar.

Pilots, returning to their bases in Japan and Okinawa, said they could not see the results of their attack on the east coast port city and railway centre.

The raid was carried out at noon, the day after naval patrol bombers set 10 enemy ships afire off the North Korean coast.

While Allied planes raked and bombed Red communications and troops almost unchallenged Friday, American fliers reported finding an increased number of enemy planes.

The priest, who was on the teaching staff of St. Alexander's College, Ironside, Que., was fishing on the lake at the college's summer camp when in some manner he fell into the water and lost his life.

Father Kittler was born in Mulhouse, Alsace-Lorraine, France, and came to Canada in 1937. He taught history, Greek and philosophy at the college.

NEW DELHI, India, Aug. 12. (AP)—Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabbhai Panel told parliament Friday he had seen a secret Communist party circular ordering a shift to non-violence in order to conserve Red strength for future violent overthrow of India's government. He said this was not due to a change of heart among Communist leaders but to the success of government policy against them.

Bengough Raps Handling OF CBC Newscast

OTTAWA, Aug. 12—(CP)—Percy Bengough, president of the Trades and Labor Congress, has protested the CBC's handling of Canadian railway strike news on its trans-Canada network national news bulletin Thursday night.

In a letter to A. D. Dunton, CBC chairman, Mr. Bengough said the news bulletin was "simply a propaganda broadcast in favor of railway management." Only the views of management on the railway dispute were given.

Mr. Dunton and Ernest Bushnell, director-general of programming for the CBC, now are away on holidays and could not be reached for comment.

Saying that he was speaking for officers and members of the TLC, which has a membership of about 480,000 Mr. Bengough stated:

Said Inevitable

"In reporting the outcome of a meeting between the elected negotiating committee of the standard railway unions and the presidents of the two major railways in Montreal Friday, the CBC told its listeners that the threatened strike on the railways now was inevitable.

"The broadcast did this very effectively by only saying that the union committee had turned down the final offer of the railways and that a meeting to settle details of maintenance and protection of property would be convened Friday.

"The broadcast did not indicate that the so-called final offer of the railways contained almost nothing new and that the second alternative was merely a request to the workers to maintain the status quo, and therefore that the unions were not turning down anything really new.

"The broadcast did not stress the fact that further negotiations are possible through the Department of Labor, and that these may yet avert a strike.

Play Up Gordon

"The moral lecture delivered by President Gordon of the CNR to the union committee, which could not have been better phrased or timed to exhort his employees to take drastic action, was played up on the broadcast.

"No attempt was made to indicate the views of the workers or to suggest that they too, as citizens of Canada and part owners of the Canadian National Railways, have consistently taken a responsible position, and have obeyed and been guided by the laws governing industrial disputes and their settlement to the letter.

"Frankly, the national news bulletin was not a news broadcast in so far as this particular item was concerned. It was simply a propaganda broadcast in favor of the railway management."

OTTAWA, Aug. 12 (CP).—Fire threatened a three-storey apartment building at Booth and Somerset Streets in the west-central section of the city Friday night, but firemen rescued three persons and none of the 50 persons threatened was injured.

The fire was believed to have started in a wooden shed adjacent to the building, which also housed the Royal Bank of Canada and the Larmac Tile Co., neither of which was damaged.

Most of the tenants were able to return to their homes. Extent of the damage or cause of the blaze were not immediately known.

Murphy Property Chosen As Site For High School

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 12 (ENS)—The Lakefield and district high school board decided to make arrangements to purchase the Murphy property as a site for the proposed new high school at the board meeting this week.

Several letters from architects wishing to obtain the contract for building the new school were read and put on file.

Principal R. E. Sutton addressed the board briefly regarding his interview with Smith council. Smith council had wanted to know if the expense at Apsley was justified.

Mr. Sutton said he thought a public meeting should be held and the school area system be explained more thoroughly. Lakefield High School had turned over to the district high school more than $10,000 worth of equipment free of charge.

Chairman M. Tucker said the board would like the approval of Smith and Harvey townships regarding the new school.

The tender of Sherman Pearson to transport pupils from Rockcroft and Lakehurst with feeder lines was accepted, at a sum of $34 a day.

A letter was read from Miss Betty Pearse of the high school staff, asking to be released from her contract as she wished to leave in order to be married. After much discussion the board decided to release Miss Pearse and principal R. E. Sutton was asked to advertise for another teacher.

Present at the meeting were chairman Mac. Tucker, W. A. Bott, Eric Pearson, Allan Clark, E. H. Northey, Clayton Fitzgerald, Max Wilson, principal R. E. Sutton and secretary Miss Grace Yonge.

OWEN SOUND, Aug. 12 (CP).—Owen Sound Friday took steps to place its productive resources at the command of the federal government for Canada's new defence program.

Industrialists met and agreed to compile information stating the work city industries are prepared to handle.

The meeting followed a telegram to the Prime Minister by Mayor E. C. Sargent immediately after Mr. St. Laurent's broadcast address on Monday. The mayor assured the Prime Minister that Owen Sound industries were ready to place their resources at his disposal.

The Prime Minister expressed appreciation of the pledge and interest in acquiring data on industrial potential here.

He died in a Lindsay hospital Sunday after a short illness. He was never married and leaves one brother, Joseph Dorgan of Downeyville, and one sister, Mrs. Michael O'Neill, of Toronto.

Canadian Market Needs Planning

LONDON, Aug. 12 (CP) — A British manufacturer, summing up a sales drive in Canada, said Friday the North American markets needs as much planning as the wartime attack on the fortress of Europe.

Philip Priestman, manager of a company in Hull, Yorkshire, which specializes in earth-moving equipment, described the company's experiences after demonstrations in Toronto and Vancouver, in a special report to the British Board of Trade. He said these were some of the lessons learned:

1. Canadians like to "meet the boss" and tend to be suspicious of anything that does not conform to American practice.

2. Britons are tired of being told that first-hand investigation, prompt replacements and American standards of service are necessary, but these must be kept in mind or Canadians will think British manufacturers are just "playing" with the market.

3. The Prairie Provinces have a greater appreciation of the dollar problem than Ontario and Quebec, where British goods often compete directly with those of American manufacture.

4. There is a sensitive feeling in British Columbia that manufacturers spend too much time on the east coast and in Ontario.

Priestman concluded by saying that the company now regards Canada as "a new and growing outlet."

Good Long Shot?

LEICESTER, England —(CP) —A plane taking four men to the races overshot an airport, plowed through a hedge, crossed a road and ended up in a ditch. Passengers and pilot climbed out unhurt and continued their journey by road.

New Industry

ST. JOHN's Nfld (CP) — The schooner Mary H. Hirtle is on her way to the northern coast of Newfoundland to bring back a shipment of Labradorite. The material, found only on the island, has been found excellent for making costume jewelry and it is hoped a new industry may be developed.

Fewer Houses Finished For Occupancy

OTTAWA, Aug. 12—(CP)—The construction gangs have been working on more houses this year than last, but they haven't as many of them ready for occupancy.

The Bureau of Statistics reported Friday that 29,441 dwelling units were completed in Canada during the first five months of this year, a drop of 3,000 from last year's corresponding figure.

At the end of May there were 58,130 units in various stages of construction, compared with 53,533 a year ago.

On the other hand starts were made on 30,084 units, compared with 29,671. Quebec led the field here with a total of 11,588 starts in the five-month period as against 8,486 in the corresponding period last year.

Slowing Up

A total of 9,306 new dwellings were begun in the five months compared with 11,291 in 1949.

Starts in Newfoundland totalled 290; Alberta 3,052 against 2,959; New Brunswick 834 against 524.

The other provinces follow with last year's corresponding figure in brackets: British Columbia 2,724 (3,446); Manitoba 954 (1,385); Saskatchewan 690 (775); Nova Scotia 612 (761); Prince Edward Island 34 (44).

More houses were completed in Quebec this year than in the first five months of 1949. But in Ontario it was another story where only 9,925 units were completed in the five months compared with 11,605. Quebec's total was 9,934 against 8,768.

RCAF Plane Forced Down Near Warkworth

WARKWORTH, Aug. 12 — An RCAF 'plane made a forced landing Friday afternoon in a field three miles west of Warkworth.

Flight Cadet Kenneth Gordon McCrummanon, stationed at Trenton, was on a routine flight when he was forced to land. He was uninjured and the plane only slightly damaged.

RCAF authoriteis said engine trouble caused the pilot to make the forced landing.

Family Escapes Burning House In Night Attire

CAVAN, Aug. 12. (ENS) — Three children escaped in night attire with their parents when a house in Cavan village burnt at 3 a.m. Friday.

The building was a double frame house owned by Harry Braithwaite of Michigan, who was occupying the south part and Mr and Mrs. Frank Buck and three children occupied the north part.

The Buck's home was destroyed by flames, only a little furniture from the living room being rescued, but the part occupied by Mr. Braithewaite suffered damage from smoke only.

At 3 a.m. Mr. Black awoke to find the house filled with smoke. He roused his wife and children and went downstairs to find a blaze in the fireplace, which had been boarded up. The flames crept up to the bedroom and all the bedroom furniture was lost.

The Millbrook fire brigade was called and neighbors helped rescue some of the furniture from the first floor.

Quebec Represented At Defence Parley

QUEBEC, Aug. 12—(CP)—Premier Duplessis announced Friday the Court of Social Welfare, created by legislation adopted at the last session of the legislature, will go into operation next Wednesday.

The change was part of a general overhauling of laws governing rehabilitation of juvenile delinquents. The Social Welfare Court replaces juvenile delinquency courts.

The premier also announced that Quebec will be represented at a conference in Ottawa Aug. 21 on civil defence problems. The purpose of the conference is to study methods of protecting the civilian population in the event of war, he said.

Contributions to the provincial government committee for the relief of fire-wrecked Rimouski and Cabano now amount to $812,691, the premier said. Payments have already been made from the relief fund to homeless in Rimouski busy with reconstruction, he said.

Family Court Plays Preventive As Well As Remedial Role

The Family Court held its first sittings in Peterborough on December 20, 1946, and since that time it has played a vital role in the social legislation of this city. In addition its duties and responsibilities regarding juvenile delinquents, the administration of family court includes a wide range of domestic relations.

At its inception, the city council and county council agreed to mutually take care of the financial support for this court. At that time Magistrate W. R. Philp KC was appointed judge. Miss Rachael Young, Superintendent of the Children's Aid Society and the other members of the staff were made probation officers.

Juvenile Delinquents

Perhaps the most important part of the work of this court is its handling of cases of juvenile delinquency. In 1908, the Canadian government passed the Juvenile Delinquent Act authorizing the provinces to set up juvenile courts. In Ontario, the term juvenile delinquent is applied to children between the ages of seven and 16 who have broken the law. In this court the youthful offender is not treated as a criminal, but rather as a potential good citizen who needs advice and guidance rather than imprisonment in a state institution. Through the capable handling of cases of delinquency, the probation officers have done a great deal to decrease crimes by youthful offenders in this city.

Due to the increasing social consciousness, more and more parents are seeking the guidance of the court in handling unruly children. In this way, the court is beginning to play a preventative as well as a remedial role.

According to the family court report for the year 1949, the number of children dealt with officially by the court under the Juvenile Delinquent Act was 39. Twenty-three children were on probation at the end of the year, 54 had completed probation and four were sent to training school.

The court also has under its jurisdiction the administration of the Children's Protection Act. In this regard, the court acts closely with the Children's Aid Society. When a child is proven to be neglected, he becomes a municipal ward, and the municipality is responsible for his maintenance until he reaches 16 years of age. At present 104 children are either temporary or permanent wards. Five of these children are in the shelter, 62 are in boarding homes, 21 are in homes pending adoption and 16 are earning their own living or in special types of institutions.

Attend Summer Camps

Service clubs in the city have contributed a great deal in helping these children lead healthy and normal lives. This year $450 has been donated so that some of these children might be sent to summer camps.

The Family Court is divided into two sections. The juvenile court is held in the magistrates office every Friday morning. The public is not allowed to attend these sittings and all information is withheld from the press. In this way many difficulties both in children's and domestic problems are aired and cleared up which might otherwise develop into serious situations, due to the fear of publicity.

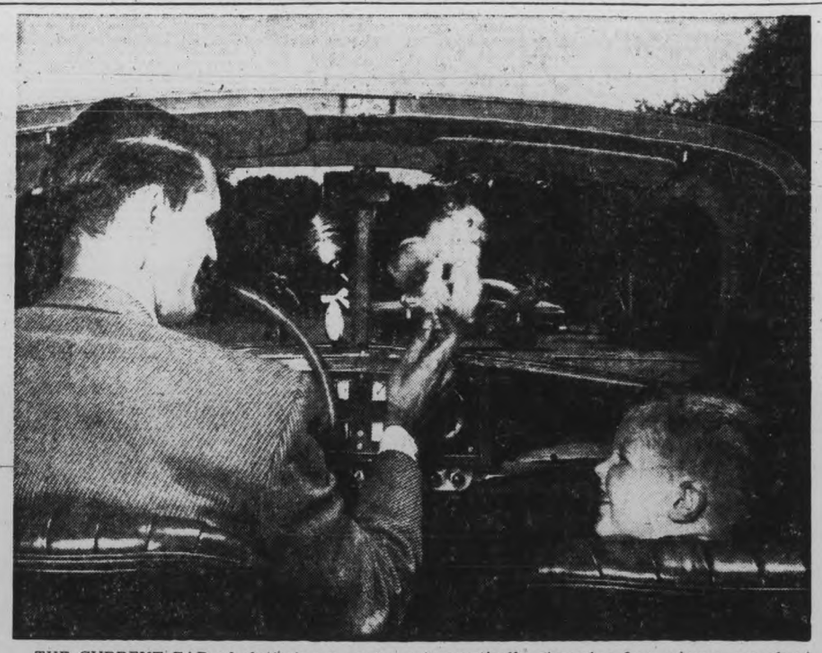
Previous to the inception of the family court in this city, the public was only disallowed at juvenile hearings. Cases involving adults were open to the public. During the past year, 91 adults were dealt with officially by the court. The greatest single variety of cases coming before the court were applications for maintenance by wife or children under the Deserted Wives and Children's Maintenance Act. Sometimes the airing of problems in front of a sympathetic independent person clears up the trouble and normal family relations are resumed.

Maintenance Payments

In the event that separation follows, arrangements are made in the majority of cases for maintenance payments through the Children's Aid Society. In this way constant check can be made to make sure that payments are made. In 1949, $3,761.09 in payment was made through the Children's Aid Society.

In and out of court the probation officers role in juvenile and adult family problems is increasing in Peterborough. People are voluntarily approaching the probation officers with their problems before they become serious enough to be taken to court. In this way advice and help can be obtained from people who are genuinely interested in children and adults and are equipped with a high degree of professional skill.

The personnel of the Peterborough Family Court are Magistrate W. R. Philp KC, who is the judge and the following probation officers: Miss Rachael A. D. Young, John R. Twigg, Miss M. Ballantyne, BA; Miss Clara Morris, RN; Mrs. M. McGuire, MB, ChB; Miss Ethel Patterson, BA; Mrs. W. Fleming, and J. J. Fleming, JP. Members of the Family Court Committee are: Mrs. J. H. Eastwood, Rev. J. Killen, Dr. R. M. Mathews, William Darling, Arthur Bacon and W R. Philp KC.



THE CURRENT FAD of cluttering up automobile dashboards and windshields with fuzzy gew-gaws, perhaps to amuse children, presents a serious hazard to good vision and safe driving, say traffic safety experts. The monkey-doll dangling in front of the driver's eyes along with spring-mounted birds, dolls and other gadgets, is practically obscuring from view a car about to enter the highway just ahead. A moment earlier it would have completely obscured two people who can now be seen walking across the road. Besides getting in the driver's line of sight, these dangling doodads, being made so that they jiggle all the time, add greatly to the strain of driving a car.

Hockey Player Breaks Back

KING, Aug. 12—Bill Wilkinson, 20, Aurora hockey player, suffered a broken back early Thursday when his motorcycle skidded off the road throwing him into the ditch. A second passenger on his bike, Bill Starkey, 20 also of Aurora, was unhurt.

Wilkinson lay in the ditch an hour and a half after the accident before Starkey was able to summon aid. The injured youth was taken to the York County Memorial Hospital in Newmarket.

The accident happened on the King-Maple highway. Wilkinson, driving the motorcycle with Starkey riding the pillion seat, apparently skidded on loose gravel and went off the road. Both men were thrown from the bike to the ground.

Starkey, noticing his friend's serious condition, walked into King, but was unable to rouse a doctor. He finally got a taxi to take the injured youth to hospital.

Rural Area Fire Truck Exported By Britain

BRACKNELL, Berkshire, England —(CP)— Soon to be exported to Canada is a new streamlined fire truck now being tested by 12 part-time firemen.

Bracknell, a small market town, was chosen for the tests because of its frequent heath fires—record number for one month being 50.

A feature of the new truck is a water tender with 450 gallons capacity, invaluable in districts where a water supply is limited.

Truck Skids, 2 Die

DELHI, Ont., Aug. 12. (CP)— Two persons died when their truck skidded off No. 3 Highway near here Friday night. Dead are Ross Ryerse, 24, and Donald McLeod, 19, both of Port Dover, Ont. Says Britain's Tin Pan Alley Not Back Number To New York

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON, Aug. 12 —(CP)— People who think that Tin Pan Alley is a street in New York should brush up on their geography, says publisher Charles Forsythe.

The truth is, contends Canadian-born Charlie, it's in London.

This is Charlie's way of saying that he thinks the boulevard where popular songs are born is Denmark Street, a narrow alley in London's Tottenham Court Road district.

"Britain has a Tin Pan Alley, a very big Tin Pan Alley," said Forsythe, going strong on the BBC as a crooner and comedian. "My own opinion is that we've got some of the best song writers in the world, if people only knew it."

But nobody ever hears of British songsmiths — because Britain lacks North American "know-how" in song-plugging and publicity.

Has Ax to Grind

Forsythe, a native of London, Ont., who grew up around Woodstock and Paris, Ont., admits that as a song publisher he has an ax to grind. But in case you think he plugs Denmark Street for purely personal reasons, he notes that his own office is in Soho Street.

He says that since he went into the publishing business two years ago he hasn't touched an American tune.

"Maybe we haven't got a Berlin or a Gershwin, but we've got some boys who can really knock a number together."

Asked to name his top five in the British Isles, Forsythe selected Tommy Connor (Wedding of Lili Marlene), Art Noel (Sally), Michael Carr (South of the Border), Tolchard Evans (Barcelona, Lady from Spain) and Harry Parr-Davis (Pedro the Fisherman).

Carr Co-Author

Carr also co-author of the lyrics for the Harry Lime theme in the movie "The Third Man." He did "Dinner for One, Please James" and collaborated on "Hang Out Your Washing on the Siegfried Line."

Some hits published over here by Forsythe include "A Kiss and a Rose" and "Heart of Loch Lomond."

Forsythe came to Britain in 1934 as part of a song-and-dance team, and decided to stay. His wife, Addie Seamon of New York, formed part of the act and still appears with him on a weekly BBC program.

Attlee Plans To Hear 2 Arguments

Opposition Leaders Get Chance To Press Parliament's Recall

LONDON, Aug. 14—(AP)—Conservative leaders Winston Churchill and Anthony Eden will present their arguments to Prime Minister Attlee Wednesday for an early recall of parliament to take up urgent defence problems.

Naming the date for the conference followed demands by both the Conservatives and Liberal leader Clement Davies to cut short the Commons' summer recess.

Attlee has summoned parliament to return Sept. 12. The opposition leaders want parliament to convene within a week or 10 days.

In a letter to Attlee made public by the Prime Minister Sunday Churchill wrote that the date fixed by the government "bears no relation to the crisis and the facts that are before us."

Attlee replied that the letter did not disclose any particular reason why an earlier date should be chosen and invited Churchill to call on him to expand on his reasons.

The government's position is understood to be that its plans for a switchover from peace production to meet the demands of a $3,400,000,000 three-year rearmament program could not be completed before the September recall date.

How Cold Can It Get? Scientists Learn

Have New Gadget Which Will Make It 460 Degrees Below

OTTAWA, Aug. 14 (CP). — How cold can it get?

The National Research Council has installed new equipment which will get it just about that cold.

"That cold" is absolute zero—about 460 degrees below, Fahrenheit—and the equipment is a gadget called the Collins helium cylostat, manufactured at the Research and Engineering laboratories of Arthur D. Little, Inc., in Cambridge, Mass.

The reason it gets so cold is that the gadget liquefies helium, one of the hardest of all gases to liquefy. The temperature in this process goes down to 456 below—just four degrees short of absolute zero.

The equipment, according to an NRC announcement, "provides a readily-available source of very low temperatures for the study of chemical and physical reactions." This apparently means that at the low temperatures, lab experiments work better because they are not disturbed by "thermal agitation" or room temperatures.

"When matter is so cold that molecules almost stop moving, many strange properties appear," the announcement said. "If an electric current is started in a metal ring, it will continue to flow indefinitely, with the ring showing no electrical resistance.

"Liquid helium at low temperatures has no viscosity at all, so that if a beaker of it is set to swirling it will continue to swirl for a very long time. For this same reason, it will creep up the sides of the beaker and down the outside, so that it appears to dribble out of the bottom. Many materials change their color at temperatures close to absolute zero. Just why these things happen scientists do not know, but they hope to find out eventually."

Significance of extreme low-temperature research is indicated by the 1949 award of the Nobel Prize in chemistry for work at temperatures close to absolute zero.

Seen Alone Wednesday In Restaurant

Without His Glasses 2 Co-Workers Report To Police

TORONTO, Aug. 14—(CP)—Two girls said today they talked to Alfred P. Greene, missing Toronto teacher, the day after his bloodstained automobile was found abandoned in east-central Rosedale ravine.

The 38-year-old High School teacher and Mrs. Beatrice Reason, 31, former night-school pupil of Greene's, vanished about the same time last Tuesday night. Bloodstains in the car suggested to police that they might both have been slain, possibly by someone bent on stealing the $200 Greene was thought to be carrying in his wallet.

The girls who claim to have seen Greene Wednesday afternoon are employees of a weekly newspaper for which Greene had worked as a part-time collector.

The girls, whose names were not made public, said they saw Greene eating in a restaurant on Yonge Street in North Toronto. Both talked to him. They said he was alone at the time.

Without Glasses

They mentioned that he was without spectacles. This puzzled police, for Greene's wife had told them Greene could barely see without spectacles.

A broken pair of glasses, identified as Greene's, were found in the abandoned car, along with Greene's torn wallet, a haversack and a shaving outfit and toothbrush.

The girls said they had worked in a newspaper office with Greene and were positive of their identification. They volunteered their information to the police after reading that Greene was missing.

Police also learned that the attractive Mrs. Reason, whose fourth husband is a bricklayer, had been planning to return to her native Australia. She came to Canada from London, England, where she was a barmaid when she was married to Frank Reason.

Green left his wife and four children at a Lake Simcoe summer cottage at 7.15 p.m. last Tuesday saying he was driving the 75 miles to Toronto to meet an insurance agent.

Police, questioning Greene's friends, discovered that Mrs. Reason had also vanished.

Planned Trip

During the weekend police said they learned Greene and Mrs. Reason had planned to go away together last Aug. 1 but had revised their plans. They also learned that Mrs. Reason had visited a doctor to obtain sedative tablets. She complained that they were not strong enough. When the doctor declined to give her stronger pills she had accused him.

King Curbs Margaret

LONDON, Aug. 14—(Reuters)—The King and Queen have put down "stern parental feet" on the activities of 19-year-old Princess Margaret and decreed that she must not have so much publicity, says a gossip columnist in the Sunday Pictorial. The new policy forced the Princess to cancel at least two dance engagements recently, the writer says.

Use Underwater Bridges To Cross Naktong, 60,000 Reds Likely Attack

Badly Outnumbered U.S. Troops Digging In After Gains At Changnyong; Enemy Still Pouring In Reinforcements

TOKYO, Aug. 15—(Tuesday)—(AP)—Thrusting underwater bridges across the Naktong river, the North Korean Reds probed today for an imminent drive in Taegu by an estimated 60,000 men on this fifth anniversary of Korea's liberation from Japan. A summary issued early today by Gen. MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters placed the threat near Waegwan, 12 miles northwest of Taegu, main forward American base on the central front of South Korea.

There, it said, the Reds were believed to have completed a second underwater bridge. Such stone and long crossings are sunk about a foot below the surface to escape detection from the air.

Twenty-three miles south of Taegu, the United States 24th Infantry division counter-attacked and shoved the Red 4th Division back 1,000 yards to a mile. MacArthur's summary, however, said the enemy still was moving reinforcements to the river's east bank in that sector southwest of Changnyong.

The greatest threat, however, was around Waegwan, where the Reds were assembling their largest force.

It is believed to be the most effective mass drawn from 15 divisions—150,000 men—the Communists had shoved up to the long, curling battleline. And it greatly outnumbers anything the Allies have to oppose them.

A Red attack down the Taejon-Taegu mountain valley corridor was expected momentarily. Tuesday is the fifth anniversary of the liberation of Korea from Japan. Such anniversaries are likely occasions in Oriental reckoning for demonstrations of strength.

As the North Korean thousands assembled west of the Naktong River, American troops recaptured muddy slopes on the Allied eastern side of the stream from some of the 12,000 Reds who crossed the river at Changnyong 23 miles south of Taegu.

Ask Negotiations Start At Once For Joint Army

STRASBOURG, France, Aug. 14 (CP) — Constantin Tsaldaris formally proposed today that Western European governments begin immediate negotiations for a unified army.

He asked the European council's consultative assembly to entrust its president, Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, with carrying out the first preliminary steps.

Tsaldaris, former Greek premier, urged the assembly to "start the machinery in motion" for creation of the army proposed by Winston Churchill before the assembly last Friday. Spaak endorsed the plan and the assembly speedily approved it. Churchill, Britain's wartime prime minister, had warned there is "not a day to lose" for Western Europe to arm itself against Soviet aggression.

Spaak would be asked to adopt whatever procedure he judged best to enlist the support of the heads of national parliaments. The parliamentary leaders in turn would be asked to put pressure on their respective governments to carry out Churchill's proposal.

The parliamentary leaders would demand:

1. Immediate negotiations between the various Western European governments to adopt necessary measures for creating a unified European army.

2. Special sessions of parliament, if necessary, to back up the proposal.

3. Drafting of a convention, subject to quick ratification by parliaments, setting up the statutes of a European defence ministry.

Tsaldaris said both Spaak and Churchill had expressed interest in his proposal. The Greek leader added that it would be a short-cut to immediate creation of a European army.

Princess Pays Surprise Visit To King, Queen

LONDON, Aug. 14 — (AP) — Princess Elizabeth, expecting a second baby any day now, played with her son, Prince Charles, on the lawn of Clarence House today.

After 15 minutes with the little Prince, who is 21 months old today, the Princess retired into her four-storey home.

The King arrived at Balmoral, Scotland, for his annual grouse-hunting trip. Arrangements were made to telephone him of the new baby's arrival. The Queen remained in London.

Sunday Princess Elizabeth left home to lunch with the King and Queen. This surprised the crowds who had been waiting outside for word on the new baby.

Philip Takes Wife

With her husband Prince Philip at the wheel of their new green Rolls Royce, the Princess drove the short distance from Clarence House to Buckingham Palace.

Only a few bystanders saw the Royal Couple leave, but word spread fast and when Princess Elizabeth returned to Clarence House early in the afternoon, thousands stood cheering in the sun-lit mall.

In High Spirits

The Princess waved cheerfully. She was dressed in a summer frock and appeared in high spirits.

A few hours earlier she had been visited by Sir William Gilliatt and Sir John Weir, her physicians. Buckingham Palace said it was a routine check.

The King and Queen previously had cancelled their annual summer visit to Balmoral to await the birth of Princess Elizabeth's second child.

Boat Capsizes In River 4 Drown, 6 Others Saved

LONDON, Ont., July 14—(CP)—Four persons died Sunday when a pleasure boat capsized at Springbank Park about 400 feet east of the pumping station on the Thames River. Six other persons were rescued, police said, and three of these were taken to Victoria hospital. The dead are Mrs. Agnes Klein, 53, of Mitchell; Mrs. Elizabeth McElroy, about 50, Seaforth; Andrew McLellan, 55, of Seaforth, and Robert Wilbur Jenkins, 22, of Quebec street, London.

It was a day of tragedy on the Thames. An hour before the Springbank upset William Edward Langford, 13, drowned at the Komoka bridge on the Delaware road when he went to the rescue of a younger brother.

Others in the boat which capsized at Springbank were Mrs. Ruby Apel, of Sebringville, Mrs. Andrew McLellan of Seaforth, Miss Beatrice Bannister, of Wilton Grove, all three of whom are recovering at Victoria Hospital;

Carl Ryan, 38, of London, driver of the boat; Eric Hodgins, 16, of Lucan; Ira Grosbeck, London, were rescued by occupants of the pleasure boats.

Orders Inquest

Dr. A. R. Rougledge, coroner, said he has ordered an inquest and joined the investigation in accordance with their authority under the Navigable Waters Act. Ryan said there were only seven passengers in the boat, and himself as operator.

But provincial police said they had the names of nine passengers and Ryan as driver, for a total of 10 on board.

The boat was a 17-foot, inboard motor type, and police said Ryan was operating the boat, taking picnickers on cruises.

Gordon Perry, of McClary Ave., London, said he was a passenger in a boat which had just loaded at the small loading dock about one quarter mile west of the Springbank pump house.

Bow In Air

"I looked up the river and saw this boat which seemed to be standing on its stern, its bow in the air," Perry said.

"A woman was driving our boat and we started at once to the rescue. We had 10 kids in our boat.

"We took one woman on board (Mrs. Klein). She was floating face up on the water when we arrived. We had to move the kids into the stern to make room for her and when we put her into the bottom of the boat, we did what we could for her by way of respiration, but there wasn't much room."

Leopold's Wife Goes To Belgium

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Aug. 14 (Reuters) — Princess de Rethy, commoner wife of King Leopold of the Belgians, arrived here by air from Geneva today.

Leopold was believed to be aboard the Belgian air force plane which few from Brussels to Geneva early today, picked up the Princess and took off again immediately for Brussels.

Elaborate precautions were taken at Geneva to keep the Princess's departure a secret.

Prince Baudouin, 19-year-old Belgian Regent, and his 16-year-old brother Prince Albert drove to the airport to meet the plane, which also carried Princess Josephine - Charlotte, daughter of Leopold by his first wife, and Prince Alexandre, Princess de Rethy's first child.

The beautiful 34-year-old Princess is expecting a baby — her second—early next year.

The arrival at Brussels was a secret and armed police barred reporters from entering the airport.

A mad automobile chase through the streets of Brussels followed the Princess' arrival. The Princess was sped away from the airport by a convoy of four Royal cars, chased through the streets by reporters' taxis.

The race continued all the way to Laeken Palace, as pedestrians stood by and gape.

Plane Takes Off On New Tokyo Airlift

VANCOUVER, Aug. 14—(CP)—A Canadian Pacific Airlines' plane took off from here early today to start the new Vancouver-Tokyo airlift.

The big Canadair carried 33 United Nations officials, all civilians.

CPA said that, contrary to original reports, United States troops have not been assigned to the complementary airlift. Officials said latest word from U.S. authorities was that only civilians would be carried by the company's two airlift planes.

The Canadian Government had asked CPA for two of its three Canadair-fours. The planes were not chartered but the government arranged to give top priority to United Nations officials for all 36 seats on each plane.

CPA said it did not yet know when the second plane would leave for Tokyo.

SARNIA, Aug. 14 — (CP). — An attempted murder charge against James Walter Clarke, 25, accused of the shotgun wounding of his fiancee, was reduced today to one of wounding with intent to murder. Clarke was remanded in custody to August 21.

His fiancee—23-year-old Florence Helen Anderson—is in critical condition in Sarnia General Hospital with wounds from a 12-gauge shotgun.

Police said Bruce Stanley of Strathroy was attempting to persuaded the girl to return with her mother and him to Strathroy Sunday night. Clarke was said to have punched Stanley during an ensuing argument.

4 Mountain Climbers Seek Missing Heir

LONE PINE, Calif., Aug. 14 — (AP).—Four veteran mountain climbers lowered themselves over the east face of Mt. Whitney today in a last-hope search for Christopher Smith Reynolds, tobacco-heir son of singer Libby Holman.

The climbers plan to search remote ledges and crevasses and, if unsuccessful, will remain on the country's highest peak overnight and start anew tomorrow.

The other phase of today's rescue operations will see the removal by basket and ropes of the body of Reynolds' companion.

The frozen body of his companion Steven Rice Wasserman, was found in a snowy crevasse at the 11,500-foot level Sunday, a week after the two 17-year-olds set out to conquer Whitney's toughest side.

Find Sabotage On 2nd Carrier

LONDON, Aug. 14 (Reuters)—The Press Association today reported that damage was done to the gyro-compass on the Royal Navy aircraft carrier Theseus and sabotage is suspected.

The Theseus, due to leave for Korean waters Friday, is docked at Portsmouth naval yard where other suspected sabotage has occurred in recent months. She was to have left Portsmouth today for a trial run.

The news agency said damage was done to the electrical leads of the carrier's gyro-compass.

A naval spokesman said: "We can confirm that defects have been discovered during a routine examination of the gyro-compass installation.

The defects were easily repairable with the ship's resources."

In Korean waters the 18,000-ton Theseus will join the British carrier Triumph whose aircraft have already been in action.

The Theseus, completed in 1946, has a complement of 850 men, excluding airmen. She is capable of 25 knots and carries 25 aircraft.

New Proposal In Rail Strike

MONTREAL, Aug. 14 (CP)—Although the Canadian railway scene remained quiet today a Canadian labor leader has offered a proposal that may interest the railway and union officials enough to postpone the Dominion-wide strike set for August 22.

President Percy Bengough of the 480,000-member Trades and Labor Congress said today at Ottawa that if the railway companies fixed some definite date on which the 40-hour week asked by the unions would become effective it may make some difference in the union's decision to strike August 22.

Liquor Runner Serves 3 Months In 40 Days

TORONTO, Aug. 14 (CP) — The case of Frank Perry, Windsor liquor-runner who served a three-month jail sentence in 40 days—because of a clerical error—is being investigated by officials of the Ontario attorney-general's department.

They said today a decision will be made soon whether he will be required to serve the remaining 50 days.

The clerical mix-up occurred when Perry appealed his April 24 sentence for selling liquor illegally. When the appeal action ended June 27, Perry was taken into custody and transferred to Mimico jail to serve his sentence.

The term should have taken into account the two months Perry was free pending appeal. But by error, Mimico was not informed of this time and Perry was released after serving 40 days.

Fight Manager Involved In Big Racket

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14 (AP) —Frank (Blinky) Palermo, manager of lightweight boxing champion Ike Williams, was the target of a police manhunt today.

Palermo was sought to answer charges of conspiracy, violation of the firearms law and of threat to kill. Police officials said Palermo may be involved in a battle between numbers racketeers.

Inspector Richard Doyle dispatched a call for Palermo's arrest yesterday after two men were held in $10,000 bail each as the aftermath of a gun battle in South Philadelphia.

Sought along with Palermo are James Singleton, 42, described by Doyle as the fight manager's partner in one of the city's largest numbers banks, and Joseph Coffee, 45, said to be the ring's "strongarm man".

Trio Disappears

Palermo and his two companions disappeared following an exchange of pistol shots between two speeding automobiles late on Saturday, Doyle said.

Held by police are Nicholas Marcus, 22, and Patsy Mangiello, 35. Doyle accused Marcus and Mangiello of being numbers writers for what he termed the Palermo-Singleton bank. The inspector said they allegedly were the targets for bullets fired from Palermo's automobile. No one was injured in the Saturday exchange of shots.

Marcus and Mangiello are charged with violation of the uniform firearms act, reckless use of firearms, attempt to kill, conspiracy and keeping and maintaining an illegal lottery.

Doyle said the trouble started over a welshed 75-cent numbers bet that should have paid the bettor $350.

New 'Tiny Tim' Rocket Nasty Surprise For Reds

TOKYO, Aug. 14 (AP) — The "Tiny Tim," a big new American 11.75-inch rocket, was used Sunday for the first time in real combat, Results were reported good.

Fired from a carrier-based United States Corsair fighter plane, one of the armor-piercing rockets knocked out a bridge at Chungju, 90 miles northeast of Taegu, in its first war test, an announcement from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said.

Other Corsairs using the Tiny Tim destroyed 13 enemy locomotives, damaged 25 more, blasted eight cars of ammunition, set two fuel-oil trains afire and strafed seven cars loaded with Communist soldiers.

The Tiny Tim is the second new rocket-launcher introduced in the Korean war. The first was the 3.5-inch, fired by a two-man team—a loader and a holder-aimer. It is fired only from the ground.

Both new ones are outgrowths of the original 2.36 bazooka developed during the Second World War.

Despite its name, said a navy spokesman, the rocket is "neither tiny nor timid." It has high explosive quality. Apparently it is the most powerful rocket-type weapon carried by plane in combat.

A timely change from bad to good weather played an important role in Sunday's air work.

United States and Australian fighter planes poured rockets and machine-gun fire on North Korean troop concentrations in the buildup area around Waegan, 12 air miles northeast of Taegu.

Other enemy targets were hard hit by the Allied planes.

Price Of Bread In City Increased One Cent

Bread prices in Peterborough increased by one cent for a 24-ounce loaf today. Manufacturers said the increase was made because of the rising cost of ingredients.

This change is in line with other Ontario centres which today reported similar boosts in the price of bread. Trent Valley Bakeries in Lindsay and Canada Bread in Toronto were others announcing the increase.

Fall Flat and Double Up If A-Bomb Hits Your Way

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (AP) —Five years after the explosion of the first atomic bomb, the United States government has come out with some specific instructions on what to do if one hits your city.

They are contained in a big book "The Effects of Atomic Weapons" released during the week-end by the Atomic Energy Commission.

Here are some tips:

The first thing to remember is that if a bomb goes off, the burst will be about 100 times as bright as the sun.

Don't worry about recognizing it. One A.E.C. official, in discussing an atomic explosion, told reporters: "If you are not dead already, you will recognize it when it has gone off."

Don't look toward the source of the light.

If you're caught out in the open with no shelter of any kind within a step or two, drop instantly to the ground, and curl up so as to shade your bare arms, hands, neck and face. Hold that position for at least ten seconds.

This will not protect you from atomic "rays"—if they reach your area—but it may save you from a disabling burn from the bomb's tremendous heat, which radiates over a considerable area.

If you are within a step or two of a building corner, a doorway, a tree—or even a trench-like hole in the ground—leap there and take shelter, with your back to the light.

If you are inside a house or other building drop to the floor with your back to the window. Crawl behind or beneath a table desk, counter or other shelter. The closer you are to the interior partitions of the building, the better off you are.

Mao Leaves Peiping For Unknown Place

HONG KONG, Aug. 14—(AP) —A Chinese Nationalist report said today Mao Tze-tung, top Chinese Communist, left Peiping Aug. 11 for an undisclosed destination.

A message to the newspaper Wah Kiu Sat Po from Taipei, Formosa, said Mao left "after receiving instructions from Stalin."

Mao returned to China in February after an extended visit to Russia, which resulted in a 30-year Russian-Communist China alliance.

Reports received by Nationalists in Formosa said some Communist leaders in Peiping had revealed "Mao probably was heading for Mukden, Manchuria, where he was to hold a conference with a group of Soviet military advisers."

Garbage Strike Still Unsettled

HAMILTON, Aug. 14—(CP)—Garbage continued to pile up at the rate of 90 tons a day as some 1,000 city employees went into the fifth day of a strike for better wages and hours.

Biggest of several picket lines throughout the city was at the incinerator. A token line was thrown around city hall; one of the half-dozen marchers carried a sign saying "Forced Out By Jackson' (Mayor Lloyd Jackson).

Local 5 of the Hamilton Civic Employees' Union (CCL) walked off the job Thursday after the city rejected "minimum" demands for reduction of the work week from 44 to 40 hours and for a two-cent hourly wage boost.

Thirty strikers volunteered to dig graves for funerals in two cemeteries but were turned back by cemetery foremen. Mayor Jackson, told of this action, ordered the foremen to let the diggers in.

Shove Koreans Back

The United States 24th Division moving up behind 45-ton Pershing tanks, attacked the river-crossers at dawn Monday. They shoved the North Koreans back from 1,000 yards to a mile along a flaming six-mile-long sector of the Allied eastern bank of the river.

The attacking Americans were met by a hail of fire from high-velocity weapons. The North Koreans in the heigths outnumbered the Americans. The enemy has been trying to break out of a six-mile bulge around Changyong for eight days. The original North Korean 4th Infantry Division that crossed the winding river there has been reinforced.

Early Monday U.S. Eighth Army headquarters in Korea said the attacking Americans at Changyong had attained their primary objectives. MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo said the attack was "proceeding saitsfactorily."

Drop Bombs

American army and navy planes and the Royal Australian Air Force poured a crushing weight of bombs and rockets on the Communist invaders.

But for all its ferocity, the Changhyong fighting was described by a general officer at MacArthur's headquarters as probably secondary to the "critical area" which extends 20 miles north and south of the town of Waegwan, 32 miles north of Changnyong.

The Communists have put four elite divisions on the Waegwan line just 12 miles northwest of Taegu, the south Korean Republic's emergency capital. Two other North Korean divisions were behind them with armor to exploit the breakthrough the Reds expect to make against the United States 1st cavalry division and South Korean forces.

Intelligence officers said the Communist steamroller is expected to strike out momentarily from the Waegwan area for Taegu.

To Tie Up U.S. Troops

Both the Changnyong river crossing, to the south, and the attack of Pohang, No. 2 Korean port on the east coast, were designed to immobilize as much American and South Korean strength as possible, intelligence officers said.

The Waegwan central front Communists keep throwing out probing arms, hunting for weak spots in the long line.

The United States 1st cavalry division caught 500 Communists crossing the Naktong near Waegwan early Monday. The cavalry killed or wounded 300 of them and most of the remainder fled back across the river. Some Reds took refuge in the hills and cavalry patrols were hunting them.

A general staff officer said the situation north and west of Pohang, the Korea east coast port, was "generally satisfactory". He said the North Koreans at Pohang had been successful in forcing U.S. and South Korean troops to fight "a holding action". They also prevented the American Air Force from using the new and important fighter plane field six miles south of Pohang at Yongil.

Held Airstrip

American tanks and infantry still held the Pohang airstrip. A Red battalion was in possession of Pohang port.

North and South Koreans fought minor battles in the Pohang area.

On the south coast front, American marines moved into high ground overlooking the rubbled city of Chinju. The marines formed a line from the Nam River, on the outskirts of Chinju, to Purvis harrow to the south.

The Chinju heights were the objective of the marine and army task force which splintered and dispersed the crack North Korean sixth division attempting to mount an offensive against Pusan from there. Pusan, Korea's No. 1 port on the southeast tip, is 55 miles east of Chinju.

United States Army infantry pressed forward against an enemy force now estimated at battalion strength at Tundok, five miles behind the hills east of Chinju. It apparently was all that remained of a North Korean regiment that was bypassed and encircled by the American advance.

For the expected attack at Waegan, 52 miles north of Chinju, the Americans have good defensive positions except for the shallow Naktong River. This is the Taejon-Taegu corridor through the mountains. Intelligence officers said this corridor would be the logical place for an attempted breakthrough.

More In Daylight

They pointed out the Communists have massed their heaviest striking force in this area. They added the Reds have moved boldly in daylight despite air attacks by allied planes.

It all adds up to a determined effort to smash the American centre at all costs, the intelligence officer said.

The Americans attacking the river-crossing Reds at Changnyong Monday ran into fire from self-propelled artillery. The Communists probably have put tanks across the river at Changnyong also.

Corduroy bridge approaches have been spotted on both sides of the Naktong in that area. One general staff officer said the Russians perfected a method in the last war of constructing log bridges held together with chains and submerged to prevent observation. Weighed down, the logs sink one to three feet below the water but still permit tanks and artillery to cross.

Get Artillery Across

The American 24th division ran into point-blank fire in its attack Monday, indicating the North Koreans have showed some artillery across the river.

A headquarters spokesman said the Americans had held the Changnyong heights before Mondays' attack, but had lost them Saturday night. During Saturday night Red roadblocks were set up several miles in the rear of the 24th division on the Yongsan-Pugong supply road. These were eliminated Sunday.

In the first hours of the Monday attack, the Americans regained the heights of Changnyong.

Archaeologists Seek Lost Tomb Of King Midas

By HARRY WHYTE.

ANKARA, Turkey (Reuters)—A team of American archaeologists working 100 miles south of here hopes to find the tomb of King Midas, the legendary Phrygian ruler with "the golden touch."

Professor Rodney Young of Pennsylvania University and the group working with him hope to complete the excavations next year. They are working at Gordion. From the tenth to the seventeenth centuries BC the capital of Phrygia stood on this site.

Legend has it that Bacchus, god of wine and general revelry, gave Midas the power that everything he touched would turn to gold. The gift backfired on the avaricious old king, however. Bathing was made difficult, if not impossible, and tragedy resulted when Midas touched his daughter — turning her into a little gold statue.

At any rate, the expedition so far has found no fantastic treasure trove as might adorn King Midas' burial place. Not until next year do they expect to crack open an exceptionally high burial mound which may turn out to be the tomb of Midas.

Highest in Europe

The central point of the diggings is a large burial mound some 1,800 feet by 900 and more than 45 feet high. Around it are about 50 other mounds, most of which are probably burial sites also.

One of the highest, possibly the burial place of King Midas, rises to about 120 feet and is among the highest known in Europe or Asia Minor. It is the one scheduled for investigation next year.

No startling finds have been made by the diggers. But they have unearthed a number of exquisitely-fashioned gold bracelets and necklets, a silver mirror with an ivory handle and an ivory rouge-box in the shape of a duck. Archaeologists believe the woman who tinted her cheeks with the aid of this mirror and the rouge-box lived about six centuries before the birth of Christ.

A striking feature of the bracelets is the joints, formed by interlocking lions' heads. The necklets, of equally fine workmanship, show representations of acorns and pomegranates.

Jap Peace Treaty Needed First

TOKYO, Aug. 14 (Reuters)—Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies of Australia said today that until there is a Japanese peace treaty there could be no discussion of an anti-Communist front in the Pacific that would include Japan as a member.

He declined to comment on whether Australia would favor re-arming Japan.

"There is still strong anti-Japanese feeling in Australia," he told Japanese newspapermen. "I think it would be foolish to pretend there is not. At the same time we pride ourselves on being pretty sensible people. We take a broad view of many matters."

He said here that he could not visit Korea because "they must be concerned about my safety." Headquarters sources said that Gen. Douglas MacArthur considered the Korean situation "too fluid" for a visit by Menzies.

Bicyclist Killed

TORONTO, Aug. 14 (CP)—Jan Nowesielski, 35, was killed last night when knocked from his bicycle by an automobile on the highway just east of nearby Erindale. Police said the car, driven by Hugh Reid, 41, of Islington, Ont., struck the bicycle from behind.

CHEAPER BY THE DOZEN—From a plane appropriately named "The Flying Dutchman" F. H. van Bussel, his wife and their round dozen children alighted recently at Dorval Que., on their way to their new home in Lucan, Ont. Here are shown the Dutch couple and their children a few minutes after their admission to Canada was made final and official.

2 Boys Suffer Eye Injuries In Bomb Blast

OTTAWA, Aug. 14 (CP)—Two boys, Donald McKay, 6, son of Capt. Don McKay of Petawawa, and John Binkley, 5, of Winnipeg, are in hospital with serious eye injuries following explosion of a smoke bomb at Petawawa military camp Saturday.

The explosion was reported to have occurred at Petawawa Point, outside the camp confines after the two lads found the live smokebomb while playing.

Hospital officials said the McKay youngster possibly will lose permanently the sight of one eye. The Binkley child's eyes were not seriously injured.

Army officials denied reports that some officers were under open arrest because of the incident. A court of inquiry will be held today and the officials said a "full investigation" will be made.

Golds moved quietly lower. Giant Yellowknife and Kerr Addison slipped in the seniors. Broulan and San Antonio were lower in the secondary list.

Western Oils traded quietly. Atlantic Oil was lower while Pacific Pete, Central Leduc, National Pete and Roxana were gainers.

Berlin Out For Tourists Plays Up Thrills In Ads

BERLIN, Aug. 14 — (AP). — Blockaded by the Russians and saved by the air lift only a little more than a year ago, Berlin now is vigorously competing for world tourist trade as the international city behind the iron curtain — today's most exciting European capital.

To push this campaign, Allied-occupied West Berlin has produced one of the most alluring brochures in the history of tourism. It has the romance of Algiers' Casbah and Pepe Le Moko backed right off the map.

It offers what no other city can advertise—the dangerous thrill of being behind Joe Stalin's iron curtain, with safety. In fact, one of the chief advertised attractions is having your picture taken at the Red Army War Memorial with a tommy gun-bearing Russian sentinel and the challenge: "If you're lucky, he might smile."

What's more, West Berlin presents itself as the only place where you can meet your business friends or relatives from the Russian-controlled zone without hindrance and hear them recount their experiences under Russian dictatorship."

Other Things, Too

But tourist-wise and dollar-hungry West Berlin offers sex along with politics.

Its brochure catches the eye first with sex. The cover shows a blonde beauty garbed in the flags of the West German Federal Republic and the four occupying powers, including the Soviet hammer and sickle.

The caption is: Don't Miss Berlin.

Offered inside are the attractions of this quartered city. Tourists are reminded that they are allowed to enter the Russian sector—if they want to leave the safer lures of Allied West Berlin —and there you will notice the vast contrast between life in the Western sectors and that of parts under Eastern dictatorship.

Four-power agreements assure free intercourse between the occupied zones, but there are no guarantees against the whims of the Russian sector police who often have arrested Western visitors.

Among the sights to see in West Berlin are offered the great airports — American - controlled Tempelhof, British Gatow, and French Tegel — on which the air lift planes landed during the blockade.

For the tourist who wants to shop, West Berlin has just the place — Kurfuerstendamm, Berlin's Broadway. It is bomb-shattered now, but rebuilding with flashy storefronts.

Getting back to sex, the brochure offers Berlin by night. That takes you again to Kurfuerstendamm, "the fost famous street in Germany — again a mass of neon lights, world famous opera, theatre and cabarets."

But when all is said and done, you always ket back to politics in Berlin.

The brochure calls it "the bulwark of freedom against Russian domination."

Price Increases Reviewed In Bank Letter

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

The background to current sharp increases in the prices of basic commodities, especially rubber, tin, sugar, fats and oils, is reviewed in the current monthy letter of the Bank of Nova Scotia. Says the letter in part:

Basic commodity prices prior to the Communist attack in Korea were showing moderate strength. The high level of business activity in the United States and the gradual increase in industrial production overseas meant a strong demand for industrial raw materials, the production of a number of which was barely sufficient to meet requirements.

At the same time, however, world food supplies were increasing and the outlook for the prices of some agricultural commodities such as grains and even sugar was open to more question.

Immediate Picture

That was the immediate picture. The medium-term outlook suggested the possibility of a resumption of the downward movement in basic commodity prices. In addition to the prospect of somewhat better-distributed food supplies there remained the likelihood of some slackening in United States business activity when the demand for automobiles and housing waned . . . in general, it appeared that the broad trend might be downward possibly over the next two years, though the supply of some commodities would remain tight.

The long-term outlook appeared more buoyant.

The trend of consumption in the U.S. and Europe was upward, especially as Germany recovered. There were the evident growth and further industrialization in such countries as Canada, Australia, and some of the Latin-American republics, and the prospects of more industrialization in India and further recovery in Japan.

Now, superimposed on this picture, are the grave developments of the past weeks. The stepping-up of U.S. defence expenditures on the proposed scale is a development of major significance.

Supply Question

Moreover, the fighting in Asia raises questions about supplies of commodities from that part of the world. Furthermore, the Communist pressure in Asia is clearly not confined to Korea, and the need to assist economic recovery in such countries as India was never more apparent.

The impact of these new developments is highly uneven and the possibility of over-buying must not be discounted. There still are surpluses of some commodities, and in other higher prices might quickly bring demand into line with supply.

Thus, though the Korean war has radically altered the present position and near-term prospects, the extent of its inflationary influence depends on the future course of international political developments.

The Protestant cemetery was then visited and prior to the laying of wreaths on graves, Rural Dean Brownlie, held a service of consecration of the non-denominational veterans' plot at both cemeteries. The Last Post and Reveille were sounded by bandsman William Aylsworth of the Stirling band, the two minutes silence being observed also.

Lieut. Percy Gray of Deloro was in charge of the parade.

Following its dismissal, Legionnaires went to the exhibition building at the Community Centre, where Zone Commander Wilbert Mumby presided over the bi-monthly executive meeting of Zone F-3. Also present was Deputy District Commander E. H. Liddle of Belleville.

Branches represented were Belleville, Carrying Place, Tweed and Marmora. Lunch was served by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Marmora branch.

"Miss Canada" To Visit Cobourg

COBOURG, Aug. 14—(ENS)— Margaret Bradford of London, crowned recently as "Miss Canada", will appear at the Cobourg Rotary Club Carnival here on August 24 and 25. Last year Margaret Bradford embarked on the initial step towards her eventual title of Miss Canada, by competing in the beauty contest held during the civic holiday weekend at Baltimore, where she won the contest and became "Miss Northumberland County."

From Baltimore she came to Cobourg last year, where she reigned as queen of the civic holiday weekend and was crowned at a special ceremony at the bandshell.

Miss Bradford spent the past weekend at the summer home of her music teacher, Mrs. Bertha Bright Knapp. When she was informed that the Rotary Club would like her to sing at the carnival, Miss Bradford instantly agreed.

"I am heartily in accord with the objective of the Rotary Club carnival which helps the crippled children of Cobourg and district and I am most happy for the opportunity to help their carnival. I have not forgotten the fact that my first step on the path which led to the title of "Miss Canada" came last year when I won the "Miss Northumberland" competition. I am grateful and I want to show my gratitude," Miss Bradford declared.

Weekend Crowds Big At Cobourg Beach

The east beach looked like Coney Island, so thickly was it populated.

B.C. Re-tests Its Drivers

These columns have frequently called attention to Ontario's lax licensing of drivers and vehicles. Cars are licensed without any inspection of the mechanical condition; drivers' permits are renewed year after year, no matter how their skill and physical condition have changed since the first and only tests were passed. British Columbia is now conducting a re-examination of all holders of driving licences. It is a large job, and the results should be remarked by Ontario.

* * *

So far 45,537 drivers have been rechecked. Of these nearly a quarter—some 10,000—were found to have eyesight so poor that it was unsafe for them to drive without glasses. Most of these people did not know that their eyesight had become so faulty. These ten thousand have now been issued with restricted driver's licences, permitting them to operate a car only if they are wearing glasses of the correct prescription. Another 500 persons tested were shown to be physically unfit to drive under any circumstances. Their licences have been revoked permanently.

* * *

The Calgary Herald calls attention to the B.C. testing and the results thus far: 10,500 drivers found unfit. "If this is the case in British Columbia, where at least tests are imposed on people when they first get a license, what must things be like in Alberta, where no tests are imposed at all?" Ontario is somewhat stiffer than Alberta, since it requires initial testing, but it undoubtedly has on its roads as many unfit drivers as B.C. A new driver, like a new car, may be qualified for the roads, but five years later may be completely unfit and highly dangerous.

Powerless Peterborough

Last Friday morning hydro power went off all over Peterborough for twelve minutes. The city was plunged into a morass of immobility. One woman's half-baked cake in an electric oven went flat. A man shaving with an electric razor, taut and whisker-streaked, let out a violent oath. A housewife getting ready to hit the jack-pot on the radio program said 'tarnation'. Cars at the go-light corners were stymied. The world's news was suspended by the silent ticker-tapes. A baby waiting for its panties to be ironed howled for the entire twelve minutes. And so, all over the city, affairs and people were upset. "The light that failed" used to be a catastrophic. How much worse is the failure of ten thousand lights, bottle-warmers, electric stoves, radios, teakettles, dentists' drills, 100-storey (or three) elevators, and pudding mixers!

Why the failure? The Utilities Commission says that the interruption "was caused by something outside the city", but they do not know what. There have been several such interruptions of power in the last month, and always the explanation is the same: something outside the city, and no one locally seems to know what something. It just goes to show the danger of centralization; power wielded from afar by big-wigs at their own whimsy.

In the old days if the lights went out everybody knew what was wrong: the dam had gone, a tree in front of the mayor's house had fallen over the lines. Mr. X at the Power House had pulled the wrong switch, or a bolt from the blue had descended. And everybody knew that there were local men on the job putting things right again. Now, it is "something" outside the city. We must wait with folded hands until "something" outside the city is put right again, in a minute, an hour, or it might be a week. We have become entirely dependent on something outside the city, something nameless, perverse and unapproachable.

This "something" couldn't be a Toronto Hydro mogul who has taken a dislike to Peterborough, and is nasty enough to pull a switch on us whenever he wants to vent his spleen? Or a Fifth Columnist with a great big ugly Red soul? Perhaps the city should hire a detective to track down this disturber of its life.

Fish-Starred

We have been looking at this province surveyed as the abode of fish and game. The chart is somewhat puzzling to us, we admit, for it indicates what it intends to show with little asterisks beside the county name and under the fish or game creature. We may be reading it topsy-turvy: Wentworth County, for instance, may be crawling with Waterfowl, Partridge, Deer, Bear, Moose, Elk, Large mouth Black Bass etc. But it does seem that that is a wrong interpretation. Wentworth County, whose home base is Hamilton, is no place for fishermen and hunters, according to our reading of the stars. It offers only speckled trout, pike, brown trout, pheasants and rabbits.

Now we turn with glee to the star-studded Peterborough county. The chart and asterisks show that it offers fishermen large mouth black bass, small mouth black bass, speckled trout, maskinonge, yellow pickerel and lake trout. Taking another squint at those asterisks, we begin to doubt either our reading of the chart or the chart itself. Pheasants, waterfowl, deer and moose are not starred. Why, we ourself have got next to a deer that was killed just twenty miles north of the city, and certainly within the county boundaries; and we have not dug a fork into an elk killed in this county. And we know a man who has the head of a moose which he killed in Harvey township, mounted right on his front porch. It goes to show that statistics do not cover all the facts.

The counties which have least to offer fishermen and hunters are, according to the chart, Wentworth, Lambton, Essex (only one kind of fish), Haldimand, Dundas, Stormont, Glengarry (no fish at all), Prescott, and Carleton. Carleton has neither fish nor fowl (though probably good red herring, being Ottawa's county), and the only fair game is rabbit. All counties have rabbits, according to the stars.

"Not While I'm President"

A reporter asked President Truman an unexpected question at last week's conference in the White House at Washington. He wanted to know how Mr. Truman felt about the belief of Congressman Percy Priest of Tennessee that Secretaries Acheson and Johnson (State and Defence respectively) should resign. The President reacted characteristically; neither would resign while he was President—meaning, of course, that he would ask for the resignation of neither.

Mr. Truman's fierce loyalty to his friends, and to most associates selected and appointed by him personally, has become a byword. Admittedly, loyalty and the ability to inspire loyalty are very valuable political assets, but the former quality has occasionally backfired in the case of Mr. Truman. Some of his friends have an embarrassing habit of getting into trouble—and in some cases, the sort of trouble that would be regarded as an offence against loyalty sufficiently gross to blight loyalty.

There was the case of General Vaughan, who, it was alleged, had been involved in some black market activities during the war years. There was the case of Edwin Pauley, said to have speculated most profitably on the basis of secret information gained while in the service of the Government. But Mr. Truman, without waiting for an investigation, blasted the accusers. The case of the bumbling Mon Walgren was less serious, but it could hardly have been pleasant for Mr. Truman to see Mr. Walgren's appointment by him rejected on thinly-veiled charges of incompetence.

In the case of Mr. Acheson and Mr. Johnson, inadequacy and errors of judgement are the charges. The former's supporters might not find it difficult to refute these charges; the latter's might have considerable trouble doing so. As usual, however, Mr. Truman's expression of loyalty automatically followed the charges, and without qualification.

NOTE AND COMMENT

After two marriages, an engagement and some near-misses, Errol Flynn announces that he has found "the perfect wife." What has she found?

A fashion headline says: "Women Next Fall To Be Less Busty, Less Hippy". Please don't tell us that the old pillar-of-salt figure of the '20s is due for revival!

The Honourable Brooke Claxton, Minister of National Defence, went from Ottawa to Toronto in 32 minutes last Thursday. Just to show all those impatient Toronto critics that he is not as slow-moving as they say?

At a congress of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women in London, the president, Miss Sally Butler, said: "We women who are out in the business world would like to extend into the world that same influence that has made the home the place it is". Meaning, often uncomfortable and sometimes intolerable, perhaps?

The Restive Sikhs

By RAWLE KNOX

THERE'S trouble brewing in the City of the Golden Temple, this holy headquarters of the fighting Sikhs. In the Sikh Missionary College, a rambling rather battered looking stone bungalow whose neglected garden is a sea of monsoon mud, the executive of the Shromani Akali Dal (Orthodox Sikh Party) is brooding over new methods of forcing its demands on Pandit Nehru's Congress Party. The Akali Dal wants nothing less than an autonomous Punjabi-speaking state, carved out of part of the Punjab: and a few states to the east. It is to be subject to the Indian Union only in matters of defence, foreign affairs and communications. The projected state, it is hardly necessary to add, would have a majority of Sikhs. It would also happily contain most of the richest land in the Punjab, occupied by the Sikhs in their palmy days of military supremacy.

Already the Akali Dal has told those Sikh members of the Punjab Legislative Assembly who were elected with its support to cut all ties with the Congress Party. If they fail to do so, says sixty-five year old Master Tara Singh, Akali Dal leader, "other methods" will be used to force their hands.

* * *

TARA SINGH is a short, stoutish man with a face as battered looking as the bungalow in which he lives. Through the shroud of his white beard and whiskers a wonderfully kindly smile manages to shine out. He habitually wears a white cotton robe, reaching just below his knees, a royal blue pagri and the traditional Sikh dagger slung at his hip. He is venerated by his followers as a guru, or priest-teacher; to many of them he is a saint.

We sat opposite each other in low basket chairs that made argument impossible. Why was it, I asked him, that most of the Sikh members of the Punjab Legislative Assembly had disobeyed him and remained members of the Congress Party?

"Sikhs can be bought," replied.

"And so," I answered politely, "can people everywhere."

"But not," he said, "so easily as Sikhs, I think." The smile had never left his face; it was impossible to say whether or not he was being serious.

* * *

WHEN I asked what "other methods" would be used to force compliance with his orders to Sikh M.L.A.'s (Members of the Legislative Assembly), "We will hold mass meetings and threaten them," he said. "We will hold demonstrations outside their houses." The smile seemed to broaden for a moment. "There are so many things we can do."

Undoubtedly the Sikhs have grievances. There are about five and a half million of them (80 per cent of all the Sikhs in this corner of India, and in each state in which they are gathered they find themselves a minority of Hindus. Sikhs, more than any other Indians, suffered most in the ghastliness which followed partition. 30,000 of their little race died; 40 per cent of their total number were uprooted from their homes. Worst of all, they lost to Pakistan their holiest shrine, Nankana Sahib, birthplace of Guru Nanak (founder of Sikhism).

* * *

THEY claim they should have preferential treatment in rehabilitation. "Everyone knows," said an elderly schoolmaster to me with naive, typically Sikh, logic, "that the Sikhs are the best cultivators in India. Now the Government wants more food. Why doesn't it give more land to the Sikhs?"

Sikh speech and literature, more importantly religious literature, is Punjabi. The Congress Government has decided upon Hindu-speaking India and has rejected (contrary to previous promises, say the Sikhs) the idea of separate linguistic provinces. The Sikhs complain that they have to listen to the Pakistan radio because they cannot understand the Hindustani broadcasts from Delhi. They feel neglected by the Congress Party whom they so willingly helped in the fight for freedom, even to the extent of giving up their cherished notion of an independent Sikhistan.

* * *

MORE heavily than the feeling of neglect presses the fear of Hindu domination. Sikhism was originally a breakaway from Hinduism, a rebellion against the caste system. "The Hindu cannot be democrats," complained Dr. Sarup Singh, a leading Amritsar lawyer. "Their own caste system forbids it."

In the past many Hindu untouchables were converted to Christianity, Mohammedanism and Sikhism because these religions gave them an equal standing with their fellow men. The new Indian Constitution, largely framed by the untouchable champion, Dr. Ambedkar, gives special privileges to this long depressed class. As a result many converts are returning to Hinduism for the advantages they can gain. The Sikhs see this as a threat to their small community. They say that the new privileges should be extended to converts, whose status in society, if not in religion, is much the same as before. It should be added that the Sikhs are now proselytising with vigour to convert more untouchables to their own faith

To all these varied complaints the answer of the Congress Government is much the same. The Sikhs, it says, have been given a disproportionately large share in the Indian Army ("Won on merit," mutter the Sikhs), and they have good representation in the Central Cabinet. If India is to be made a nation, strong and united, special concessions cannot be made to local minorities. The Sikhs must be Indians first and Sikhs afterwards. Most advanced, successful Sikhs, who have thrown off the blinkers of local Punjab politics, agree with the Central Government.

* * *

BUT in the village of the Punjab, Master Tara Singh's words ring louder and fiercer than the sensible dicta of the government. Like everyone else in the world today, the Sikhs are feeling the economic pinch. They are restless and they do not forget their glorious martial past.

"There will be trouble seen in the Punjab," said Master Tara Singh.

"But do you want trouble," I asked, "after the tragedy of 1947?"

"It was a tragedy," he replied, "but we taught the Muslims a lesson. We do not want much trouble. Just a little would do to teach the Hindus a lesson."

One of his henchman interrupted to explain the Akali Dal's plans for winning more seats at the next election.

"Personally," said Master Tara Singh, leaning back in his chair with that same smile on his lips, "I put my trust in chaos."

Parliament Hill's Singing Tower

(Ottawa Citizen)

LAST Sunday evening one of the largest audiences on record gathered on Parliament Hill to hear Dominion Carilloneur Robert Donnell perform one of his delightful summer concerts. It is not surprising that the carillon should attract music lovers. It is an instrument of fascination. As the setting sun tucks itself under the counterpane of the western woods of the valley, the quiet air is embroidered with silver tones. The music floats without effort over the tailored lawns and gardens of "the Hill," rising and falling like a lovely serenade from the first evening stars. Sometimes it is the lilt of a French-Canadian folk song which touches the heart. Or it may be the stately measures of a Mozart sonata or a light opera tune. Whatever be the melody, the listener, there in the cool evening air, is wrapped in sound of great beauty.

Goethe once said that "true music is intended for the ear alone." Much of the unique charm of carillon music is in the illusion that the sound comes unaided from the Peace Tower. The performer is unseen. He does not distract one from complete absorption in the music.

Otawa's setting for its carillon has been described by musicians as one of the best in the world. Parliament Hill is free of noisy traffic. The music does not have to compete with the harsh sounds of the city. Its concert props are uncrowded and majestic buildings, green grass and the wide sky. The carillon is entirely manually operated, permitting the carilloneur to vary his volume and emphasis. This is not possible with the electric-striker carillons of New York and Chicago, cancelling the advantage of their wider ranges of bell notes.

Mr. Donnell performs 31 concerts during the summer. His program are largely made up from requests, and they usually express the national spirit of Canada. In addition to regular concerts on Thursday and Saturday evenings at nine o'clock, he plays special concerts at noon on all public holidays. Performing on the hand clavier of the carillon is strenuous, and Mr. Donnell is usually worn out after a one-hour trick in the tower. The popularity of his concerts among summer visitors and native Ottawans will continue to grow.

Happy Children

(Kitchener-Waterloo Record)

Any child is happiest when he feels he is wanted, is understood, is the same as other children and is liked by them. Parents have a primary responsibility in this regard because they, more than anyone else, can ensure that the child will grow up secure in the knowledge that he is loved and wanted, no matter what else happens.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

And Moses spake in the ears of all the congregation of Israel the words of this song, until they were ended. (Deut. 31: 30.)

* * *

Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak: and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth. My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass: because I will publish the name of the Lord: ascribe ye greatness unto our God. He is the Rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgement: God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he. (Deut. 32: 1-4.)

* * *

I waited patiently for the Lord; and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry. He brought me up also out of an horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set, my feet upon a rock, and established my goings....

Many, O Lord my God, are thy wonderful works which thou hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward: they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee: if I would declare and speak of them, they are more than can be numbered. Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire, mine ears hast thou opened: burnt offering and sin offering hast thou not required....

I have not hid thy righteousness within my heart; I have declared thy faithfulness and thy salvation: I have not concealed thy lovingkindness and thy truth from the great congregation. (Ps. 40: 1, 2, 5, 6, 10.)

* * *

Let my cry come near before thee, O Lord: give me understanding according to thy word. (Ps. 119: 169.)

Mr. Shinwell

(London Observer)

Promptly at 9.20 each morning, a short, bustling figure runs up the steps of the Ministry of Defence, hurries along a corridor, is raised in the lift—at a somewhat slower pace—to the second floor and, in a matter of seconds, is at his desk. He is Mr. Shinwell, on whom so much depends at the moment. For six days he labors, but on the seventh he relaxes and has fun—he makes political speeches.

Mr. Shinwell, as Minister of Defence, has the asset of boundless, bouncing energy; he sometimes gives the impression that he once dropped a couple of seconds and is hastening along to catch up again. No less important for a Labor Government is the fact that Mr. Shinwell has always been identified with the Left Wing of the party and cannot be suspected of being a jingo. And he has courage—"I don't mind being attacked," he often says.

That is just as well, because no Minister of Defence could hope to be very popular in peacetime. He must cajole, beg, threaten, shout. Mr. Shinwell will be ready to do all four with gusto and should get much more support inside the Cabinet than he could have expected even a month ago.

"Very well! Heads we have the village hut for 'Comforts for Korea,' tails you have it for the Anti-Atom Brigade."

London Express Service

TO CANADIAN RAILROADERS AND THE CANADIAN PUBLIC

It is important that you understand clearly why the managements of Canada's railways believe a railway strike is absolutely unnecessary.

Our reason for this conviction is that we have made the employees involved in the present dispute a fair offer of wage increases and improvements in working conditions which, if applied to all employees, will cost us $37,000,000 a year.

We have further acknowledged a moral obligation to implement the 40-hour week at the appropriate time, and we have explained why, in fairness to Canadian industry and all other employers of labour, we cannot put it into effect now.

To do otherwise would be to perform a disservice to industry in general and to all employers and employees alike.

The railways, after making two previous offers which the union leaders rejected, have now made a third and final offer which gives the employees the choice of either:

an increase in wages averaging 8½ cents per hour, or a reduction in the basic work week from 48 to 44 hours, with an increase in wage rates of 9.1% so as to maintain or in some cases improve present "take home" pay.

The labour leaders have made no concessions at all and have refused to budge from their original demands for a 5-day 40-hour week with maintenance of present "take home" pay, and in addition increases of 7 cents and 10 cents an hour.

The railways are thoroughly conscious of, and sympathetic to, the problems of their employees resulting from higher costs of living.

Drastic, unwarranted reductions in hours of work instead of decreasing these problems will inevitably increase them.

Not only is a railway strike unnecessary now, but furthermore, because of the tense international situation, it would endanger the entire Dominion. As the presidents of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways said in a joint statement to the representatives of the unions last Thursday:

> "The present situation . . . imposes a nerve strain on all concerned at a time when we badly need to devote all our energies and thoughts to the grave threat of war and a national emergency . . . It leaves the railway employee in a most uncertain and unhappy frame of mind because we are morally certain he does not wish to walk out on his job at a time like this, no matter what issues are involved . . . this opinion seems diametrically opposed to the strike ballot which has been reported by the unions, but railway management retains too high an opinion of the loyalty, steadfastness and sense of responsibility of their employees to believe a strike would not mean a heart-breaking situation for them. That is not to say they will not carry out their undertaking to strike if union leaders decide to call upon them to do so but as already stated, it will cause great unhappiness and self-reproach."

The importance of the railways in Canada's economy cannot be exaggerated. Never was that importance more apparent than in World War II. And without the loyalty and intense effort of all railway employees, Canada's magnificent war effort would have been impossible. The same holds true today. As the presidents further stated:

> ". . . the general public is inconvenienced and business arrangements are made uncertain so long as the likelihood of a strike persists. Moreover, a railway strike would so cripple our economy that it would weaken for a long time our ability to take a strong line in international affairs and thus give great comfort to the enemy. Therefore, railway management feels strongly that the issues must be faced resolutely so that all interests, the worker, the public, and the Government, as well as the unions and railway management, will know precisely what is facing them. The time has come to remove this uncertainty which hangs as a blight over our day-to-day life."

WITH THESE CONSIDERATIONS IN MIND, THE RAILWAYS HAVE MADE THIS OFFER AS THE ULTIMATE THAT COULD POSSIBLY BE EXPECTED OF THEM, AND IT GIVES A SETTLEMENT WHICH WILL LEAVE RAILWAY WORKERS IN AN EXTREMELY FAVOURABLE POSITION COMPARED TO OTHER INDUSTRIAL WORKERS.

HERE IS OUR OFFER

The final offer which excludes hotel and water transport employees is as follows:

(1) Recognition by railway management of a moral obligation to implement the 40-hour week at the appropriate time.

(2) Recognition by the unions in principle, subject to negotiation in detail, of minor amendments to existing contracts covering working rules to bring about more efficient operation.

(3) EITHER

(A) A 44-hour basic work week with a 9.1% increase in hourly rates so as to maintain "take home" pay. In regard to monthly rated clerical employees there will be an understanding that a 5-day actual work week may be granted by local arrangement in selected cases where the hours now actually worked are less than 44, on condition that the requirements of the service are protected up to 44 hours per week.

OR (B) A graduated increase in basic wage rates approximately equivalent in expense to that involved under Plan A. When applied to all employees, this would cost the railways $37,000,000 per year, and would average 8½ cents per hour.

Petes Divide With Oshawa In Ball Over The Weekend

Splitting two games with Oshawa Merchants on Saturday, the Petes remained in second place in the Viaduct Baseball League, two and a half games back of Oshawa and four and a half up on the third-place Toronto Aces. They dropped an 8-1 afternoon decision in the Motor City but won a 6-3 "home" verdict at night in Bowmanville.

The Petes fell apart in one disastrous inning at Oshawa, allowing Merchants five cheap runs, and the score on earned runs for the tilt should have been 2-1 for Oshawa. Bill Edger pitched steady ball but had poor support, while Jerry Creasy had perfect backing as he fanned 11, though walking six. It was a fine fray until that fatal seventh stanza.

Four In Four

Harry Hill had a perfect day at bat for Oshawa with a triple and three singles in four tries, Creasy coming through with three for four. Al Menzies got two for two for the Murphy men, Howie Dalton (who was late arriving) getting one for one, and Edger two in four tries. Freddy Garvey pulled off a sparkling running one-hand catch to draw a big hand, and the Petes reeled off a double-play in the eighth.

The night game saw Petes come from behind in the eighth to tally four runs and yank out a nice win before the game was called for darkness with two out. Lefty Bill Dadson hurled four-hit ball till he gave way in the eighth to Gunner Whitehill, the latter getting credit for the win as Petes got four runs afterward. Jerry Creasy pitched an inning for Oshawa when George Davidson was late arriving, the latter then going the route also on a neat four-hit chore, he and Dadson each whiffing seven.

Bud Clicked

Bud Harrison was the Petes' hero with two doubles, his second one starting the late rally which won the game. Danny Brown also clouted a double. None of the Merchants got more than one safe blow, but Barnes hit a triple and Bitman—who drove in three runs—had a two-bagger. Thompson had a fine one-hand catch in deep centre, and the Merchants pulled off a double-play once to cut off a Petes' threat. It was a game full of arguments, and Oshawa threatened to protest because of darkness, though the Petes had enough runs to win the ball game before it became too dark. Each side kicked in with two miscues. The first game saw the Petes leave 15 runners stranded and they had 10 aboard in the second when the final out was made each inning.

Hamilton Wins Soccer Go Over UEW, 4-2

Hamilton soccer eleven created an excellent impression Saturday afternoon, on their first visit to the city, to play the local UE aggregation in an exhibition game in King Edward Park before a good attendance. The visitors won 4-2 through their efficient combination backed by a superb half back line. Best for the UE were Halroyd, Strong, E. Downer and Duffus; for Hamilton Sinclair, Thompson and Barnett.

Hard tactics prevailed, in the opening exchanges, with perfect combination clicking to perfection that brought out the brilliant qualities of the goal-keepers but the local custodian was the first to admit defeat from a rocket drive by Nevins from 20 yards out. They went back again to find McGann, full back, saving twice in succession with clever head-work. Petes broke away fast on the right wing through Strong when centred across to Halroyd who equalized with a smart effort. Hamilton went right back again to take the lead again through Falkenbridge. From a corner kick the Petes were taken aback when Barnett cleverly back-heeled the ball into the net to make it 3-1.

Smart Soccer

On resuming, substitutes were thrown into the fray to make it fast and furious but the custodians were masters of the situation. Eventually Swan caught the Petes napping on the defence to dribble past them and land the ball into the net. Petes retaliated with a steady attack to confine the activities to the Hamilton area and it finally paid off when Halroyd beat three men in a row, slipped the ball over to Duffus who sent a lightning drive past Martin to make it read 4-2.

Hamilton: Harry Martin, goal; J. Thompson and G. Sinclair, full backs; C. Greenwood, T. Nevins and H. German, half backs; Ben Falkenbridge, W. Duncan, J. Currie, R. Ford and C. Barnett, forwards. Subs—J. Redpath, J. Swan, E. Fowler.

Peterborough U.E.: J. Hutchinson, goal; S. McGann and S. Murduff, full backs; H. Steel, E. Downer and J. Craig, half backs; R. Strong, A. E. Boyd, W. Halroyd, A Featherstone and G Downer, forwards. Subs—H. Latham, J. Chamberlain, E. Duffus.

Referee—J. Adams; linesmen—S. Farkus and G. Bonsillica.

Westclox Girls Get Series Over Marines

Westclox girls defeated Outboard Marines three times Saturday at the Bowl in softball playoffs to earn the right to go into PWSU Intermediate "A" playdowns against Kingston. The undefeated Clockers were full value for their victories, playing heads-up, hustling ball all the way. They won the afternoon contest 16-1, took the first evening encounter 9-4, and yanked out the third fray 6-4 before a fair-sized crowd of fans.

The winners hit hard and timely in the afternoon tilt as M. Selkirk pitched steady ball and had good backing. R. Morrow, B. Anderson, M. Behan and L. Rowan went best in the field. E. Mantle went good after replacing P. Williams in the seventh. M. Selkirk had two doubles and a single as J. Vass hit a homer for Westclox. C. Rowan, S. Wakeford and E. Mantle each had two hits for the losers.

Weren't Hitting

Marines again didn't hit with ducks on the pond in the first night fracas while Westclox cashed in on all chances and had but one miscue. M. Downey pitched in fair style, having a little edge on E. Whittaker, though there were few strikeouts in any of the three contests. J. Vass was the big hitter with a homer and three singles in five attempts. B. Anderson also belting a four-bagger. B. Ayotte of Marines had a homer, double and single in five, as L. Rowan hit three singles. V. Page, B. Ayotte, B. Anderson and J. McIntyre looked good defensively.

Best game of the trio was the last one, going just an hour. The Clockers were lucky enough to pull out the 6-4 verdict as Marines came to life, though they pulled a bit of weird base-running. They out-hit Westclox and both fielded in fine style, M. Hill, V. Page, B. Morrow and J. Vass shining defensively. M. Selkirk and E. Whittaker both pitched keen ball, doing the iron-man chore in effective fashion. The latter hit a homer, triple, double and single in four for Outboards, while B. Morrow had three singles in four for Frank McCormack's crew, and B. Anderson hit a homer.

Expect Overhaul On Aussie Team

RYE, N.Y., Aug. 14—(AP)—Australia is in the Davis Cup challenge round again, but there might be a big overhaul in the team before it faces the United States in the main event Aug. 25-27 at Forest Hills, N.Y.

John Bromwich, it appears, no longer is physically fit to play two singles and the doubles within three days. That was proved without much question as the Aussies defeated Sweden 3 to 2 in the inter-zone final which ended Sunday at the Westchester Country Club.

The narrow scrape convinced experts that Captain Harry Hopman would be wise to substitue the 20-year-old "baby" of his team, Ken McGregor, for Bromwich in the challenge round singles.

Bromwich, 32, was so tired that his first service was a set-up for Lennart Bergelin, the Swedish ace, in the closing stages of their match Sunday. Bergelin won 6-3, 6-2, 1-6, 7-9, 6-3.

It wasn't fatal, for Frank Sedgman, the Aussie's slugging young champion, squelched Torsten Johansson, the Swedes' No. 2, by 6-4, 7-5, 6-3 in the fifth and clinching argument.

Hopman has no guarantee that McGregor will do any better than Bromwich—if as well. Yet, by saving Bromwich for the doubles, he can be almost certain of winning that big point, and can hope that Sedgman will win both his singles.

Saranac Lake Man Wins Trophy Race

GANANOQUE, Aug. 14 (CP) — Bob Bogie of Saranac Lake, N. Y., raced his Blitz III over the St. Lawrence River at 68.285 miles an hour Saturday to win the feature $1,000 Nickel Trophy race in an international power boat regatta.

Bogie edged Ray Gassner of St. Petersburgh, Fla., by two seconds. Ken Dempsey of Henrietta, N. Y., was third.

Jack Langmuir of Brockville took his Running Wild to victory in the inboard hydroplane 1.35 restricted class, trailed by Jack Tieche of Toronto and Bob D'Aoust of Lachine, Que.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

The ball-playing Petes are taking on Oshawa Merchants in Bowmanville tonight, weather being right, it being another "home" game for the men o' Murphy as they patiently await lights in Riverside. Expect to have 'em before the end of this week and may run a twin bill here this Saturday, afternoon and night. They're still in second spot, after splitting two games with the Viaduct League leaders, Oshawa, on Saturday. Dropped an 8-1 decision in the Motor City in the afternoon, kicking the cabbage all over the patch to give Bill Edger wretched support. But they won in the evening at Bowman Villa from Sherry Rowland's gang. And two big crowds saw the best two teams in the loop fight it out.

* * * * * *

While Jerry Creasy—one of the dozen USA imports Oshawa has—pitched fine ball in the aft to fan 11, Bill Edger was good, too. He had no walks to Creasy's six, but his mates bobbled five to none. Menzies and Edger were the only real hitters for our side as they left 15 stranded. Garvey pulled off one swell catch. It was different at night over at Bowmanville as Lefty Dadson threw four-hit ball till he left in favor of Gunner Whitehill in the eighth—giving up a walk and hit to start the frame. Eddie put out the fire and the Petes came on with a late rally to score four and take home the cake. Bud Harrison was the big hitter for the winners, starting off the eighth-inning drive.

* * * * * *

And That's the Rule

Game was called for darkness in the last of the eighth with two out and both sides stalling. But it didn't matter as sub-rule (e) on page 64 of the 1950 OBA rule book, dealing with regulation games, says: "If, however, the home team shall have scored more total runs than the visiting team when the game is terminated while the home team is at bat, the score of such game shall be the total runs scored by each team." That means, if called for rain, darkness, etc. Some of the players and fans were puzzled after, but that's the rule. So, the Petes can still improve their position tonight in Bowmanville and again tomorrow night there as they play another "home" game 'gainst New Toronto.

East City and UEW tangle in a twin men's softball bill Tuesday at the Bowl, each having won two in the four-of-seven semi-finals. It could well end Tuesday, the winner going against Mutuals in the finals— a single game a night then. Mutuals go into senior "B" playdowns because of finishing atop the schedule while the victor of the semi-finals goes into OASA intermediate "A" playdowns, the losers hanging up their spikes. The Russelle squad have captured the George Dormer Trophy also for finishing first, but the William Taylor Trophy for the city champions is still at stake. Tomorrow's double-header rates a big crowd.

Westclox All the Way

Leaving no doubt as to their superiority this semester in girls' softball here, Westclox lasses maintained their undefeated streak Saturday by thrice downing Marines. Took 'em 16-1 in an afternoon playoff and then beat them 9-4 and 6-4 in the evening. Had good pitching, fine fielding and timely thumping at the plate to earn the duke all the way, although Marines made it plenty close in the final fray. That puts Manager Frank McCormack's crew into the PWSU intermediate "A" playdowns, opening in Kingston this Wednesday with the return game, or games, here Saturday. The weekend joust will be at three in the Bowl and third, if necessary, in the evening. Meantime, a round-robin city playoff series is slated to open Wednesday but we haven't the schedule as yet.

* * * * * *

At Brampton on Saturday p.m., the Excelsiors rolled to a 21-13 OLA senior "A" victory o'er the Petes. A big splash in the third chukker when the refs tossed a flock of the Creighton crew into the clink made the main difference. But Excelsiors were plenty hot, too, and rated a win by a close count. Archie Browning slammed in five goals and aided on four more, which likely puts him atop the group scorers again. Brampton and St. Kitts are in a virtual tie for second slot now, we understand, with the Petes in third place and right on their heels. A win for the locals over Owen Sound here Wednesday would be a great help.

Western Girls Hope To Make Swimming Meet

VANCOUVER — (CP)—Coach Percy Norman figures there's only one barrier between his swimmers and a fistful of records at the Canadian swimming championship meet at Montreal Aug. 16 and 17.

The barrier? A lack of $1,500 to send the swimmers east.

The amiable mentor of the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club said, "It looks like we'll have to depend on the generosity of various people. We'd like to raise the money by staging shows. But that's impossible. With limited facilities at pools for spectators, we can't make a cent. In fact we'd be lucky to break even."

Norman, who coached Canada's 1936 Olympic swimming team, is counting on the female members of his club for most of the record breaking.

Irene Strong Favorite

Topping the list of his favorites is Irene Strong, who won the northwest 110 yards freestyle championship at Seattle recently and came second to U.S. champion Judy Cornell in the 110 yards breast stroke.

Other potential record smashers are Kay McNamee, Dominion 400 yard freestyle champion, Dorothy Cook, defending junior 100-yards freestyle champion and Canadian record-holder at 400 yards, and Daphne Molsted, who holds the northwest international junior 100 yards freestyle record.

"These four girls," says Norman, "can crack the Canadian relay record. They'll lower it from 4.27 seconds to 4.21 easily."

Bethany Victorious

BETHANY, Aug. 14 (ENS).—Bethany defeated Janetville 17-8 on Thursday night, this game placing them on top in the semi-finals, with two games out of three. Edmunds hurled good ball all the way for the winners, Reynolds receiving. Bruce Ryley, the team's coach was back in the game in his old position on first base, with his son Harry on third base, a father and son combination which seemed to please the fans.

Janetville, in an effort to bring up their score used three pitchers, McNeil, McGill and Burns, G. McGill receiving in the first four innings, McNeil taking over in the fifth.

Brampton Gets 21-13 Win Against Petes

Brampton Excelsiors produced a pocketful of steam in the third period of Saturday night's senior OLA section match with Peterborough at the flower town, scored nine goals and finally took a 21-13 verdict in a wide-open but hard-fought struggle.

The victory places Brampton in a vertical tie with St. Catharines for second place each with 30 points, followed by Peterborough with 28.

Even At First

Play was very even in the first half Saturday with little to choose between the well-matched clubs. Excelsiors took a 4-2 lead at quarter time but Petes came strong in the second to outscore their rivals 5-3 and knot the count at half time, 7-7. It was anybody's game as the boys played clean hard lacrosse with but five penalties meted out by Referees Peart and Madson up to this point. Then Brampton cashed in on penalties to pile it up.

It may be said in fairness, though, that despite penalties and excuses, Brampton played smart lacrosse to earn their margin at least on opportunism while the visitors were undoubtedly off-color in this game, following their sparkling 5-4 win over the same club at home, the night before.

Leading Scorer

Archie Browning led Brampton with five goals and four assists to boost his individual scoring chances while Nick Ferri was runner-up with four and two. Other stars were Whitey Serverson, clever playmaker, Lew Landess, Sheppard, Chard, Raine and Madgett. For Red Creighton's boys, Sid Wright played a fine game, scoring three clever goals while Fitzgerald played his usual good game and though outlucked several times garnered three points. The Vitarelli boys, Nolan, Ashbee, Thorpe, Magee, Batley, Dugan and Breakspeare, all figured in the scoring.

P-W Club Takes Cricket Tilt Over St. Edmunds

By C. W. IRESON

The Peterborough - Whitaker Cricket Club defeated St. Edmunds of the Toronto Cricket Council at CS in Port Hope Saturday by eight wickets. The score was St. Edmunds 59, P-W 60 for two wickets. It avenged a previous loss to St. Edmunds on the same grounds.

St. Edmunds batted first and with the exception of M. Patterson's 20 made a poor showing against bowling of F. Booth (seven for 25) and F. Dyer (three for 31. Patterson was an opening batsman and was sixth out, and there were no other double figure scorers.

The locals opened weakly, losing Cotton and Wright for four runs but then F. Booth joined B. Roberts and the pair scored the necessary runs. B. Roberts' score of 33 not out included four fours, and F. Booth was 20 not out. The only successful bowler was H. Edwards with two for 20.

Summary of scores:

St. Edmunds—Batting: M. Patterson 20, B. Hewitt 6, E. Jennings 7, B. Salter 3, L. Smithson 7, C. Ince 7, F. Yeats 1, P. Pirani 3, H. Edwards 0, R. Gracie 0 not out, E. Chapman 2, extras 3; total 59.

Poem for any day:

I often think that anyone can face
A crisis or a crushing tragedy
With calm, exalted courage, but the place
That needs the greatest strength and energy
Is daily grind: to manage just to laugh
At all the petty hazards of each day,
To smile, whilst sifting life's wheat from its chaff,
To strive to see just good along the way.

Red Wings Edge Jersey City In 22 Innings

By The Associated Press.

Sunday, normally, is a day of rest but you can't tell it to Tom Poholsky and Andy Tomasic after their record shattering 22-inning performance.

Poholsky, Rochester's rookie right-hander, and Tomasic Jersey City's seasoned veteran, hooked up in the duel—longest in International League history. It went five hours and 15 minutes and Poholsky, 10 years Tomasic's junior, emerged the winner 3-2

The old record was set by Toronto and Baltimore April 21, 1943, when the teams battled to a 2-2, 21-inning deadlock.

A crowd of 5,863 watched the struggle. Don Richmond's single, scoring Dick Cole from second base, gave Poholsky his 18th victory of the season. Tomasic gave up 13 hits, Poholsky nine.

Montreal Royals climbed to within four games of the league-leading Red Wings by sweeping a doubleheader from Syracuse 7-1 and 10-6.

Baltimore divided a twin bill with Buffalo and fell seven games behind Rochester. The Bisons beat the Orioles 6-4 in the opener but the third place Baltimores rebounded in the nightcap 7-5.

Stan Hack's Springfield Cubs edged Toronto Maple Leafs 6-5 in 12 innings.

Matlock Wins Sudbury Golf Tourney

SUDBURY, Aug. 14 (CP). — Young Tony Matlock of Kitchener combined some hot irons with an even hotter putter Sunday to win the third annual Idylwylde invitation gold tournament.

Matlock defeated North Bay's Bill Morland two and one in the tournament's 18-hole, medal play final.

It was Matlock's second major golf title here this year. Two weeks ago he won the Seagram Cup over the Sudbury Golf and Country club course.

The youthful shotmaker had no easy path to the crown In the semi-finals he defeated veteran Nick Weslock of Windsor, provincial amateur titlist, and in Morland he faced the Northern Ontario champion. His win over Weslock was by the same slim two and one margin.

Not All His Way

On Saturday, Matlock breezed through Idylwylde's Lloyd Simpson in the morning round, but was forced to an extra hole to down Al Flood of Toronto in the quarter-finals. It took a 30-foot putt for a birdie to eliminate Flood.

Morland had downed veteran Frank Wyatt of Beattie four and three in his semi-final match, after Wyatt had sprung a major upset with an extra hole victory over Bobby Fair of Toronto in the first round and had squeezed through to a 22-hole win over W. J McIntyre of Tillsonburg, Ont.

Weslock defeated Stew Watson of the host club and Jim Boeckh of Toronto on his way to the semis. Morland ousted Idylewylde's Gordon Browning and Ernie Nerlich of Toronto before eliminating Wyatt.

Weslock was the qualifying medallist, firing a brilliant 71 in qualifying play Friday. Fair was runner-up.

Jim Hearn Pitches Giants To Shutout Over Phillies

By JOE REICHLER,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

James T. Hearn, an unheralded righthander, is the top candidate for the baseball bargain of the year.

A month ago St. Louis Cardinals sold him to New York Giants for the waiver price of $10,000. Now, it is doubtful if they could buy him back for 10 times that amount.

Since joining the Giants, he has made six starts and New York has won five of them. Jim was credited with four of the decisions. He was beaten once.

He was never better as he pitched the Giants to a 2-0 shutout over the league-leading Philadelphia Phillies Sunday. He allowed four hits, walked one and struck out three.

The victory gave the Giants an even break in their four-game series with the pace-makers, and a record of 19 wins in their last 23 games.

Five-game Lead

Despite the loss the Phils remained five games in front of the second place Boston Braves. Brooklyn Dodgers cuffed the Braves 8-2.

Cincinnati Reds dropped the Cards into fourth place as Lefty Ken Raffensberger whipped them 3-2. The Reds helped themselves to sixth place with assistance from Pittsburgh Pirates who swept both ends of a doubleheader from the Cubs 7-4 and 2-0.

While the front running Detroit Tigers were idle because of wet grounds in St. Louis, their hold on first place in the American League become more secure as New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox lost while Cleveland Indians divided a doubleheader.

A four-hit batting performance by outfielder Paul Lehner and a four-hit pitching effort by southpaw Lou Brissie enabled Philadelphia Athletics to vanquish the Yankees 5-2.

Senators Edge Sox

Rookie Al Sima, with the help of reliefer Mickey Harris in the eighth, pitched Washington Senators to a 6-5 victory over the Red Sox.

Five-run innings were the decisive factors in the Indian-White Sox standoff. The Indians came from behind to win the opener 5-2 with a five-run eighth inning. The White Sox teed off on starter Dick Welk for five runs in the first inning to win the second game 7-5. Bob Feller won his 11th for the Tribe in the opener.

Lehner's homer with two on in the seventh was the winning blow for the A's against the Yankees Vic Raschi was the victim.

Erv Palica pitched the Dodgers to a two-percentage point margin over the Cards for third place. The young righthander allowed nine hits.

Bobby Adams hit four for four and drove in two runs and scored the other in Cincinnati's win over St. Louis. Raffensberger spaced nine hits to gain his 11th triumph.

Snaps Duel

Catcher Wes Westrum's infield hit with the bases loaded in the fifth inning snapped a scoreless duel between New York's Hearn and Philadelphia's Ken Johnson. Ed Stanky's triple and Don Mueller's single in the ninth made it 2-0.

Ralph Kiner slammed his 32nd homer of the year and 200th of his career to help Cliff Chambers gain his ninth win for Pittsburgh.

Plan To Film Life Story Of Ben Hogan

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOD, Aug. 14 (AP)—Bantam Ben Hogan, the miracle man of golf, is here to watch the filming of his life story. He admits that some of the story is too fantastic for the screen.

"For instance, some of the things concerning the crash are too unbelievable—like the officer who reported it having known me when I was a kid," he said in an interview.

He referred to the Texas automobile wreck in which he escaped death. More amazingly, he tottered back to win the United States open this year.

I tried to assure him that the Hogan comeback is enough of a legend so it could be believed on the screen. Ben said he was happy with the choice of Glenn Ford to portray him in the film.

Hogan added that his wife is delighted to have Anne Baxter playing her role.

Follow the Sun

The picture will be called "Follow the Sun." When director Sidney Lanfield was trying to sell the idea to producer Sam Engel, he told how the professional golfers travel from one tournament to another. "I see", said Engel, "they follow the sun."

The golf champ looks heartier than he did a few months ago and says he has completely recovered from his accident. Still, he'd just as soon not have to play 36 holes in one day.

"Everybody has a time in his life when he hits an obstacle and suffers a setback," he said. "I'm glad to have mine over. It could have been a lot worse."

I asked the master if he had a few words of advice for old duffers like myself. He thought it over and then replied:

"The only thing I can suggest is to study your game. Watch yourself in a mirror or take some movies of your swing. Or get some good advice. The trouble with most golfers is they keep making the same mistakes.

No Natural Player

"There's no such thing as a natural player. People say Sammy Snead is a natural, but that's not true; Sammy has worked hard on his swing, like any pro has.

"The natural instinct is to hit the ball with the clubhead as soon as possible. That's the one thing you shouldn't do. You should hold off hitting it until the last possible moment."

Stabbed In Brawl At Beverage Room

DELHI, Aug. 14—(CP)—Clinton Durson, 38, was stabbed in the abdomen and right forearm here Saturday night following a brawl in front of a beverage room on the main intersection.

Police are holding John Rankin, of Inverness, Nova Scotia, in connection with the stabbing. Both men were believed to be tobacco workers.

Pay Final Respects To 9 Lost In Arctic

GREENWOOD, N.S., Aug. 14—(CP)—The RCAF paid final respects Sunday to nine men who are buried in Arctic graves. They died two weeks ago when a Lancaster bomber crashed at a radio base 600 miles from the North Pole.

Some 1,000 persons attended a memorial service at this base of the Air Force's search and rescue unit. The traditional last post was accompanied by the wailing of a child whose father was lost in the accident.

Police End 'Joke'

CORNWALL, Aug. 14—(CP)—A practical joke found two Montreal youths today charged with creating a public mischief. John Orr, 23, and John Rodgers, 22, were arrested as they drove along a highway east of here, a dummy leg protruding from their car trunk. Motorists, thinking it part of a man's body, tipped off Provincial police. The pair told police they rigged up the dummy as a joke to see how far they could travel without being stopped.

Tour Defence Points

OTTAWA, Aug. 14 — (CP) — Thirteen high-ranking officers, students at the Imperial Defence College, arrived here Sunday night by air to start a coast-to-coast tour of Canada's industrial and defence points.

Fighting Outbreak

HALIFAX, Aug. 14—(CP)—A medical party from Goose Bay, Labrador, was flown into the Northern Quebec settlement of Fort Chimo Saturday in an effort to stem an outbreak of influenza which already has claimed three lives and struck 300 others.

Calgary Acts On Parking Aids Motorists

Two years ago when Calgary started installing street parking meters, D. E. Batchelor reports in the magazine "Civic Administration," the policy laid down by City Commissioner V. A. Newhall was that the revenue derived from these street parking meters would be reserved to provide facilities for the benefit of the motoring public, from whom the revenue would be obtained; these facilities to include the provision of off-street parking and any other measures of traffic control which would tend to alleviate traffic congestion, particularly in the main business district.

Sub-Department

The parking meter department was created as a sub-department of the city treasurer's office, in view of the fact that it was felt this would be a substantial revenue producer, and comes under the direct supervision of City Treasurer W. H. Partin.

Last November the city land department relinquished a piece of city owned land for the development as parking lot No. 1. The following February a further piece of city owned land was turned over to the parking meter department and was opened as parking lot No. 2.

Lot. No. 1, measuring some 130 by 176 feet, provides space for 85 cars. Lot No. 2, measuring 100 by 130 feet, is laid out to provide space for 34 cars.

Each parking lot is located a block or two from the main business district and Calgary's two largest department stores

The cost of preparing these lots, which includes tearing down old buildings, levelling, gravelling and oiling and the installation of parking stalls, etc., amounted to about $4,000 plus about $750 for the erection of entrance and exit signs and sundry other items.

An arrangement was made with a local outdoor advertising firm to fence the lots for the privilege of erecting lighted outdoor signboards at the back of the lots. This was done and has greatly enhanced the appearance of the parking area, with a certain amount of protection, as there is only one open entrance to the lots. The lots are also patrolled at regular intervals by members of the police motorcycle traffic squad.

Lots Paved

From our experience it would appear that paving of the lots with an asphalt base would be much more satsfactory than gravelling and oiling, as the heavy traffic on the lots entails a considerable amount of maintenance if they have other than a hard surface.

There are 119 Mi-Co parking lots meters in operation. These are manually operated and are five-hour, nickel-quarter meters. The motorist may park for one hour for inserting five cents, two hours for two five cent pieces, and so on up to five hours, or may obtain five hours' parking by the insertion of a 25-cent piece.

These are the same rates that pertain to the street meters, of which there are about 800 now in operation. They are manually operated, multiple-coin—one cent and five cents, 12 to 60 minutes' parking time.

During the past winter, which was an unusually severe one, these meters operated very satisfactorily and hardly any trouble was experienced with the clock mechanism. An arrangement was made with the public works department for the necessary snow removal by one of their trucks, for which the parking lot operating account was charged.

The parking lot account is only charged with specific items which improvements to the physical aspect of the lots require. No actual charge is made for the servicing and collecting from the meters.

The operating cost of the parking meter department is carried by the street parking meter fund, and it is not thought desirable to make any charge to the parking lots for these services, as the amount of time taken up by the parking lots, in the course of a month is practically negligible, compared with the whole parking meter department operation.

Here's How

The largest part of the Parking Lots Operation, to date, has been under winter conditions, when, of course, the use of the lots is rather limited, and until they have been in operation for a year, any statistical figures would be of no great value.

Below, however, is a tabulation of the results for April for Lot No. 1:

No. of meters in operation	85
No. of parking days	23
Average income per parking day	$ 26.89
Average income per meter	$ 7.28
Average income per meter day	$ .32
Gross revenue for month of April, 1950	$618.59
Total coins cleared	8,096

From the above, it is interesting to note that the average income per meter day of 32 cents compares very favorably with the average income per meter day for street meters, which was 35 cents.

JANET SMITH, Brantford, was one of the many girl sailors who helped set sails to catch every breath of a reluctant wind during the Saturday races on Chemong Lake.

Woman Suffers Broken Collarbone

Mrs. William Graham, 62, of 275 Lock St., was injured Saturday when she was struck by a car as she walked across George St. at London St.

She suffered a fractured collarbone, a broken bone in her right hand, a broken ankle, bruises and shock.

Frank S. Coyle, Bridge St., Lakefield, told police he was driving his truck north on George St., and he saw Mrs. Grahan stop momentarily, then go ahead. He said he thought she was going to stop.

Mrs. Graham was thrown about 20 feet by the impact, and was taken to Civic Hospital.

SAILING BOATS, most of them dinghies, are strung out on the second lap of the Open race of the Chemong Lake Sailing Regatta. Ken Slater of Stony Lake and his daughter Susan are leading, but on the last lap, Jimmy Collins got a puff of wind and skimmed into the lead to take the event. Mr. Slater placed second.

Belmont Lake Bass Betters Four Pounds

A smallmouth black bass weighing four pounds and three ounces was pulled from Belmont Lake Sunday by C. J. Crosier, 55 Fairview Blvd., Toronto.

Mr. Crosier who is renting a cottage on Belmont Lake was trolling in about four feet of water with a yellow jitterbug when the bass struck. It measured 19 inches in length and was 12 inches in girth.

CAR DAMAGED

A car driven by A. H. Eaton Newmarket, was damaged Saturday afternoon at George and Charlotte streets. Mr. Eaton told police he was driving south on George St. and had stopped at Charlotte St. when a truck collided with the rear of the Eaton car. Mr. Eaton got out of his car to speak to the truck driver, who drove off. He told police the name O. H. Pink was painted on the cab door of the truck.

Stony Lake Sailors Win Races At Chemong

Chemong sailing regatta honors fell mostly to Stony Lake sailors in three races Saturday and Sunday. Jim Collins of Stony Lake, with his brother Robin as crewman, sailing their 14-foot dinghy, won the open event and the 14-foot dinghy race Saturday afternoon. Ken Slater of Stony Lake, and his daughter Susan as crew, won the Kawartha Challenge Cup for dinghies in a race Sunday morning. They placed second in the open race and third in the dinghy race.

Jack Matthews of Chemong Lake, with Jane Gillespie for crew, made the best showing of the Chemong Lake sailors. He placed third in the open and second in the dinghy race.

Chemong had another representative among the winners, in the boat sailed by Frank Somerville with George Gray crewing. They were third in the Challenge Cup race.

The regatta was strictly a sailors' affair. There were about 21 boats taking place and their total crew of 42, more than doubled the number of spectators watching from the base at Gordon S. Matthew's cottage. Most of the participating boats came down from Stony and Sturgeon Lakes. A few people on the causeway and at other vantage points saw the racing.

Saturday's races were dulled by a lack of any worthwhile breeze. It took the winners one hour and 20 minutes to circle the triangular three-mile course just south of the causeway.

Sunday morning there was a steady wind and a four-legged course was set out, which the sailors had to circle twice.

The visiting sailors who were towed to Chemong Lake Saturday morning, spent the night with cottagers in Chemong Park who found spare beds for them.

Sudbury Man Drowned At Bobcaygeon

BOBCAYGEON, Aug. 14—James Spiers, aged 45, of 418 Elm St., Sudbury, was drowned here on Saturday.

Mr. Spiers was fishing off the dam and climbed on to some logs at the side of the dam in an effort to retrieve a frog for bait, when he slipped into the water. Other fishermen nearby heard him shout and rushed to his aid, but he was drawn under by the current and drawn through the pipe under the dam. His body was recovered about an hour later

Artificial respiration was immediately applied, and was continued for some time, but without success.

Chief Constable W. R. Caverley, of Bobcaygeon, investigated, and Aldon Thibadeau, Jack Hales, Darwin Kimball and George Scott all of Bobcaygeon, assisted in recovering the body.

Mr. Spiers was spending a holiday at a cottage on Nogies Creek, with some friends from Oshawa He is survived by his wife, one son and one daughter.

CLOUDS CUT ATTENDANCE

Threat of rain Sunday evening probably accounted for a rather small attendance at the concert by Peterborough Citizens Band at Riverside Park. The clouds drifted off, the weather was pleasant and the band played a pleasing program that received favorable comments still being mentioned today.

3,000,000 Muskie Fry, 25,000 Fingerlings From Deer Lake Hatchery Placed In Lakes

Ontario, one of the few places in the world to successfully propagate maskinonge, has just planted one of its best crops on record. From the hatchery operated by the Department of Lands and Forests at Deer Lake north of Havelock, employees have just removed more than 3,000,000 muskie fry and 25,000 or more fingerlings about six months old.

Economic value of the hatch, departmental officials say, is almost impossible to estimate. But tourists, and in some cases residents, are not averse to spending considerable sums of money to catch a single muskie.

This most-prized fresh water barracuda is also one of the most difficult of all fish to raise in a hatchery. A voracious cannibal, the muskie spends its first 12 days of life feeding on the egg sac from which it emerged as a tiny black dot hardly visible to the eye. But immediately it reaches the energetic wriggling age, the tiny muskie seeks live food. And, it seems, the muskie is always hungry.

At Deer Lake, part of the hatchery is devoted to the propagation of minnows on which the infant muskies are fed. At present, a few muskies are being held for exhibition purposes at the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto late in August. Once they have been displayed to eager-eyed fishermen, these too will join their little brothers and sisters in some of Ontario's best muskie waters.

The fingerlings now distributed range from five to seven inches in length—big enough, according to Dr. W. J. K. Harkness, Chief of the Fish and Wildlife Division, to take care of themselves against the attacks of most predators. And big enough, too, to find their own live food in Ontario's myriad muskie lakes.

City Bus Serves Civic Hospital

Bus service to the new Civic Hospital has been started by the city bus line.

People going to the hospital can catch the Charlotte St. West bus every half hour at 15 minutes to each hour and 15 minutes after each hour at Simcoe and George Sts.

The bus travels out Charlotte St., through the Wartime houses at the west end of Charlotte St. and along the new hospital road to the front entrance of the hospital. The bus makes no stops after it leaves Charlotte St. until it gets to the hospital.

Leaving the hospital, the bus returns to Charlotte St. and turns south on Clonsilla Ave. to Western Ave. where it circles on a south route and back to the terminal.

Anyone boarding the bus at the hospital may get a transfer. Passengers can then get off the bus when it reaches Charlotte St. and walk two blocks east on Charlotte St. to Monaghan Rd. and there catch the Jackson Park bus which travels directly downtown. In this way passengers can save time and avoid the longer south route.

Sundays, when the Charlotte St. West bus does not run, the Jackson Park bus is rerouted from the corner of Monaghan Rd. and Charlotte St. west on Charlotte and out to the hospital, coming back the same way and resuming its normal rout downtown This gives a 20-minute service to the hospital on Sundays starting at 9.50 a.m.

City To Build Sidewalks At New Hospital

"It is all out of the same purse any way," was the attitude of resignation of the city council in authorizing last week's expenditure on Civic Hospital sidewalks for which there was no appropriation in the estimates.

"They were presumably in their plans but they didn't ask us before," said Mayor M. Swanston. "Any way, the taxpayer has to pay. City Engineer Chalmers has the work laid out, but he needed authority to begin. It means that we'll have to do that work ourselves, and let the contract for something else."

The required present walk is from the nurses residence and from the parking lot.

"We have a three or four million dollar hospital, and if you haven't a sidewalk, what have you got?" Mayor Swanston commented.

"It's not a question of what is required, but of appropriation to cover the cost," Ald. H. Dodds said.

"And we have no allowance in our appropriations for that job, but the work has to be done." Mayor Swanston said.

Looking beyond this item of cost to its effect on the financial statement for the year, His Worship said, "Well, some of our committees will have to keep their costs down still more."

900-Ton Dredge For Steep Rock

ATIKOKAN, Ont. —(CP)— It took 39 flatcars to transport a 900-ton dredge to this town 80 miles east of Fort Frances.

The dredge will remove 50,000,000 cubic yards of mud from the new Hogarth iron mine at nearby Steep Rock Lake.

A Chicago contracting firm is doing the job. The dredge was bought in Boston, towed to New York for disassembly and then hauled to Steep Rock by rail.

Draining of part of the lake and removal of the mud is necessary to gain access to the ore body.

Believe Germans Willing To Fight Soviet

By HENRY J. HENRY.

FRANKFURT, Aug 14 (Reuters).—Do Germans want a new army and would they fight for the western world against Russia?

Many official allied spokesmen proclaim their opposition to German rearmament. But from western sources comes increasing pressure to arm Germany as a defence move against the Soviets.

Basically, most Germans are sick of war. Vivid in the memory of millions of them is the shattering collapse of the German armies on the Russian, Western and African fronts in the war which ended only five years ago.

But the West Germans are bitterly anti-Russian and anti-Communist. Hatred of Russia and Communism is deep rooted and probably more profound here than anywhere else in Europe.

Soviet Big Help

The western campaign to develop democracy in western Germany received unexpected aid through the Soviet blockade of Berlin. Soviet actions towards Germans probably did more to reinforce anti-Communism in Western Germany than any western appeals.

So, ideologically at any rate, the Germans are well prepared to fight again—provided the enemy is Russia.

Probably a majority would fight in such a war because, though they rarely indicate it publicly, the German spirit of revenge against Russia runs deep. This is particularly true of German prisoners-of-war returned from Russia.

Though the majority of Germans are violently anti-Russian, there are others who still look to the day when Germany will have its revenge on the west as well as on the east.

Welshmen Held For Burning Flag

CAERPHILLY, Wales, Aug. 14 (Reuters) — Welsh nationalists booed a government minister and set fire to a Union Jack in demonstration here Saturday during the Welsh Eistedfodd (drama and music festival).

Ness Edwards, Britain's post-master-general—himself a Welshman—was booed when he warned Welshmen not to make "a Sudetenland" of Wales.

Mayor George Williams, of Cardiff, had earlier been jeered for using English when the Eistedfodd committee had ruled only Welsh should be spoken.

Extreme nationalists, those who seek home rule for Wales, even said Williams had ruined Cardiff's chances of ever becoming the "capital" of Wales.

Police here were holding two men after an attempt to burn the Union Jack flying over Caerphilly Castle.

It was thought the flag was taken down, set on fire and then hoisted again. As the flag was wet, it smoked but did not burn.

Three Indian States Ask Aid In Famine

BOMBAY, Aug. 14—(Reuters)—Conditions of near-famine were reported Sunday from three Indian states.

Requests for help reached Bombay from the states of Madras, Bihar and Bombay. The Indian Government immediately ordered measures to control production and distribution of food in the affected areas.

In Madras, members of the legislative assembly asked the state government to resign if the Indian government failed to send food to allay "starvation conditions" in several areas.

New Offer Rumored From Rail Companies

MONTREAL, Aug. 14—(CP)—A Montreal paper says in a news-page story today a rumor is being circulated among railway union officials that the railway companies would make another offer, possibly today, including definite dates when the 40-hour week and other demands of the unions would be introduced.

Meanwhile, however, arrangements for a wage-hour strike by 124,000 railway employees in the non-operating trades set for 6 a.m. Aug. 22 were concluded by union officials.

CBC Answers Charges By Bengough

TORONTO, Aug. 14 (CP) — The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation Sunday night answered charges by Percy Bengough that the corporation's national news bulletin Aug. 10 on the pending rail strike favored railway management.

"It is not the purpose of CBC news bulletins to provide background information, commentary nor extensive review," said Donald Manson, CBC assistant general manager, in a statement. He said amplification of news reports is often made in separate programs. . ."

He was replying to a charge by Mr. Bengough, president of the Trades and Labor Congress (AFL), that the Aug. 10 bulletin was "simply a propaganda broadcast in favor of railway management." The bulletin reported developments in the threatened Aug. 22 strike of some 124,000 employees of Canada's railways.

Mr. Manson's statement, the CBC release said, was made "pending examination of Mr. Bengough's protest by Chairman A. D. Dunton."

Don't Make News

"The CBC does not make the news," the statement said. "On August 10th new developments in the railway dispute were: (1) "Final" proposal of the railways; (2) rejection of the proposal by the union negotiating committee, and (3) a request by the railways that another meeting be held with union officials regarding the maintenance of essential services.

These three developments were covered briefly but fairly in the CBC national news bulletin of August 10th. The CBC report was based on news stories supplied by The Canadian Press and British United Press.

Separate Program

"It is not the purpose of CBC news bulletins to provide background information, commentary nor extensive review. Review statements are made only when necessary to clarify an item. On a continuing story, such as the railway dispute, new developments are presented as they occur, without review. Amplification of news reports is often made in separate programs such as CBC news roundup and news commentary programs.

"This was done on August 10th in CBC news roundup immediately following the national news bulletin in question when the railway dispute was reviewed by an independent commentator on an impartial basis, at the request of CBC. A further news report, covering action taken by both railways and labor, was given the same night on the CBC dominion network news bulletin."

Sailors' Wives Prefer Shore Life

DURBAN, South Africa (CP)—Seven months ago, two British housewives decided to ease cost-of-living and housekeeping problems by going to sea with their husbands. They are Mrs. E. Thorne and Mrs. Angus MacDonald, wives of the captain and chief engineer of the freighter Inverbank.

Life at sea, they said, was grand for a time, with no cooking to do and no queues, but after a while they missed flowers and all those little things which help to make a woman happy in the home, husband or no husband. After this voyage, they are going back to the land.

Mrs. Thorne and Mrs. MacDonald said they could assure the wives of all sailors that the old saying that a sailor has a wife in every port was a gross libel on the average sea-faring man.

Scientist Says Jungle Law Not Kill But Co-operation

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE.

NEW BRUNSWICK, NJ, Aug. 14 — (AP). — Is the law of the jungle kill or be killed?

No, says a scientist. The law seems to be co-operation.

He adds: "Man is born for co-operation, not for competition or conflict. This is a basic discovery of modern science."

The scientist is Dr. Ashley Montagu, professor of Anthropology at Rutger's University, and author of a new book, "On Being Human."

Most people, he says, have looked at only one side of Darwin's theory of evolution, and have stressed survival of the fittest and the struggle for existence.

Thus they believe competition, aggressiveness and warfare are natural tendencies in the animal kingdom, and in man's conduct.

Co-operation Strongest

"Certainly aggressiveness exists in nature," he writes, "but there is also a healthy non-ruthless competition, and very strong drives toward social and co-operative behavior. The evidence strongly indicates that, of all these drives, the principle of co-operation is the most dominant and biologically the most important."

The golden rule seems to be sound biology, Dr. Montagu says. In his book and in an interview he cited numerous experiments and observations by scientists to support this argument:

White mice living alone in cages don't grow as fast as mice living in groups of two to four. The groups huddle together for warmth, saving energy for growth.

A seagull breeds more young when it lives in a large flock than a small one, and an ant digging a nest moves more dirt when it works with other ants than when working alone. If amoeba are moved some distance from their fellows, they immediately start back toward the group.

Other Evidence

Savage African elephants will stop in flight for safety to help lift a wounded comrade. Chimpanzees, supposedly self-centred help each other carry loads and pass food to one another.

"The impulses toward co-operative behavior are already present in man at birth, and all they require is cultivation," Dr. Montagu writes. "There is not a shred of evidence that man is born with 'hostile' or 'evil' impulses which must be watched and disciplined. Discipline of basic impulses is, indeed, necessary, but it is the discipline of love, not of frustration, which they require."

Propose Fund To Army Europe

PARIS, Aug. 14—(AP)— The French Government will propose this week establishment of an Atlantic pact loan fund to help pay for arming Europe against Communist invasion, a spokesman said Saturday.

The spokesman said the fund would be subscribed to by member countries and private investors and repaid in currencies of the countries drawing from it.

Heart of the plan is the expectation that the United States will pay most of the cost and the rest will be raised by the Western European countries. The plan is to be presented to the pact deputies in London.

France has drafted a rearmament program for herself, calling for expenditure of the equivalent of nearly $11,000,000,000 in the next three years.

Hydrogen Bomb Running On Much Faster Schedule

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 —(AP)— The hydrogen bomb is running a faster schedule than its predecessor A-bomb.

Calling in the Dupont Company to do much the same job for H-bombs as for A-bombs shows the difference. For H-bombs the Duponts were called in six months after President Truman's starting order last January. For A-bombs the company was not called for several years.

For A-bombs the Duponts made plutonium, a new metal. For H-bombs they evidently will make tritium, a new hydrogen gas, triple ordinary weight.

It took about 2½ years to manufacture plutonium. Tritium may come faster because the process is similar.

Tritium probably is the most expensive substance ever made in quantity. The only published estimate of cost is nearly $450,000,000 a pound.

Why use tritium? There are two other forms of hydrogen, deuterium, which is double weight, and ordinary. Deuterium, known as heavy water, is not expensive.

Too Slow

All three produce heat enough to form a bomb by fusion to form helium atoms. Ordinary hydrogen can't be used because it fuses too slowly. Bomb fusion must take place within a few millionths of a second. Deuterium is fast, perhaps fast enough. But tritium is faster.

The margin of success is so narrow, a matter possibly of billionths of a second, that tritium may be ever more of a must for the H-bomb than plutonium was for A-bombs.

Tritium is made in the same atomic reactors that make plutonium. Present reactors can make 80 pounds of plutonium for one pound of tritium, and the prospects of speeding up the new hydrogen are poor.

A good guess is that H-bombs will not be made entirely of this precious stuff. A little tritium may be the catalyst that will enable the use of cheaper forms of hydrogen.

Recent Discovery

Tritium was discovered shortly before the Second World War. Small amounts have been made in American plutonium plants. Tritium can be made from at least six different elements. These are deuterium, helium, lithium, beryllium, boron and nitrogen. There are at least seven processes, most of them using the neutrons that are made only in atomic reactors.

The simplest process uses deuterium as a starting material. But what process will be used, or whether it is ever one of the seven known is a secret.

Not Mysterious

Making a hydrogen bomb may be difficult but it is not mysterious. H-bombs are the oldest nuclear bombs. All the scientists in the world knew the principles of hydrogen bombs long before such a thing as an A-bomb was ever dreamed of. This hydrogen possibility was first mentioned in 1915, not then as a bomb, but as the process by which the sun and stars make their heat.

Hydrogen was not considered practical because the fusion won't start until temperatures are 1,000,000 or more degrees. The A-bomb unexpectedly furnishes the starting heat. Immediately scientists of every country, Russia included, knew how to make H-bombs.

5 UAW Unit Officers Tried As Communists

DETROIT, Aug. 14—(AP)—The general council of the big Ford Rouge local of the United Automobile Workers' Union (CIO) Sunday ordered five unit officers tried as Communist sympathizers.

Carl Stellato, president of the 60,000-member local at the Ford Motor Company, preferred charges against the five men. He asserted they were "subservient to the Communist party" and in "agreement with the program and policies of Soviet Russia."

Stellato identified them as officers of various union shop units that make up Local 600.

Stellato said each would face a trial board formed under the UAW constitution.

Icelanders Settled Village Now Completing 75th Year

By JACK SCOTT

GIMLI, Man. — Ordinarily, I guess, Gimli is a pretty quiet place. It's an inelegant little prairie town on the west shore of Lake Winnipeg, a curious combination of fishing village and farm village and with a perimeter of summer cottages inhabited weekends by folks from Winnipeg, some 65 miles due south.

Driving through the town you might notice the "foreign" names of some of the merchants (Beauchemin Electric, Chopek the auctioneer, Thorunn's beauty salon, etc.) and perhaps even be aware of the startling number of fair-haired, blue-eyed citizens. But you'd have no way of knowing that a Canadian saga was written here.

Today, when we drove into the town, there were flags flying in the rough, broad streets and bunting on many of the frame houses, for this is the 75th anniversary of the founding of Gimli and therein, as the saying goes, hangs a tale.

It was told to us by the town's mayor, Barney Egilson, and its historian, Jon Laxdal, and this is the story:

Seventy-five years ago this week a party of 85 families, who had drifted down the Red River from Fort Gary in crude house boats, landed here on the lake's shore. They were Icelanders, an ocean and half a continent from home. They called the place Gimli, which in their language, means "paradise."

These people were only a year away from their native land. They had settled originally in the Ontario Muskoka district, where the men worked for as little as 10 cents a day on farms and life in general was grim. Two of the colonists were appointed scout for a new home to the west. The men went first to the Red River Valley and found it swarming with grasshoppers. Then, northward beside the lake, they found their promised land.

And Tragedy

The first two winters in paradise are still the main topic of discussion when the three remaining "originals" are asked to reminisce about the earliest days.

In the first winter the settlers were without proper cabins, vegetables or milk. Gimli had its first graveyard because of scurvy, exposure and starvation.

During the next summer another 1,200 settlers arrived in the colony direct from Iceland and the settlement fanned out along the sandy shore of the lake.

Then in the fall of 1876 and the winter of 1877, dark disaster came upon the colony, perhaps the worst to hit any group of new Canadians in our history. An epidemic of smallpox broke out and the entire colony was quarantined for 22 months.

Soldiers stood guard at the limits of the colony and when one Sigurdur Kirsoferson took himself a bride, Caroline Taylor, the first schoolteacher, they were married by a half-breed minister who stood prudently on the far side of Netley Creek to conduct the ceremony.

In this epidemic 102 of these early "DP's" lost their lives. Most of them were children.

From that point on Gimli had its ups and downs, including a bitter controversy between two opposing religious groups which caused many of the pioneers to move to other parts of Canada. But the immigrants kept coming and by 1900 the population was more than 2,000.

One of the most interesting aspects of the early days was the establishment of self-government which made "New Iceland" a kind of self-sufficient republic within Canada.

The colonists had their own federal government, and a code assembly, sanctioned by the of laws for the four districts of Vidinesbygd, Arnesbydg, Fljotsbygd and Mikleyjarbygd. There was no criminal code, perhaps because there was no crime.

Old and New

Today Gimli shows few outwar signs of its stirring history. The Icelandic citizens, like Mayor Egilson and Historian Laxdal, are a quiet-spoken, strong-faced people. There has been some inter-marrying with central European immigrants and many of the younger people are strikingly handsome and sometimes dark-complexioned.

Nearly all the old-timers converse in the original tongue, retain strong tie with Iceland and many have been back to the old country for visits (an emissary from Reykjavik was on hand for the anniversary celebrations) but the youngsters seem to be losing that heritage.

The town itself bears a striking resemblance to a small seaside fishing village and on a day like today when there is a heavy surf rolling in on the shore and the fishing boats are coming in loaded with the fine whitefish, the flat farm lands stretching away from the town's back door seem highly incongruous.

Gimli reflects a curious blending of the old and the new. While the old people of the town knelt in prayer in the park, two younger Icelandic Canadians nearby were lobbing a ball with lacrosse sticks. Downtown in the window of H. P. Tergesen's store there was an historic display which featured, among other things, a photograph of Gimli's first baseball team.

Hope Salmon Make Comeback

TORONTO, Aug. 14 (CP) — Lands department officials are hopeful that the Atlantic salmon, a victim of encroaching civilization in Ontario, may make a comeback in the province.

An intensive investigation of waters suitable for propagation of the fish—once plentiful in Lake Ontario—is being made by the department.

District biologists are checking areas where salmon were planted in a program started in 1938. These districts include Lake Simcoe, Big Clear Lake, Frontenac County; Lake Penage, near Sudbury; Wilmot Creek, Durham County; Lake Temagami; Fisher Lake, Ontario County; the Rouge River, near Toronto, and Trout Lake, in Nipissing district.

No Bony Females For Television

LONDON — (CP) — A British television producer has listed these qualifications for showgirl success in TV:

Medium height, fairly small thighs, straight legs and a minimum of rounded calf.

Recent tests have shown, he said, that girls with bony shoulders, arms, legs and faces show up poorly on the TV screens. Bones throw shadows that cannot be disguised.

Showgirls appear foreshortened on the screen and under-sized gals come out like midgets, he said.

Native Speaker Maori Portia

WELLINGTON, N.Z.—(CP)—A native speaker, described by one member as a "Maori Portia" has captured the hearts of the New Zealand parliament.

She is Mrs. Iriaka Ratana, the first Maori woman ever to enter parliament. A widow with six children, she won the Labor seat at the last election formerly held by her husband.

When she rose to make her maiden speech in parliament Mrs. Ratana had the choice of addressing the House in English or Maori. She used Maori for a traditional greeting and then for 25 minutes held the rapt attention of the House in quietly-spoken but perfectly phrased English Members listened with interest while she described how the example of Dame Enid Lyons in Australia had inspired her to follow in her late husband's footsteps on a political career.

Then she spoke of the spiritual and material needs of her people and of the importance of home life in developing a new outlook among her race. She spoke with deep feeling and with only occasional references to notes.

Few new members have been greeted with such applause from all sides of the House as Mrs Ratana received when she finished. The next speaker, Mr. F W. Doidge, Minister of External Affairs, paid her a graceful tribute when he declared, "The Maori people have sent another Portia among us."

YWCA Conference Draws Delegates From Many Lands

TORONTO.—(CP).—It may be some time before pretty, almond-eyed Okgill Kim can return home from the Young Women's Christian Association world membership conference here.

Miss Kim is from Seoul, Korea, and while she is discussing what contribution the young women of the world can make to world peace, invaders from the north are overrunning her homeland.

Dressed in a "Chuksan Chian" of peach silk over a white underdress, she was in vivid contrast to her more soberly dressed sisters who came from 24 countries to attend the conference.

The black-haired Okgill has not heard from her family in Seoul since the beginning of the conflict there and gravely expressed her appreciation to the United Nations for their aid to her country.

"I hope that the sacrifice of young lives will soon lead to world peace," she said.

A member of the National Board of the YWCA since 1948, Okgill is a graduate of the Ewha women's university in Seoul, which offers eight different degrees to women students. Founded in 1886 with a total student body of one it now has (or had before the Korean war) an enrolment of almost 2,000 women.

No Blind Dates

From Cairo, Egypt came pert Ellen Shakhashira. Ellen said parental restrictions are dying out somewhat in Egypt. The veiled Moslem women are gradually disappearing from the streets and families are letting down social barriers.

"But we are still very conservative," she smiled. "We don't have blind dates and many girls are not allowed out on the streets alone as you are over here."

The west German delegate, Hanna Schussler of Hambourg, helped reorganize the Girl Scout movement in western Germany after the war and is at the conference as a joint guest of the American Girl Scouts and the world "Y."

Remembers Hitler

Associated with the Y.W.C.A. since she was 18, Hanna told in halting English how "in Hitler time, we were only allowed to do Bible study and singing — and that quietly."

Guadalupe Colon, or "Lupe" to her friends, came from Puerto Rico where the "Y" is only four years old but already has 1,100 members.

"We are very gay in my country," she laughed, "and the girls like the fellowship the "Y" gives them."

FitzPatrick Plans to Film People, Not Places Now

HOLLYWOOD — (AP) — The voice is authoritative, slightly nasal, and much imitated by amateur and professional wits:

"And so, as the sun sinks slowly in the west, we reluctantly say farewell to Bombay, the gateway to India."

It belongs to James A. FitzPatrick, pioneer producer of movie travelogues with soundtrack narration. After travelling approximately 1,500,000 miles around the earth, filming curious and breathtaking sights, he is eyeing new worlds. An amateur astronomer, he says:

"I have my eye on many a star I never used to pay much attention to. The earth is beginning to lose interest for me. A tree, a rock, or a river is pretty much the same anywhere. If my wife and five children would let me, I'd to go on the first rocket ship to Mars."

Tries Personalities

What still interests FitzPatrick about Mother Earth is the human being. His "Travel Talks" are therefore switching emphasis from places to personalities.

The first woman ever to graduate from an Egyptian law school was a recent interview subject for his color camera. "She spoke English better than I did," he says. Before the war he found Egyptian and Turkish girls veiled. "Now they're in co-ed colleges and just as modern in dress and thought as American girls."

Changed Thinking

He believes the war was largely responsible for changed thinking and practices. "War is a disturber of many things".

James Anthong FitzPatrick is a medium-sized man with gray-flecked hair above a freckled forehead. His pink face is pleasant but determined-looking. He was born 48 years ago, of all-Irish descent, in Shelton, Conn.

He studied playwriting at New York's Academy of Dramatic Arts. He bought a silent-movie camera and made films starring neighborhood kids in Brooklyn's Prospect Park. A distributing company peddled them to theatres.

Natural Outgrowth

In Europe he filmed the haunts and relics of Chopin, Liszt, Beethoven. In England he recorded the lives of Shakespeare, Shelley, Scott, Burns and Byron. Travelogues were a natural outgrowth.

Sound was just coming in. It was recorded then on discs like phonograph records. A New York theatre agreed to show the first travelogue, made in Spain. The needle skidded across the disc, ruining the demonstration. The audience laughed.

Fitzpatrick got permission to sit in the 105-degree projection room and guide the needle with his finger at the next showing. There was applause, and the manager said, "I'll book all of these you can make." A releasing contract with M-G-M followed.

In 21 years, Fitzpatrick has been around the world 20 times. He has averaged only three months a year in the United States. He has travelled mostly by air, but also by steamer, rail, auto, ox drag, horse, donkey, canoe, and foot. His home is in Beverly Hills.

Gordon D. Harris Marries Shirley L. Walker

St. Paul's Anglican Church, Bancroft, provided the setting, August 3, for the marriage of Shirley Leona Walker, daughter of Mrs. Roy Walker and the late Mr. Walker, Marmora, and Gordon Donald Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harris, Marmora. The Rev. W. F. Smith officiated at the wedding ceremony.

The bride wore a street length gown of baby blue taffeta, white accessories, and a corsage of red roses. The bridal attendant was Mrs. Arthur Young, sister of the bride, who wore a navy blue crepe gown, white accessories, and a corsage of white carnations.

The groomsman was Mr. Arthur Young, Bancroft.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister for the immediate relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris will live in Marmora.

DOROTHY DIX

Get to Know Several Girls Before Deciding to Marry

DEAR MISS DIX: I am past 28, but due to my work and because I am bashful and a great lover of sports I have never taken any interest in girls. Never had a sweetheart. Never went with a girl even while in high school. Two months ago I met a girl with whom I have fallen desperately in love. She is wonderful. Even my father and mother think so, but my father thinks that before I marry this girl I should go with some other girls and be able to contrast her with them. He thinks I haven't had enough experience to be able to judge whether she is suited to me or not. But I know she is all right. I never was so happy in my life. How about it?—JIMMY.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Well, Jimmy, you seem to have it bad. First love has hit you for a goal and so it is useless to advise putting off the wedding until you can find out whether she is the only one or not.

Father's Advice Wise

But all the same your father's counsel is good. Marriage is for a long, long time and before you enter into it it is a good thing to shop around among the girls so as to be sure you are getting just what you want in a wife.

Half the unhappy marriages are the result of men and women's marrying before they gave the opposite sex the once-over. A boy who has never gone about much with girls thinks he has fallen in love with the girl next door or the girl he works next to in business, and he marries her. Then he meets up with another girl, who is pretty while his wife is homely, who is gay and lively where his wife is quiet and dumb, who flatters him while his wife tells him of his faults, and he falls head over heels in love with the stranger and the mischief is to pay.

The more men and women know each other before marriage, the less likely they are to make mistakes in selecting their mates. And for this reason every boy and girl should go about with as many other boys and girls as possible. In that way they will be able to institute comparisons between them and find out which ones they like best.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a bride of three months. My husband is everything I could wish for except that he is a tease and I happen to be one who just can't stand being teased. I have begged my husband time and time again to stop kidding me, but he won't do it and it drives me to tears. What shall I do?

TWENTY.

ANSWER: Learn to take it and like it. There are a lot of things that every wife has to learn to endure from her husband, and not the least of these is his sense of humor. Many a marriage is wrecked on husband's little jokes which got on his wife's nerves instead of hitting her funny bone.

I, myself, hold no brief for teasers, who I think are not only cruel but rude, ill-bred and the greatest bores on earth, but if your husband gets any diversion out of torturing you, you will either have to get a divorce or grow a thicker skin. For the teaser is wedded to the idea that he is witty and nothing will divorce him from it.

Of course, the best remedy for the teaser is to hand him a hot one back. Publicize his pet weakness and you will make him afraid to expose yours for teasers notoriously can't stand to be teased. If you can't do this, learn to laugh at his teasing. That will take the edge off it, but as long as he can make you cry you will just incite him to further effort.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am about to marry the former wife of a man of notorious reputation. The lady has been awarded the custody of the child, a boy who is not yet 10 years old. I contend that the child's name should be changed to mine. The mother thinks that his name should not be changed regardless of his father's infamous reputation. Kindly give us your opinion on the subject.

E. V.

ANSWER: A man's earthly immortality depends upon his passing his name down to his children and it's a terrible thing to deprive him of this by having the children's name changed to that of a stepfather, provided he has kept his name decent and honorable.

But it is a different story if he has befouled his name himself and made it a symbol of shame instead of a badge of honor. Under such conditions the father's name becomes a handicap to a child and he is fortunate indeed if he has a stepfather to throw over him the mantle of a respected name. So I agree with you that it will be far better for your stepchild's name to be changed to yours.

Feijoada Recipe Stresses Brandy For Timid Cooks

By CARLOS ESCUDERO

RIO DE JANEIRO —(AP)— The old woman who lived in a shoe isn't in it, but the old shoe could be. It looks like a major disaster, but it's only feijoada, a typical Brazilian dish.

Pronounced it fey-joe-ad-ah; survive it if you can.

To cook it ,start with a bottle of sugar cane brandy on the kitchen table. It goes with the meal. The women should tend their knitting; this is a man's job.

First have a drink—for luck.

Now let's have a pig's ear, his knuckles, and a pound of tripe. Then these jerked meats: beef, pork, beef tongue—about a pound of each.

Here's more: two pounds of black beans, a half-pound each of pork sausage, Spanish-style sausage, bacon and salt pork. The jerked meat and beans are soaked overnight.

Get Helper

Get a helper and keep an eye on the bottle. Assemble one pound of rice, six stalks of green kale, three or four onions, four tomatoes, 6 garlic cloves, a handful of leeks, a fistful of parsley and four bay leaves. Also needed: some mandioc flour.

This recipe will feed six Brazilians or a dozen Canadians. Most Brazilians don't care much for breakfast—but they really eat at noon.

Get a big pot. Wash the meat. Leave the beans soaking—it makes them less aggressive. First take care of the main mess.

Put two tablespoonsful of fat in the pot. Plop in two chopped onions. Mash four garlic cloves and throw them in when the onions turn golden. Then toss in the bay leaves, tomatoes, leeks and parsley. Chop the meat in big chunks and the sausages into little ones. Drain the beans and throw them in when the meat and sausages have cooked half an hour. Stir this around for 15 minutes, on a low flame. Then pour in two quarts of boiling water.

Inspiration Needed

Pour a drink into the cook—for inspiration.

Let the brew stew for two or three hours until it is down to a thick soup. Keep the heat low. If the beans burn, heave everything out and start some other day. Burnt beans ruin it, if anything can.

Meanwhile, go ahead with the rice: wash it, drain it, bless it with half a tablespoonful of salt. Brown four onion slices in a big saucepan with one tablespoonful of fat. Split two garlic cloves in quarters and brown them too. Throw away the onions an garlic and drop the rice in the fat. Stir it around to fry without browning.

Add eight cups of boiling water. Let this project boil until no more water shows on top of the rice. In about half an hour you should have gooey rice, a bit hard. If you prefer it soft and dry, lower the fire and take it off when it suits you.

Chop the kale to a fare-thee-well. Drop it in boiling water for five minutes. Turn the fire off and look into the main operation. When the beans are soft, it is done.

To serve, spread a layer of beans and meat, sprinkle well with mandioc—and cover with rice. Sprinkle the kale on top of that.

Tuck a napkin into your collar and proceed at your own risk.

Finish off the meal with fresh oranges.

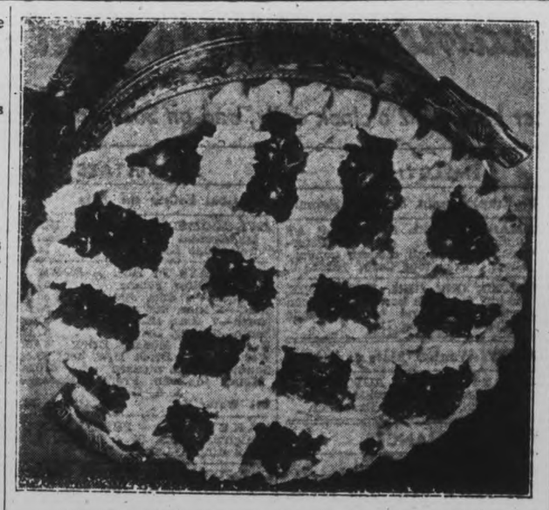
To aid digestion, have another drink.

What's Right?

You are giving a party in honor of some person you feel you must entertain for.

WRONG: When you invite the guests, admit that giving the party is just one of those things you "had" to do.

RIGHT: Try to give the impression that you are giving the party because you want to—not from a sense of duty or obligation.



COTTAGE CHEESE forced through a pastry tube makes the luscious lattice topping for this colorful cherry pie.

COOKBOOK OF THE WEEK

Easy as Pie to Bake Pie If Suggestions Followed

Good pie is a joy to the baker and the eater and it is no problem to produce with the aid of "250 Superb Pies and Pastries," the Examiner's fifth release in the Culinary Arts Institute Cookbook series. If you are inexperienced cook you will have no trouble following the step-by-step description and illustrations in this wonderful cookbook, and if you are an old hand at pie-baking you will be thrilled at the many novel suggestions and recipes.

One unusual idea is this cottage cheese topping for a cherry pie. To make it you bake a cherry pie without a top crust. When it is cool force cottage cheese through a pastry tube into a lattice pattern over the top. You can use fresh or canned cherries and any recipe you are accustomed to following, but here is a good recipe for canned cherry pie that you wil surely want to try:

Red Cherry Pie

1 No. 2 can tart red cherries
2½ tablespoons granulated tapioca
1 tablespoon melted butter
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon flour
2 drops red food coloring
1 recipe Plain Pastry.

Mix cherries and juice with next next 6 ingredients and let stand for 15 minutes. Stir well. Line piepan with pastry, pour in filing and cover with top crust. Bake in very hot oven (450 degrees F.) 10 minutes; reduce to moderate (350 degrees F.) and bake about 25 minutes longer. Makes 1 (9-inch) pie.

Besides pie the Pie Book covers dumplings, tarts, Danish pastry, puffs and many other fancy pastries with illustrations of novel ways of serving. To get your copy of the Pie Book simply clip one coupon from page 2 of any issue of the Examiner and present it with 25c at the Examiner office or to your Examiner Carrier or at Braund's Home Food Markets. If you prefer to obtain your copy by mail, send 30c (5c additional for postage and handling) to Cookbook Department, care of the Examiner, Peterborough.

QUESTION: I would be very glad to have information on oven canning with an electric range. Do you place sealers in a pan of water upon placing them in oven? As near as I understand from my — cook book you do not have to. I have heard various discussions over this so am seeking your advice. Also may I have low calorie diet as I have an overactive thyroid gland and find it very hard to keep my weight under control.

This is my first attempt at writing and I am hoping I have sucess. I am hoping before cucumber season your print some pickle recipes as any of your recipes are always good. F. W. M.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: I am not familiar with the method of oven canning, that you mention, in the manufacturer's cook book, but the method of oven canning I recommend does require that filled and sealed jars be placed in pan containing hot water.

You see, if the jars are placed in the dry heat of the oven the danger of cracking the glass is increased, when the oven door is opened, because the glass takes several seconds to contract.

The steps I take to reduce breaking are (1) water in pan in which jars are standing during prescribed sterilization time in oven (2) turn off heat and slightly open oven door (3) after one minute open oven door wide (4) remove pan full of sterilized jars of fruit from oven to wooden surface where there are no drafts (5) Tighten seal. (6) Invert jars to cool.

I am mailing the calorie chart to you. From this you can choose the low calorie foods.

One ideal way to reduce it to not eat anything containing sugar or fat of any kind, and to get at least 2 hours out-of-door exercise every day.

You may eat as much fruit of every kind as you like, except the dried fruits, and not more than one banana per day.

You may eat as many vegetables as you like except dried beans and peas and lentils and potatoes and rice.

You should eat at least one egg per day and four ounces of lean meat or fish, plus some cheese, preferably cottage cheese. Most other cheeses have a high fat content.

When you get so hungry that you are tempted to eat some forbidden food, take an eight-ounce glass of tomato juice to keep you from nibbling before meal-time.

I will try to print a pickle recipe every week until the pickling season is over.

✧ ✧ ✧

Sweet Pickles (using cauliflower and cucumbers only)

Two quarts 2½-inch gherkins, 2 quarts cauliflower flowerets from two rather large cauliflowers, 1-3 cup salt, 2 quarts water, 2 quarts best quality cider vinegar, 2 lbs. sugar, 1 oz. mixed cinnamon sticks, allspice berries and whole cloves, 1 oz. each mustard and celery seeds. Prepare the vegetables by washing well; separate the cauliflower into flowerets. Dissolve the salt in the water and put the vegetables in this brine to stand overnight. In morning drain. Rinse off with clear water.

Cook the cucumbers and cauliflowers in boiling water to cover for three minutes, then rinse well with cold water. Tie the spices in a bag and boil them with the sugar and vinegar for 10 minutes.

Remove spice bag, pour vinegar syrup over the vegetables and let stand until cold. Pour off the liquid, let it come to boiling point and again pour over the vegetables, after packing them in sterile jars, to overflowing. Seal.

JACOBY ON CANASTA

Judging by my mail the $64 canasta question is, "What is the penalty for putting down cards for the initial meld and then finding that the count is insufficient?".

Enough readers will seem to be confused on this subject to make it worthwhile to go over the penalty again. If you are one of the dozen or so people who understands this point completely or one of the two or three people who never makes an insufficient meld, I trust you will forgive me for wasting your time with some articles on this subject. If you are one of the great majority I recommend strongly that you save these articles and know exactly what to do when this happens next.

As a starter there is no penalty at all unless you are playing in a partnership game. The reason is that when you put cards on the table illegally you are helping the other players. If you have no partner you are merely helping your opponents and that in itself is enough penalty. However, when you have a partner you may gain an advantage by showing some of your cards illegally. Hence there must be some penalty.

The penalty is that the cards placed on the table illegally become what is known as penalty cards. As such they must remain on the table as penalty cards until they are either melded legally or discarded.

The process of discarding them is somewhat painful. The rule is that you must discard one of them at each turn and cannot discard from your hand proper as long as you have cards on the table in penalty status.

Therefore, if you have penalty cards you want to get in position to meld them legally as soon as you can. You can do this by being lucky enough to draw cards that will enable you to make a legal sufficient meld. In that case you add these extra cards to your penalty cards and they become melded cards.

Or maybe your partner can come through and make a sufficient meld all by himself. He cannot touch your penalty cards. Remember they are not melded. However, if he can make the initial meld by himself then you are privileged to add your penalty cards to his melds (if they fit) or to meld them legally if you still can.

The next two articles will illustrate this procedure and snow that the penalty is not really severe. Merely complicated.

Make Black Currant Jelly And Mustard Bean Pickles

By MARY MOORE

My present plans for this month are to give you some tasty variations for preserving, in one way or another, all of the fruits and vegetables as they ripen and reach the market.

Some of our readers have become very dear to me for many reasons and one of those reasons is that they tell me what they want me to write about (and sometimes what they do not like at all) in the column.

Canning is serious business and too much produce and hard-earned cash is at stake to take chances with your methods. So if you would let me know what you plan to can or preserve or pickle I can get working on it and let you know the best way to handle them this summer.

Today I am going to give you my exact procedure for making three quarts black currants up into black currant jelly plus mustard bean pickle, and one other favorite.

Emem's Black Currant Jelly

(This is the last surviving bush of fruit-bearing variety left on the place. Peter cleaned everything else like the raspberries, strawberries and vegetable patch out, and replaced it with lawn and an out-of-doors fireplace. It took me two hours to pick 3 quarts black curants. Is that slow according to pickers, rates? I'd sure enough starve if I had to make my living that way—unless I ate raw black currants.)

Three quarts black currants, when stemmed, 9 cups sugar, 4 cups cold water, ¾ bottle commercial liquid pectin. Wash currants well, and crush them with potato masher in large kettle. Add the water. Bring to boil, cover and simmer 12 minutes. Pour into strong jelly bag and strain. This fruit pulp may be squeezed in bag as it is so dark the clarity of the jelly is not important.

Add the sugar to the juice, bring to boiling point, stirring it frequently until sugar is melted. As soon as it boils stir in the liquid pectin, and boil hard I minute, stiring constantly. Remove from heat, let stand 1 minute. Pour into sterile jelly glasses and pour hot new paraffin over it, adding a second coating when jelly is cold. Cover with lids to keep it dustproof. Jelly should be kept in a cool place.

Mustard Bean Pickle

(I am giving you this recipe today because it is papular in a community in Ontario, and it is not to be found in any cook books that I know of.)

One six-quart basket butter beans picked very fresh; wash very well, remove ends and strings and cut into 1-inch pieces. Boil 12 minutes in 2 quarts boiling water with 2 tablespoons salt. Drain. Mix together 3 cups white sugar, 1 cup mustard, 1 cup flour, 2 tablespoons celery seeds, 2 tablespoons turmeric powder. Have heating exactly 5¼ cups spirit vinegar. To the mixed dry ingredients add 1½ cups vinegar and stir to a smooth paste. Stir this into the hot vinegar over heat until you have a thick smooth dressing. Add the hot beans, stir until the whole thing boils and pour into sterile jars and seal.

Pickled Beets

Forty-eight rosebud size or 24 medium size beets, boiled with 1-inch stem on in water to cover until nearly tender. Rinse in cold water and slip off skins.

Mix together 1 cup boiling water, 1 quart white vinegar, 1 cup sugar, 4 teaspoons salt; boil. Mix together 1 tablespoon each mustard seeds and celery seeds, 1 teaspoon whole cloves, 2 sticks cinnamon, 3 slices onion. Tie the spices losely in bag and drop into vinegar mixture and simmer 5 minutes, adding the beets after the first minute of boiling. Have ready sterile jars and when 5 minutes is up remove from heat and put beets into jars, and fill to nearly overflowing with the vinegar mixture. Seal. These amounts make 5 quarts.

Write to me if you would like special pickling recipes.

Hold West Indies To Only 54 Runs

LONDON, Aug. 14 (Reuters)—Tight bowling and fielding by England held the West Indies to only 54 runs in two hours this morning on the second day of the fourth and last cricket test match.

The West Indies had pushed their score to 349 for five by lunch in the match at the Oval.

The tourists suffered one blow when star batsman Frank Worrell retired because of giddiness brought on by a stomach ailment. He had then scored 116 but is expected to be able to bat later.

West Indies are leading the series two matches to one and need only to draw this match—played during five days—to clinch the rubber.

Baptist Charges Taken On Ride

LA SARRE, Que., Aug. 14 — (CP). — A Baptist pastor was knocked down and beaten and one of his followers said he was taken for a five-block "joy-ride" Saturday night when members of the sect held an open-air meeting in this North-western Quebec town.

L. G. Barnhart, pastor of the Church of the Good News, said he was knocked down, beaten and kicked while talking to Police Chief Edward Carpentier of La Sarre.

Another member of the sect, Alphonse Cloutier, said he was pulled into a jeep, driven for several blocks and pummelled about the head by a man whom he identified as Claude Martel, son of the Mayor of La Sarre, who died recently following a heart seizure after the first of several disorderly Saturday night meetings of the sect.

The pastor said he complained to the police chief that the Town Council had guaranteed protection to members of the sect. He said the chief replied that police could do nothing as the attacks had taken place on private property.

Judgment Adjourned In Theft Of Milk Cans

The case of an Otonabee farmer, James M. Baxter, was adjourned for judgment today by Magistrate E. A. Gee. Baker is charged with stealing 14 milk cans in March.

In court today, he promised he would buy cans to replace the ones he had stolen. He said fire had destroyed his farm buildings and that he had no money. The cans were worth about $40 or $50. Baker said he sold the cans to the Warkworth creamery.

Magistrate Gee said he would adjourn the case for judgment until August 24, in which time Baker would have to buy new cans to replace those stolen. Baker pleaded guilty to the charge.

News Camermen Up Front With Soldiers In Korean War

TOKYO — (AP) —The Korean war front news photographer is giving newspaper readers the fastest play-by-play photo report they've ever seen on an oriental war.

Danger, sweat, good luck, bad luck and countless headaches are involved.

Front-line photographers—and all their gear—have been involved in all major actions thus far.

They have to be. Photographers can't get pictures of action scenes by interviewing others who were there.

They have been so close to it that one photographer went for a ride one evening to the airfield at Suwon, then returned to find that headquarters — and all his cameras—had been burned.

Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert, who has been doubling as a photographer lost his picture-taking occupation temporarily when his camera was smashed as he dived into a foxhole to escape strafing planes.

Hitchhike A Lot

Like their writing compatriots, who seldom carry anything heavier than a pencil, the cameramen hitchhike toward the front-line action. Hopping in and out of jeeps and trucks with bags of equipment lassoed around their necks and cameras in both hands is an art developed only with practice.

Front-line negatives are rushed to Tokyo by plane — any plane.

Sales Talk

This means another hitchhiking ride to the nearest airport and a persuasive sales talk to a pilot or someone else returning to Japan. If the plane's flight is altered the package of negatives destined for Tokyo may end up at another airport several hundred miles away.

Tokyo offices take care of such matters as tracking down wayward packages; developing the front-line negatives and sending them to the United States by Transpacific Airline or radio photo.

Radiophotos go out of here to the U.S. on the Army Signal Corps' new and modern equipment, manned by officers and enlisted men.

Pictures taken by army photographers are sent to Washington and copies are released simultaneously to American photo distributing agencies.

Those taken by the agencies' photographers are sent to San Francisco when the army facilities aren't occupied with army business.

This means long and patient work in the army's modern radiophoto sending centre in downtown Tokyo. Sometimes atmospheric conditions are good and photos move rapidly. Frequently weather conditions necessitate constant retransmissions before a useable picture reaches the United States.

Northern Prairie Wasteland Becoming Uranium Bonanza

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. — (CP)—Northern Saskatchewan's lake-dotted wastelands may become Canada's latest and most-important bonanza.

The rugged, almost-unsettled bush country — once considered just so much land to fill out the province's rectangular map — is the scene of several uranium strikes.

Field parties from the Provincial Department of Mines, free-lancing university geology students and professional prospectors are combing known and possible fields for claims.

Federal security regulations are clamped down as soon as a field is proven, so no estimates of its potential are publicized. But mining concerns are shipping in machinery, roads are being built, and government officials express cautious satisfaction with results to date.

The world's major uranium fields are in the Belgian Congo and Czechoslovakia.

Latest big find is in the Munn Lake area, 140 miles northwest of here, where uranite crystals containing from 80 to 90 per cent uranium have been blasted to the surface.

Dr. J. B. Mawdsley

A geological party under Dr. J. B. Mawdsley of the University of Saskatchewan handled the blasting.

Last fall four geology students from the University of Wisconsin found ore which assayed at 2.4 per cent uranium in the La Ronge area, about 300 miles north. An assay of .5 per cent is considered worth mining if the find is accessible.

One of the oldest fields is the rich Black Lake deposit, 425 miles north of here, where a road is under construction to bring in heavy mining machinery. Provincial and federal governments are financing the road along with the mining company.

Newest and most-spectacular find is in the Ace Lake area, 500 miles north. Two prospectors this spring ferreted out the precious pitchblende near Lake Athabasca, in a property dropped by Eldorado Mines, which had held it for the federal government.

Under Ottawa Plan

The prospectors, George Findley and C. Lonetti worked under a government assistance plan. Their strike zone ran in widths up to four inches.

The federal government takes over the product of all uranium strikes, paying the claim-holder a fee varying with the ore's value.

Other major strikes are in the Goldfields and Stoney Rapids areas.

Havelock Driver Jailed For 7 Days

Charged with being drunk in control of a car on Highway 7 over the week-end, Elmer Taylor, 23, of Havelock, was today sentenced to seven days in jail and ordered to pay $17 costs by Magistrate E. A. Gee.

Havelock Constable Bay M. Bell testified he found Taylor asleep at the wheel of a car about 1:30 a.m. Sunday. He said Taylor had been drinking.

Force Czech Pilot To Land In Bavaria

AUGSBERG, Germany, Aug. 14 (AP)—A two-engined Czechoslovakian commercial plane with five persons aboard landed near Aichach, in Bavaria, Sunday night, military authorities disclosed today.

They said the plane carried two adults, two children and the pilot. They were brought here by U.S. authorities. Details of the flight were not immediately revealed, but one army source said he understood that "one of the passengers pulled a knife or some lethal weapon on the pilot and made him land the plane."

Bavaria's east border lies along Czechoslovakia.

Advertising Man Dies At 98

TORONTO, Aug. 14 (CP). — Death today revealed the age of a man who for years had kept it a secret.

Robert C. Smith, chairman of the R. C. Smith & Son Advertising Agency, died early today. Relatives said he was 98.

For the last few years he had kept his friends guessing as to his actual age. At one of his annual birthday parties several years ago he told his staff he would reveal it only when he reached 100.

When he established the advertising firm which bears his name he pioneered in using weekly newspapers as an advertising medium. He also introduced to Toronto the system of having newspapers make sworn statements of their true circulation.

Surviving are his widow, the former Mary Hutton, two sons Adam F. Smith, president of the firm, and W. P. Smith, and two daughters, Mrs. Harvey Agnew and Agnes Smith.

New Suburb Rises In Cologne Ruins

COLOGNE (Reuters)—An entire new suburb is rising near the ashes of Cologne, still a mass of ruins from the thousand bomber raids.

Newly-laid concrete roads and underground water systems wind among scaffolding, piles and bricks and bulldozers in the "People's Park" (Volkspark). They are ready to serve 487 houses being built and reconstructed for the British Control Commission at an estimated cost of $9,884,000.

The aim, a British spokesman said, is to concentrate in the new suburb the greater part of the control commission which is now spread over Cologne and towns up to 100 miles away.

It is hoped British families in Germany will be able to move in by the end of the year. By agreement with the British and with the German Ministry of Reconstruction, the buildings have looked to the future, when the occupation ends and the buildings can be occupied by Germ...

Here and There In Sport

By The Canadian Press

Can an infielder gesticulate like a windmill in order to distract a batter.

National League president Ford Frick says "no." And Sunday he ordered his umpires to eject any player who makes any action "designed or intended to annoy or disturb opposing batsmen."

Such antics led indirectly to one of the stormiest free-for-alls in Philadelphia's Shibe Park history.

Eddy Stanky, New York Giants' second baseman, attempted to rattle Philadelphia Phils catcher Andy Seminick by waving his arms directly behind the pitcher while Seminick was at bat

Umpire Lee Barlick asked Leo Durocher, New York manager, to tell Stanky to stop. Durocher insisted the arm-swinging was legal but he complied.

However, Seminick smashed into Giant third baseman Hank Thompson, knocking him unconscious, Durocher was heard to say:

"Everything's off—do anything you want out there."

The umpires warned the Giants that Stanky would be ejected if he tried it. He did when Seminick came up in the fourth. Durocher protested when Stanky was tossed out.

Shortly after Stanky left the game, Seminick collided with Bill Rigney, who replaced him at second. That started a free-for-all. Seminick and Rigney were ejected. Frick fined both $25 each.

New York Giants of the United States National Football League defeated Ottawa Rough Riders of "The Big Four" 27-6 in a mid-summer exhibition football game at Ottawa Saturday.

Gerry Kesselring of Kitchener Rockway captured the fourth annual London and district golf tournament at the Highland Golf Club Saturday with a sparkling 141 for 36 holes.

Papers Reverse Stand Of 1928

LONDON —(CP)— Politician Robert Boothby says there's nothing wrong with the Schuman plan except that it's 22 years late.

The Conservative member of parliament said that in 1928 he visited German executives responsible for the re-organization of coal and steel production. They made Britain a generous offer on pooling. Later Boothby made a parliamentary speech about it.

"Thus, I think I anticipated the Schuman plan by 22 years," Boothby said in a humorous aside during a recent Commons debate. He drew a laugh when he quoted a letter he received fom Lord Beaverbrook in 1928 praising his speech.

"'I have asked the Daily Express to give you plenty of support,'" Boothby quoted Beaverbrook's letter as saying.

Beaverbrook's Express group of newspapers now are fiercely resisting the Schuman plan.

Russian Deadlock Fails To Halt Aid For Korea

LAKE SUCCESS, N.Y., Aug. 14 (AP)—The moves of United Nations members to reinforce UN ground force troops in Korea are going on quietly but effectively, a UN source said Saturday.

The Security Council procedural deadlock that opened when Russian delegate Jacok A. Malik assumed the presidency Aug. 1 has neither halted the military measures and relief steps taken by the council in June and July nor slowed the pace of countries that have since offered fighting men, ships, planes, food and medical supplies.

Fifty-three of the 59 UN members are supporting the UN campaign to throw back the North Korean invaders.

The big problem now is to get offers collected and put on the Korean front. Transport and supply difficulties figure in this.

The military situation was described as serious, but not critical, by Col. Alfred G Katzin, personal representative of UN secretary General Trygve Lie in Korea. Katzin, a South African, talked with Lie's executive assistant, Andrew Cordier, by telephone from Tokyo Saturday.

Morale High

"The morale of the UN troops is high," Katzin said. "I have only the highest admiration for the way GI's and the troops of the South Korean Republic have fought."

Katzin's telephone talk disclosed that two British correspondents, and Col. Unni Nayar India's alternate members of the UN Commission on Korea, were killed when their jeep hit a land mine near Taegu Friday.

Nayar was the first commission member to be killed in the Korean conflict. The British correspondents were identified as Christopher Buckley of the London Daily Telegraph, and Ian Ian Morrison of the London Times.

Buckley, a former history professor, was one of the widest known British reporters.

Their death brings to eight the number of correspondents killed since the war began Two more, including war correspondent William Moore of the Associated Press are missing. Two others have been captured. Nayar, 38, arrived in Korea three weeks ago.

Before joining the commission, he was public relations officer of the Indian Embassy in Washington.

Plan To Develop Iron-Ore In French Africa

By HARVEY HUDSON

PARIS, Aug. 14 —(AP)— A long-dormant plan to develop the iron-ore riches of French West Africa is moving into the final stages.

The project will bring a minor industrial revolution to French Guinea and may result in opening of one of the world's greatest sources of iron ore.

The French-controlled Conakry Mining Company hopes to start shipping ore toward the end of 1952. An allocation of Marshall-Plan funds for $1,975,650 is being used to hasten the work. The Marshall-Plan money will be used to purchase American mining, earth moving and loading equipment.

Additional French capital from Marshall - Plan "counterpart" funds will be used to develop the port of Conakry to permit extensive shipments. The counterpart fund, local currency set aside by a country to match Marshall-Plan dollars, are released only with the approval of the economic co-operation administration.

Deposits Near Port

Conakry is located on the western hump of Africa between Dakar and Monrovia, Liberia. The iron-ore deposits are only a few miles from the port. Engineers found a surface crust of ore estimated at 15,000,000 long tons. Below this surface crust is a second layer of soft ore estimated at 150,000,000 long tons. Both layers of ore contain about 51 per cent iron.

Engineers say their research is not yet finished and as much as 800,000,000 tons of ore may be discovered.

France's consumption of iron ore in 1948 was about 25,000,000 tons. Thus the known reserves would represent only about a six-year supply for France if ore from this field were used exclusively.

Shipments might be made to the United States if steel plant construction along the eastern seaboard develops according to plan.

Sadler's Wells Ballet Ready For 5 Months' Tour In America

By ERNEST AGNEW

LONDON, Aug. 14 —(AP)— Louis Yudkin has just finished packing for a trip to the United States and Canada.

His baggage included 1,400 pairs of ballet shoes and 500 other items.

Yudkin will spend five months in North America and the famed Sadler's Wells ballet dancers are going with him.

For a week, as stage director of the ballet on tour, he has been packing at Covent Garden for the whole company. And all the 16,000 cubic feet of gear, the 20 tons of scenery, every ear-ring, every necklace, had to be listed in triplicate for the scrutiny of the customs men in Britain, the United States and Canada.

Now everything is set for the second American tour. It probably will be the last for a long time. Next year Sadler's Wells will tour Britain as a part of the Festival of Britain celebrations. Other countries are in line for tours in the following years.

Opens in New York

Sadler's Wells opens in New York Sept. 10—and problems really begin when they start touring. This year they will visit 30 cities in the United States and Canada. For nearly five months the company, the staff and an American orchestra of 40 will live in a special train of restaurant, lounge and sleeping coaches. On every move, new problems will crop up for the stage staff:

For Yudkin—fitting the immense sets built for the 72-foot stage of Covent Garden on stages like the 26-foot one in Oklahoma City.

For wardrobe master Harry Chatting—keeping 500 costumes clean on a five-month train trip with no time to wait for laundries. "They'll have to wash their own," he says. "Even Margot Fonteyn has done that before now."

This year for the tour members of the company are being dressed free by London's west end firms. And all will be Britain's best export goods.

Vatican Paper Unlike Others In World

By FRANK BRUTTO

VATICAN CITY, Aug. 13 (AP) L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican's semi-official organ, is unlike any other newspaper in the world.

First published July 1, 1861, to defend the Vatican against attacks of the rising Italian nation which had stripped it of its papal states, Osservatore began by fighting Italian stateman Comillo Cavour.

It has never stopped fighting. Its tone during the last 30 years has been set by massive, gray and leonine Giuseppe Dalla Torre, Count of Sanguinetto, who writes 90 per cent of Osservatore's blunt and sometimes vitriolic polemics.

The 65-year-old managing editor who since 1933 also has been president of the international union of the Catholic press has no use for typewriters. He uses a pen to scratch out in painstaking script his daily columns, as do each of his 15 reporter-editors.

On the third floor of one of the 3 small Vatican City buildings that house the Osservatore plant, each reporter-editor has a private room along a quiet corridor.

Each morning assignments with wordage indicated are distributed. Each article has its allotted space in the day's edition.

Church's Viewpoint

Much of the newspaper's space is used to present the Catholic Church's viewpoint on subjects ranging from books to birth control. A typical issue may contain the day's papal audiences, listed in the order of their importance; a papal speech; documentation from other countries; comment on arts and films, some local news and usually a summary of the day's top news.

Copies go to many embassies, to every cardinal, archbishop and bishop, to religious orders and to Catholic universities and colleges. Three go to the Kremlin in Moscow.

During the war, Mussolini was never the Duce in its columns, but "Premier of Italy." Hitler was never the Fuehrer, but "the Chancellor of the Third Reich."

Meanwhile, as it was the only publication in Italy that printed London and Paris as well as Berlin communiques, Osservatore's circulation skyrocketed from 60,000 to 350,000.

When Italy dropped its technical neutrality June 10, 1940 and declared war on Britain and France the Fascists went to work on Osservatore's circulation. Sales outside Vatican City were prohibited. Circulation dropped to 35,000.

Say Weather May Set Offensive Date

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (AP) —Weather conditions may help set the time for any large-scale offensive by United Nations troops in Korea.

The big requisite for a sustained offensive, of course, is a build-up in men, weapons and supplies that will ensure superiority over the North Korean forces. But clear, dry weather is an important asset since an American -type attack operation depends heavily on aircraft and speedy vehicles.

The fall months in Southern and Central Korea usually bring clear days, providing favorable ground and air conditions for a motorized army.

Korea's rainy summer impedes offensive operations, particularly close co-ordination of planes with ground forces and the swift advance of motorized units.

Rainfall Tapers

September rainfall averages four to seven inches. October has two to four inches. November has only one to two inches.

The winter months are dry and usually not too cold for effective military operations. There is little snowfall in Southern and Central Korea, the average monthly precipitation from November through March being one to two inches.

The winters are not cold in Southern Korea. In January, usually the coldest month, the mean daily maximum temperature is 44 degrees above zero, and the mean daily minimum is 29 above.

Flying weather conditions in winter are comparatively good. The cloud ceiling is ordinarily between 2,500 and 4,000 feet. Clouds are seldom thick and usually can be topped at 6,000 to 8,000 feet.

Rainfall increases in April and May but is not heavy compared with summer. The average precipitation for both of those spring months is two to four inches.

Ground and sea fog, however, are more frequent in the spring than in the autumn. Fog is most prevalent from March through July.

Offers Explanation For Flying Saucers

SWAYTHLING, Hampshire, England —(CP)— In a letter to a London newspaper, S. P. Smith offered a possible solution for the flying saucer mystery.

Planes testing terrestrial ground level sounds carry a saucer shape which holds a microphone, Smith wrote.

"The saucer is connected to the plane by retractable, fine steel wires covered with blue-grey plastic and therefore practically invisible.

"The reasons the plane has not been notice are: its height (3,000 to 5,000 feet) and color, and the counter attraction, visually, of the saucer, which is generally 50 to 100 feet from the ground."

Razmara Gets Job Of Stiffening Iran's Backbone Against Russia

By FRED ZUSY

TEHRAN, Iran, Aug. 14—(AP) —The hopes of Iran, key Middle East oil country, rest on the thin but sturdy shoulders of 49-year-old Ali Razmara, a lifelong soldier recently name prime minister by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi.

Razmara has the job of stiffening the country's backbone before an ever-present Soviet threat across the border to the north.

The Shah picked Razmara (whose name means "ornament of war") as the one man in the country who could clean up Iran's traditionally corrupt government and give the common man his first chance at a better life. The common man has become important because it's to him that Communism directs its appeals—based on the present wretched state of the masses.

The Shah looks on his choice of Razmara as a clean break with the bad government of the past There are some who doubt it. Razmada, these skeptics say, is too closely tied up with the "old guard" privileged class held responsible for the present mess.

Travelled Widely

Razmara is one of few Iranian premiers who know much about the country outside Tehran. His military travels for 15 years have made him thoroughly familiar with the country's terrain, people and problems. He is credited with having excellent relations with the leaders of the various tribes composing one-third of the population. He is an expert on Iranian military geography.

Strangely enough, Razmara has no strong political group back of him in Iran. The moral backing of United States diplomats in Tehran is one of his top cards. Britain, with vast oil interests, is supporting Razmara, but only in lukewarm fashion. If he fails to produce, British prestige won't be hurt. He comes from the National Front party—built around a number of Tehran intellectuals. This group claims that he is one of the "old crowd" only going through the motions with no intention of real reform.

FATEFUL CAMPAIGN

When the Russians burnt Moscow in 1812 as they retreated before Napoleon, the fire burnt for a week and destroyed 31,000 buildings.

Sweden Charges Russia Occupies Baltic

By THOMAS HARRIS.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 14 —(Reuters). — Sweden is accusing Russia of "occupying the Baltic" and leading Swedish newspapers are urging the government to take reprisals.

Russia has announced that her territorial waters in the Baltic now run 12 sea miles out from the coast instead of the customary four-mile limit for all the Baltic powers for centuries.

Her announcement followed nine Swedish protests over the seizing of her trawlers by the Russian Navy in international waters.

The Swedish and Danish Foreign Offices in new notes to Moscow have rejected Russia's 12-mile limit and described it as an "occupation of the high seas on which citizens of all nations have the right to fish and to travel freely."

But the citizens of both countries are less concerned with Russia's present encroachment on the Baltic than with her future plans there.

Clue to Plans

A clue to these has been given in a Moscow university thesis publicized in the Russian press. The thesis tries to show that Russia has a legal right to close the Baltic to all non-Baltic powers, in effect turning it into a Russian lake.

Sweden's largest newspaper, Dagens Nybeter, says the worst aspect of Russia's 12-mile-limit decision is that she does not really observe even this limit.

The paper quotes the cases of the two Swedish trawlers recently captured by Soviet naval patrols 21 and 16½ miles from the Russian coast. Their crews were held incommunicado in a Russian port for two weeks.

Dagens Nybeter recommends cancelling Sweden's 1,000,000,000 crown credit to Russia, made in 1946 to help Soviet post-war reconstruction.

Other newspapers suggest that the Swedish Navy convoy trawlers in the Baltic. But none see any effective means of inducing Russia to revert to the four-mile limit.

Say Cabinet To Discuss Rail Strike

Government Hoping Companies, Union Agree Gregg Says

OTTAWA, Aug. 15—(CP)—Labor Minister Gregg said today the railway strike threat likely will be discussed at a Cabinet meeting this afternoon.

With the Aug. 22 deadline for a walkout now less than a week away ,the minister said the wage deadlock will be dealt with at either today's or tomorrow's scheduled cabinet sittings, or perhaps at both.

Today's meeting is scheduled to convene at 2 p.m. EDT.

Mr. Gregg said in an interview that he could not make any statement on the possibility of government intervention aimed at bringing about a settlement.

He was hopeful that the railways and their unions would be able to work out a settlement between themselves.

To Present Cases

Tonight, company and union officers will present their cases to the public in national radio broadcasts.

Donald Gordon, Canadian National Railways chairman and president, and A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, will be heard in addresses.

On Thursday, a Canadian Pacific Railway spokesman will speak, followed by Frank H. Hall, chairman of the negotiating committee of 15 international unions.

Mr. Gordon and Mr. Mosher will speak tonight between 7:30 p.m and 8 p.m. EDT, on the CBC's trans-Canada network, to be heard in Western Canada between 11 and 11:30 p.m. EDT. The dominion network will carry the speeches in the east 8-8:30 p.m. EDT and in the west 11:30-12 midnight EDT.

Times of the Thursday broadcasts, all EDT: trans-Canada network, eastern Canada, 8:30 p.m.; western Canada, 11-11:30 p.m.

Viscount Alexander dispatched a message on behalf of the Canadian people, expressing "most sincere congratulations, together with our loyal and devoted good wishes on this happy day."

Prime Minister St. Laurent, on behalf of the government, sent a message to Princess Elizabeth, expressing "warm congratulations on the birth of your daughter."

"We send, too," he said, "our best wishes for the health of yourself and the infant princess."

Mr. St. Laurent also sent a message to the King and Queen. The text of this message was not disclosed.

Car, Train Collide Two Dead, 2 Injured

GALT, Aug. 15—(CP)—A man and a woman were killed and another couple seriously injured when a speeding automobile plowed into a backing freight train near here early today.

James Nellis, 39, of Woodstock died instantly when the car he was driving pulled out to pass another car, stopped at a Grand River railway crossing, and struck a loaded coal car after skidding 94 feet.

An unidentified woman died in hospital a few hours later from multiple fractures of the legs and internal injuries.

The others in hospital are Arthur Strang, 26, and his wife, Marjorie, 30, also of Woodstock. Mrs. Strang has a compound fracture of the right leg, cut face and reportedly a fractured skull, while Mr. Strang has cuts to the face, and is suffering from shock.

India Proposes Little Council To Seek Peace

LAKE SUCCESS, Aug. 15 (AP) —The Security Council's big battlers today studied an Indian proposal to let the small countries seek a path to peace in the Korean war.

As the council recessed until Thursday afternoon, Indian delegate Sir Benegal N. Rau suggested the six elected, non-permanent members might be able to find a solution in the public and private meetings at which delegates of the cold war participants, Russia and the United States, were not present.

Rau suggested such a "little council" study "all resolutions or proposals that have been or may be presented for a peaceful and just settlement in Korea , and submit their recommendations to the council by a specified date."

The "little council" would be made up of India, Yugoslavia and Norway, all of which have recognized the Chinese Communists, and Cuba, Ecuador and Egypt, which have not.

Cordial Reception

The western big three—France, Britain and the United States — gave the idea a cordial reception in principle but said they would like to hear more details.

However, Russia's delegate and the current council president, Jakob A. Malik, made no reference to the Indian suggestion in statements lashing back at Norwegian and French attacks on the way he has been filling the chair.

The Council Monday continued —without solution—its procedural war of words over the Russian-opposed proposal to let a South Korean delegate sit in on the sessions.

Continuing the western counter to Malik's speech-making, both the Norwegian and French delegates said the Russian president—by failing to make rulings for the council to act on—had not fulfilled

Dock Workers Tie Up Holland's 2 Big Ports

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 15—(Reuters)—Dock strikers today tied up Holland's two main ports.

Amsterdam harbor was crippled by a strike called by the Communist-led Dock Workers' Union, while Rotterdam harbor was out of action for another day because of a wildcat dock strike for more pay.

However, many workers are off-duty today because of Assumption Day—a Dutch national holiday.

A wage strike of taxi drivers and building workers in Amsterdam has swept taxis from the streets and stopped work on all big buildings.

US Line Folds Under Heavy Red Pressure

Stage Break-Through In Three Places, G.I.'s Pushed Back

TOKYO, Aug. 15—(CP)—The whole west wall and northwest corner of the United Nations defence box in Korea showed signs of crumbling today under the weight of incessant Communist probings of the Naktong river defence line.

Spurred by their leaders' demands for a "liberation month" victory the Communists tonight were across the Naktong in strength in three places. A fourth important crossing was reported, but not officially confirmed.

Reuters News Agency reported that Taegu, provisional capital, was already within earshot of the battle. It was directly menaced by two expanding bridgeheads north of Waegwan and a new reported Communist drive from the north through Kunwi.

Communist tank spearheads moving out of Waegwan bridgeheads were probably within 12 miles of Taegu tonight though aggressive South Korean counter-attacks may have halted them, Reuters said.

Behind these two bridgeheads is the ominous massing of up to seven northern divisions with extra mechanized regiments.

Two regiments of Communists are following the tanks from Waegwan bridgeheads which are being fed over underwater stone and concrete bridges.

Bloody Fighting

Bloody but indecisive fighting also was in progress farther south near Changnyong.

A field dispatch from Associated Press correspondent Jack Macbeth said the Reds surged six or seven miles east of the Naktong on their deepest penetration in the Changnyang sector.

The Red gain was considered serious.

One Red battalion fought desperately to link up with guerrillas behind the Americans.

Chicago Hawk Hdqts. May Go To Sudbury

SUDBURY, Aug 15 (CP). — Possibility that Chicago Black Hawks and two affiliated teams may move their training headquarters to Sudbury when the civic arena is finished was seen in a letter read to the arena building committee at a meeting Tuesday.

The letter, signed by W. J. Tobin, general manager of the Black Hawks said that the National Hockey League club was "very interested" in an agreement to use the arena.

Should such an agreement be reached, Tobin said, and the Milwaukee Seagulls of the United States Hockey League would use Sudbury to train.

In addition the Hawks would set up a hockey school headed by its three professional coaches.

US Gov't Renewing Efforts To Avert Railroad Strike

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15 (AP) —The United States government continued efforts today to avert a possible country-wide railroad strike but union officials said they are near "the end of our rope."

Chief of two big unions representing 300,000 trainmen and conductors agreed "reluctantly" to go back for more peace talks today with John R. Steelman, assistant to President Truman.

W. P. Kennedy of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and R. O. Hughes of the Order of Railway Conductors said they could see nothing accomplished at a four-hour meeting with Steelman Monday night.

A spokesman for the railroads told reporters, contrary to what Kennedy had said, that progress was being made in the conferences with Steelman.

The unions are seeking a reduction from the present 48-hour week for workers in yard service—without loss in pay. A presidential board recommended the shorter work week but not as much pay as the unions desired.

Also, the unions want wage adjustments for non-yard workers they represent—to give trainmen and conductors on the trains the same respective pay rates as those now received by firemen and engineers manning the locomotives.

The same presidential board turned down this last request, saying engineers and firemen traditionally have received a higher rate.

Passengers Praise Crew For Work On Burning Ship

By FREDERICK I. KER

TADOUSSAC, Que., Aug. 15—(CP)—Shortly after rounding Princess Shoal lightship three miles east of Tadoussac after 5:15 p.m. Monday, smoke was reported issuing from cabin windows on the starboard of the S.S. Quebec about midships.

Captain C. H. Burch, master of the ship, sounded the alarm and speeded the ship into Tadoussac's harbour, securing her alongside the jetty at about 5.40 p.m. and evacuating the passengers safely. Three have been reported missing.

The passengers report that there was no panic whatsoever and were loud in their praise of Captain Burch and his officers and crew for the calm and efficient manner in which the situation was handled. No injuries have been reported.

All the ship's fire fighting equipment was immediately put into service and streams of water were played upon the ship, inside and outside, for some two hours after the ship had docked.

Hold Fire Back

The fire was confined to the upper decks. Then it spread to the lower decks and the engine room. The engine room crews, who had stuck to their posts to the last minute, were forced to leave the ship. After this the fire spread rapidly.

The fine old ship which was commissioned in 1928 and has safely carried hundreds of thousands of passengers during the past 22 years, burned slowly to the water's edge some four hours after she was docked There had been approximately 400 passengers and 200 crew members aboard.

When the ship was seen to be in distress as she approached the dock, Mr. C. H. Etches, manager of the Canada Steamship Lines' Tadoussac Hotel, and his staff immediately began preparations for reception and relief of the passengers. They were taken from the dock to the hotel in buses and cabs and immediately supplied with food, coffee, and other comforts. Tadoussac is a small picturesque French-Canadian village on the north shore of the St. Lawrence river at the mouth of the Saguenay river, some 40 miles below Quebec.

Taken To Other Points

Excepting the Tadoussac Hotel there was little accommodation available for the stranded passengers. Nine buses were sent down from Murray Bay and with the exception of 40 passengers who remained at Tadoussac, all the others were taken to Murray Bay and Quebec.

The cause of the fire is unknown. A considerable amount of baggage was destroyed and the ship appears to be a total loss.

Indonesia Now Made Republic

JAKARTA, Indonesia, Aug. 15 (AP).—Indonesia underwent a constitutional face-lifting today, and angry cries from the Communist-led labor bloc.

A Republic of Indonesia—replacing the United States of Indonesia Aug. 17—was proclaimed by President Soekarno, following the USI parliament's approval of a draft constitution. Soekarno then flew to the former rebel capital of Jogjakarha to preside over the dissolution of the old republic which led the anti-Dutch revolt.

Dissatisfied with the switch the Red-led Federation of Labor Unions proclaimed Aug. 17 "a day of mourning," claiming that the new unitary state remains "controlled by Dutch and other foreign capitalistic interests."

A new parliament is to be sworn in Wednesday. Premier Mohamed Hatta's regime is expected to continue as a caretaker government pending formation of a new cabinet. There was no indication that the switch would affect Indonesian status as a member of the Dutch Union, under the Dutch crown.

Blazing Vessel Races To Port, No Signs of Panic

TADOUSSAC, Que., Aug. 15 (CP) Three bodies were found today aboard the fire-gutted St. Lawrence cruise ship, S.S. Quebec, owned by Canada Steamship Lines.

The bodies were not immediately identified but were believed to be those of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Shapiro of the town of Mount Royal, Que., and their son Leonard.

The company said the bodies were of "two adults and one child. Attempts at positive identification now are being made."

Passed Out Window

A second Shapiro boy, six-year-old Bernard, made his way off the fire-swept ship late Monday after being passed out a cabin window by his mother. That was the last he saw of his family.

He made for shore with 396 other passengers who were disembarked safely on the wharf of this lower St. Lawrence River town about an hour after fire was discovered aboard the Quebec when she was some miles above here.

Until early this morning it was believed that all 400 passengers and 150 members of the crew of the river vessel had made shore safely, leaving the burning, smoke-shrouded vessel via ladders after she had been placed alongside the wharf here.

Three Unaccounted For

A later check of the passenger list, however, showed that three members of the Shapiro family were unaccounted for.

Three Armed Men Rob Montreal Bank

MONTREAL, Aug. 15 (CP) — Three armed men held up a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada on Monkland Avenue in Montreal's western section today and, after injuring bank manager William Hill, escaped with what employees said was "not too much money."

Bank employees said the three men drove up to the bank a short time after it opened. One remained in the car. Two others, both brandishing guns, went inside.

One of the two went to the first teller's cage where Miss Jeannette Grise was counting money while the other entered Mr Hill's office.

Mr. Hill was slugged on the head and later taken to hospital. Bank employees said he apparently grappled with the holdup man while the other bandit jumped over the partition to the rear of the teller's cage where he began looking for money.

Peace Rally Lively

TOKYO, Aug. 15—(CP)—A Korean Communist "peace rally" exploded into a mass fist fight today and 18 police were sent to hospital, Japanese press reports said. An estimated 300 police clashed with some 700 Koreans at Okayama, near Kobe. The rally was staged by Communist dominated Korean organizations in defiance of a police ban against demonstrations. Police tried to break up the meeting. Five persons were arrested.

To Standardize Naval Forces Of 3 Countries

OTTAWA, Aug. 15 — (CP).—Canada is working with the United States and Britain in an effort to make their three navies as much alike as possible in the way they fight and function.

It was announced simultaneously in Ottawa, Washington and London today that standardization of naval operations by the three powers has been under discussion by a tripartite committee as part of the drive for Allied military standardization.

Canada's naval chief, Vice-Admiral H. T. W. Grant, has approved for this country's Navy a report by that committee which has laid the groundwork for staff discussions to proceed over a wide area of functions.

The staff discussions will take place in the broad fields of submarine and anti-submarine operations, air defence at sea, minelaying, sea command, tactical needs, communications, amphibious operations, defence of ports and bases, and others.

Do Their Best

In those fields, the discussions will be designed to make the three navies do things as much alike as possible. They will, as the Navy put it, "determine common objectives in the over-all fields of naval warfare in which standardization will be practicable and beneficial."

Canada's representative on the tripartite committee that took the first steps was Rear-Admiral F. L. Houghton, Vice-Chief of the naval staff. The second phase is that of the board discusions in the various fields and it will be followed by a third phase in which there will be detailed studies of individual items.

The detailed studies "will be carried out by the working-level members of the naval staffs and will aim at the gradual development of common designs and standards in arms, equipment, and training methods," the Navy said.

Special Set of Stamps

OTTAWA, Aug. 15—(CP)—A special set of postage stamps will be issued next year to commemorate the centennial of the first Canadian postage stamp in 1831, the Post Office Department announced today. The stamps will be released during the International Philatelic Exhibition in Toronto in September, 1951.

Baby Girl Is Born To Elizabeth

Both Doing Well Doctors Report, Dominions Celebrate

LONDON, Aug. 15—(CP)—A baby girl was born today to Princess Elizabeth, heiress-presumptive to the Throne, touching off jubilant celebrations throughout the Commonwealth.

"Both doing well" was the official report on mother and daughter, who becomes third in line of succession to the throne. She is the second child of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip. Their first, Prince Charles, is 21 months old.

The baby princess weighed six pounds, an official announcement disclosed.

A name for the infant was not immediately announced. As both her parents are descended from Queen Victoria, that name may be chosen. Another possibility is Mary, after the baby's great-grandmother, the Queen mother, and her great-aunt, the Princess Royal.

Crowd Cheers

Threatening weather failed to keep a crowd from its vigil outside the wrought-iron gates of Clarence House, London home of Princess Elizabeth. Cheers went up as the official bulletin was posted.

Minutes later the roar of cannons spread the news abroad. In the ancient Tower of London the Honorable Artillery Company, following an old tradition, fired a 62-gun salute. In Hyde Park the Regular Army signalled the birth with 41 guns.

Toasts Drunk

Inside Clarence House toasts were drunk in champagne. Prince Philip, home on leave from his duties as a lieutenant-commander in the Royal Navy, is due to return to sea in about two weeks as commander of the frigate Magpie, his first command.

The Queen was in Clarence House when the baby was born.

U of C Records Large Quake

BERKELEY, Calif., Aug. 15 — (AP). — A quake described as "very large and distant" was recorded today at University of California.

In Hartford, Conn., Trinity College's seismograph recorded quakes described as "terrific" about 3,000 miles distant in an undetermined direction.

At Milwaukee, the Rev. Joseph Carroll, S.J., said his seismograph at Marquette University has been registering a "terrific earthquake" for more than two hours.

Father Carroll said the needle on the instrument was travelling "at a dizzy pace." He said it started registering earth tremors about 9:29.50 a.m. CDT and was "going strong" more than two hours later. At 11:50 a.m. he reported it was "dying down somewhat" but still in progress.

Kennedy Holds Supper For 72nd Birthday

DIXIE, Ont., Aug. 15—(CP)—Tom Kennedy watched his seven grandchildren playing on the lawn in front of his farmhouse and said that if he had his life to live over, he'd do it the same way—but without the mistakes.

Seventy-two years old today, Ontario's Minister of Agriculture and former premier is celebrating his birthday with a buffet supper for about 20 friends and members of his family on the farm, a few miles west of Toronto, on which he was born.

A neighboring farmer dropped into congratulate Mr. Kennedy and asked if he was thinking of retiring.

"You see that spot you're standing on? One of these days there'll be a hearse standing on that spot. I'll be in a box inside there. That's the day I'll be retiring."

Ottawa Calls Legend Back To Aid Brigade

'Big Jim' Stone From Ortona Will Command One Battalion

OTTAWA, Aug. 15 (CP). — The army called a legend back to the colors today.

From one end of the country to the other, the red-patch veterans of Canada's 1st division will be saying the same thing—"Jim Stone's back in the army." Big Jim from Ortona.

The army announced Monday night that Lt.-Col. James Stone, 42, DSO and Bar, MC, officer commanding the reserve force Rocky Mountain Rangers, will command the 2nd battalion of the Princess Patricia's in Canada's special force to fight aggression in Korea or elsewhere.

He's the homesteader who came out of the Peace River country of Alberta and enlisted as a private in September, 1939, and rose to command his battalion, the Loyal Edmonton Regiment. He moved up through all the ranks, step by step, in the same unit.

The army also announced Lt.-Col R. A. Bob Keane, DSO, 36 of Fort William and Ottawa will command the 2nd battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment and Lt.-Col. Jacques Dextraze, DSO, 31-year-old business man near Montreal, will command the 2nd battalion of the Fusiliers Mont-Royal.

Not Fancy Enough

For a long time, the long, long legend about Jim Stone goes, they wouldn't let him be an officer, because they didn't think he looked like one.

Then they sent him on an NCO's course and someone who knew leadership burst forth, "what in hell is that man doing as a company sergeant major, he should be commanding one." He was, in time.

That was around the time of Spitsbergen when the Edmontons made a bloodless invasion of that far northern island off the coast of Norway and CSM Stone ran the inhabitants with a hand of iron and a heart of gold. That was the way he handled men.

In March of 1942 he got his commission. By the time of Ortona in December, 1943, he was a company commander and by that time the Stone legend was growing fast. The Edmontons and Vancouver's Seaforth Highlanders cleared Ortona. Jim Stone was the driving fury of the Edmontons.

To this day, men who fought under him talk of him in tones that can approach the reverential. He was, they say, the epitome of the fighting, human leader.

Army's Choice

When they picked an abortive Canadian force to join the allied march into Berlin at the end of the war, Jim Stone was the man picked to lead it.

He went back into civilian life. Last winter on Exercise Sweetbriar in Yukon and Alaska, he went into the army for a few weeks to help out. They had him escorting senior officers.

One day a plane landed with Maj.-Gen. Chris Vokes, his old 1st division commander, among those aboard. When the General was informed he would be escorted by Jim Stone, he growled, "Migod, who's going to protect me?"

The legend will go on from there.

Trying Salmon In Durham County Waters

TORONTO, Aug. 15.—The Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, in addition to planting several million infant muskies, bass and trout in lakes and streams, is trying to lure the Atlantic salmon back to provincial waters.

About 80 years ago according to biological records, Atlantic salmon were plentiful in Lake Ontario. As the province developed, the salmon disappeared.

In 1938, stocks were secured from the Maritimes and a program of planting was inaugurated. Now, according to Lands and Forests Minister Scott, a twofold investigation is underway — to determine what waters are best suited to the propagation of Atlantic salmon, and to find how those planted earlier have fared.

Duffin's Creek in Ontario County has received 120,000 fingerlings in the past three years, and Wilmot Creek in Durham has received 10000. Among other places stocked are: Big Clear Lake, in Frontenac County; Lake Simcoe; Ranger Lake, Algoma, Fisher Creek, Ontario County; Lake Temagami; Trout Lake in Nipissing; Gillies Lake, in Bruce, Bass and Mary Lakes in Grey; and several Muskoka locations.

If he cannot get an Atlantic salmon, the fisherman should be able to do all right with muskies, bass or trout. From the Peterborough hatchery, 3,000,000 muskie fry and 25,000 fingerlings recently have been taken to Ontario lakes.

10-Year-Old Loses Eye After Fall On Glass

A 10-year-old boy is in hospital today, after an operation in which his right eye was removed.

On August 4, Bobby Glover, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Glover, 283 Wolfe St., fell against a door in the Glover home. A pane of glass in the door shattered and a splinter entered the boy's right eye.

He was taken to hospital in a police cruiser. The operation was performed this morning.

Canadian Carrier Fires 21-Gun Salute

HALIFAX, Aug. 15 (CP). — The Canadian aircraft carrier Magnificent, en route to sea for exercises, boomed a 21-gun salute today in honor of Princess Elizabeth's second child.

The guns roared in the harbor approaches minutes after the birth of a daughter was announced in London.

Baby Girl

The King, who is in Scotland, was advised by telephone.

Princess Margaret, who dubbed herself "Charlie's Aunt" after her sister's first baby, heard the news at Drumlanrig Castle in Dumfriesshire, Scotland, where she is visiting friends. She passed along the message that she was "very, very thrilled."

The official announcement said: "Her Royal Highness Princess Elizabeth Duchess of Edinburgh, was safely delivered of a Princess at 11.50 a.m. today. Her Royal Highness and her daughter are both doing well."

The bulletin was signed by Sir William Gilliatt, the Princess' gynecologist, and by John H. Peel, Vernon F. Hall and Sir John Weir, the royal family's physician.

The new baby automatically becomes a princess under a decree signed by King George before the birth of Prince Charles. Otherwise the children of Princess Elizabeth would have no titles.

Third In Succession

She will remain third in succession unless Princess Elizabeth has another son, in which case he would take precedence.

Princess Elizabeth's husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, returned from the Malta naval station July 26 to be with his wife at her confinement.

The Queen waited at Clarence House with the Duke of Edinburgh.

The Duke telephoned the news to King George at Balmoral, Scotland, where the King is on a shooting holiday. Princess Margaret is also in Scotland visiting friends.

Both the Duke and the Princess had hoped for a girl.

News of the birth was promptly transmitted to the home secretary, James Chuter Ede, who followed custom by pinning a notice to the door of the home office.

Queen Elizabeth had arrived at Clarence House just a few minutes before the birth of her second grandchild.

The little princess was born in Princess Elizabeth's Queen Anne style bedroom in Clarence House, the home of Elizabeth and Philip, not far from Buckingham Palace. She is the first royal baby to be born there.

Prince Charles spent the morning playing as usual with his nurse, Helen Lightbody.

A patient and growing crowd of several hundred had waited expectantly outside Elizabeth's residence throughout the morning.

Planes Banned

Air force units in Britain had received special orders in deference to the birth, which had been expected since last week. All airmen were instructed by the commanders not to fly over Clarence House until after the baby was born.

The whims of fate might some day put the new princess on the throne.

The infant automatically ranks third in lines for the crown—a position which has led to the throne for 12 of England's 39 sovereigns since the Norman Conquest in 1066.

Five of the last six monarchs, including the present king, George VI, were at times ranked third.

The baby, however, could lose her rank as third in line to any children born to her brother, Prince Charles.

Princess Elizabeth herself was third in the line when she was born 24 years ago. The death of her grandfather, George V, and the abdication of Edward VIII—now the Duke of Windsor—put her father on the throne and made her heiress-presumptive, Edward, too, ranked third when he was born.

Elizabeth, known as heiress-presumptive rather than heiress-apparent because if a son were born to her mother, Queen Elizabeth, he would become first in line of succession. It is officially presumed, however, that there will be no further children born to the King and Queen.

The new child starts out life with a lot of hand-me-downs.

She will be pushed around in Prince Charles' baby buggy. But her older brother shouldn't mind. He has a new sit-up stroller. Anyhow, the old buggy had been used by Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret long before.

The same goes for the crib, for the layette and Prince Charles' toys. All of them go to the newborn; but this may ease the strain on the household budget enough to assure Prince Charles a new bed and new toys befitting a young man of 21 months.

Record Year For Nepheline

American Nepheline Ltd. is on the way to its biggest year if the first six months of the year are any indication.

The combined operating profit for it and its subsidiary, American Nepheline Corporation, totals $119,293 for the six months ending June 30. This is in contrast to a profit of $37,492 in the same period last year, its best year since the company began in 1945.

These figures do not include deductions for income taxes, depreciation and deferred development. Net profit for 1949 was $113,743, equivalent to 3.7 cents a share.

The company expects its sales will continue to keep ahead of last year's 66,000-tons total with a value of $1,014,440.

American Nepheline has almost completed the transfer of the subsidiary's plant and mill at Rochester, N.Y., to the parent property at the Blue Mountain mine, about 20 miles north-east of Lakefield. The new plant's capacity will be 8,000 tons compared with a combined capacity of 6,000 previously.

The move is a little behind schedule, explained a company official, because of a heavy demand which made it impossible to shut down the Rochester plant as soon as expected.

During the morning provincial police blocked off from the public the wharf where the gutted hulk of the ship lay smouldering.

Young Leonard Shapiro was taken with other passengers to the Manoir Richelieu Hotel at Murray Bay, some 40 miles up-river from Tadoussac.

The Quebec, once one of the white-hulled queens of the Saguenay-St. Lawrence cruise routes, lay gutted in Tadoussac harbor, smoke still issuing from the fire which broke out about 5 oclock Monday night when she was a half-hour upstream from Tadoussac.

While the crew of 150 fought the flames the vessel was quickly headed back for Tadoussac and passengers were herded forward and aft and told to don lifebelts. Port was made safely and passengers disembarked down ladders with no more than minor hurts, such as rope burns.

Praise Crew

Passengers praised Capt. C. H. Burch and his crew.

Members of the crew said only two courses appeared open when the fire was first noticed. One was to attempt to stifle the blaze at sea. It soon became apparent that this could not be done so the vessel was raced to Tadoussac.

One member of the crew said it appeared possible that the blaze started from a bad connection in electric wiring. But pending official investigation the exact cause of the fire was unknown.

Three Decks Collapse

Shortly after all the passengers were off the entire three-decked accommodation collapsed, falling like matchwood into the ship's steel hull. Only the two smokestacks, sticking up from the ruins, remained in place.

So quickly did the passengers leave the ship there was little time to save more than the clothing they wore.

Gilbert Aigle, of Saint John, N. B., a member of the crew, said there was no chance to lower any of the lifeboats because all of them appeared to be on fire.

Many of the Canadian and United States tourist passengers were scattered about the several decks of the cruiser observing the approach to the Saguenay—an abrupt cut between high walls of rock.

Over loud-speakers came a recorded talk about the history of the Saguenay and Tadoussac ot their beauties.

Dr. D. W. Bussmann, of Clayton, Mo., a suburb of St. Louis, travelling with his wife and five children, had gone out on deck for the approach of Tadoussac.

Woman Spots Fire

"Then a woman came along and said the boat was on fire," Dr. Bussmann reported. "I doubted that there was a fire, but sure enough I saw smoke coming out of a corridor. I figured it wouldn't be long until we reached Tadoussac but I was worried.

"I told my wife and the children to keep their eyes closed so the smoke wouldn't hurt them."

Capt. C. H. Burch, 60, of St. Lambert, Que., ordered full speed for Tadoussac, a resort settlement built on the Saguenay cliffsides.

Passengers moved to forward and after decks and all cabins were cleared. The holidayers donned life-belts while members of the crew went to work with hoses and fire extinguishers.

No Panic

Guy Paquet of Sillery Que., who had boarded the ship at Quebec with his wife for a lower St. Lawrence vacation said:

"There was no panic. All was very calm. The crew got out hoses and fought the fire but few of us saw any flame, just the smoke."

F. I. Ker, publisher of the Hamilton Spectator, holidaying at Tadoussac said that Capt. Burch brought his ship into a jetty about 5.40 p.m. He told about the passengers evacuation, most of them making their escapes ashore by emergency ladders.

All the ship's fire-fighting equipment was kept in action after the Quebec tied up and Tadoussac firemen joined in the battle. Four hours after docking practically all parts of the Quebec above water had been ruined.

Some passengers thought the fire originated in a linen cupboard near cabin 121 but there was no confirmation of this report from CSL representatives who awaited the official version from Capt. Burch.

Rub Out Gains

Front-line reports said the Reds at Changnyang, 23 miles southwest of Taegu, rubbed out most of the gains made by the U.S. 24th division Monday.

Taegu is the South Republic's emergency capital and objective of 60,000 Communists poised in the Waegwan sector, 12 miles northwest of Taegu.

Red tanks and armored cars hit hard in the Waegwan area. They availed themselves of a Russian-style submerged suspension bridge to move a regiment, about 3,000 men, and tanks over the river against South Korean defenders. Such bridges are built just below the water's surface to to hide them from aerial detection and are capable of supporting armored river-crossings.

A US Eighth Army communique issued at 9:05 p.m. Tuesday (7:05 a.m. EDT) said the South Koreans successfully counter-attacked the river-crossers near Waegwan and found that Allied air support presumably had knocked out Red armored cars.

Intelligence officers were unable to learn whether the Waegwan crossing was the beginning of the expected smash by 60,000 Communist troops massed there or whether the Reds were fesling South Korean lines for a weak spot.

Take "Little Cassino" ... ...

As the critical river-front battle in the centre shaped up, US negro infantrymen stormed the "Little Cassino" redobut seven miles north-west of Masan. Masan is a south coast port 27 air miles west of Pusan, No. 1 US supply base on the south-east tip of the peninsula.

The fight went into hand-to-hand combat with bayonets and rifle stocks used as clubs. The negroes, capturing the craggy heights, freed some 200 wounded US artillerymen who had been pinned down by the communists in last week's westward drive to Chinju by Marines and Army infantrymen. The point had been by-passed at that time.

In the north-east American troops captured Yuktong, nine miles west of Pohang air base on the Sea of Japan coast.

South Korea's Capitol Division smashed down from the north and took the town of Imam nearby. Combined Allied forces moved to within a half-mile of Pohang, second most important port on the east coast until the Communists overran it last week.

But the hardest fighting Tuesday night was centred south of Changnyong. There 12,000 Reds were trying to break out from a narrow bridgehead, bought at a heavy cost in lives. A breakthrough there would imperil the Taegu-Pusan supply line to the east.

Americans held their ground in the centre and northern end of the battle for the Changnyong ridge. They concentrated on retaking the southern end.

Mechanized Column

Pilots flying over the southern front confirmed reports that a Communist mechanized column of more than 100 vehicles was moving toward Chinju. US forces command the heights four miles south of the ruined city.

The airmen attacked the column which, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said, contained no tanks. Intelligence estimates were that the Reds are trying to reinforce their battered 6th Division around Chinju to keep American Marine and Army units there from moving north to counter impending Red blows at the Naktong River line.

Strong evidence that stubborn Allied resistance had jammed the Red war time-table came in a command from North Korea's premier, Kim In Sung, the commander-in-chief who sent his forces to war June 25. Kim ordered his men to wipe out American and South Korean troops by the end of August — within 16 days.

In an order-of-the-day broadcast from Pyongyang, the northern capital, Kim told his men to end the war swiftly because the U.S. and South Korean defences would gain in strength if Reds failed to force a quick decision.

Prisoners said the northerners had set Tuesday—the VJ-day anniversary of liberation from Japanese rule—as the day for the capture of Taegu.

Didn't Materialize

Allied intelligence officers had expected 60,000 troops massed in the Waegwan sector to jump off in a drive for Taegu. The attack did not materialize. However, portions of the Waegwan Reds managed to force a crossing at Tuksong, 14 miles southwest of Taegu.

U.S. cavalry foot troops there stopped the Reds at the river's edge, killing 1,000.

Along the curling, 140-mile front the Communists have assembled 150,000 troops, a far-superior force numerically to anything the Allies have to throw against them.

Changnyong continued to be the centre of the heaviest fighting Tuesday night. Two Red counter-attacks there had piled up casualties on both sides.

Measured In Yards

MacBeth said gains and losses at Changnyong were measured in yards. He quoted an American staff officer as saying Tuesday's reverses were not major setbacks and that the southern sector of the Changnyong Ridge would get special attention from U.S. forces.

Allied planes and warships swept the battlefronts and prowled Northern Korea close to the borders of Siberia in their triple missions to support ground troops, destroy enemy installations and hamper the movement of Communist supplies.

An American heavy cruiser darted within 100 miles of the Russia-North Korea border and shelled shore installations in the northern-most foray by Allied warships in the war.

The far eastern air forces announced the big Wonsan refinery had been knocked out by B-29 raids. It was a major source of fuel for Red tank columns.

American and Australian planes hammered the concentration of 60,000 Communists near Waegan throughout Tuesday. They flew more than 400 sorties, devoting 200 of them to direct support of ground troops locked in battle.

A navy plane reported sinking a 200-ton Communist vessel off the Korean west coast. Another damaged a Red ship off the east coast, weathering heavy anti-aircraft fire which damaged the plane.

Two Allied aircraft were lost.

Allied intelligence officers said there were indications the Reds still had some air strength left although there has been little evidence of it recently.

While the North Koreans did not celebrate the Korean Liberation Day with the capture of Taegu, they marked the day with ceremonies in Pyongyang attended by high Chinese Communists. Among them were Moscow-trained Li Li-san, key official in the Red China regime.

Industrials Pace Advance On Exchange

TORONTO, Aug. 15 (CP). — Industrials paced a steady advance to lift a wide list of stocks higher in brisk trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Volume for the first three hours was 544,000 shares.

A wide list of leading industrials chalked up gains ranging from fractions to more than a point. Yesterday the industrial index of representative stocks reached a 16-year high. All the groups pushed ahead with the exception of refining oils and constructions which lagged just slightly. A few stocks such as CPR and BA Oil slipped fractionally.

Base metals also showed a majority of gains. Key stocks like Noranda, Quemont, International Nickel, and Consolidated Smelters added fractions. Included in the gainers were Sherrit Gordon the United Keno Hill.

Golds also attracted considerable buying, especially among seniors. Higher were Dome, Hollinger, and Kerr-Addison. Among the juniors which brightened were Macassa, Frobisher, Conwest and Harricana.

Gains in the Western oils doubled losses.

Packard Strike Ends 3 Months Labor Peace

DETROIT, Aug. 15 (AP). — A strike at Packard today put a sudden end to three months of labor peace in the automobile industry.

The United Automobile Workers (CIO), in what company management promptly referred to as a "pressure move," called a walkout of Packard's 8,000 employees last midnight.

The strike came as Packard was getting up headway in production of its new 1951 model car.

It was the first strike of consequence in the industry since Chrysler and the UAW came to terms to conclude a 100-day stalemate last spring.

Packard and the UAW had been in a contract dispute over issues of pensions, insurance, and a cost of living pay increase.

The company-union contract had been extended on a day to day basis since its formal expiration last June.

Packard said it had offered the UAW a five cent an hour wage increase, a $100 to $117.50 a month pension plan modelled after the General Motors agreement and an insurance program.

In addition Packard said it had agreed to a union shop and had made other concessions such as improved vacations and certain wage reclassifications.

Police Begin Bomb Enquiry

OTTAWA, Aug. 15 (CP)—Military authorities at Petawawa military camp Monday turned over to the provincial police the inquiry into the exploding of an undetonated smoke bomb which brought severe burns to three young boys.

Maj.-Gen. Chris Vokes, in charge of the camp as officer commanding the central military district, announced in a statement late Monday that "names of the personnel involved" in the incident have been given to the police "who, it is expected, will lay charges if such are deemed in the public interest."

His statement did not elaborate, but reports current during the weekend said a bomb was tossed into a bonfire during an officers' party outside the camp Friday night, failed to go off and that the boys found it while playing Saturday.

The youngsters—Donald McKay, 6, of Toronto, and John Binkley, 5, of Winnipeg—are under treatment in hospital here for facial burns. Physicians have expressed fears for the sight of the McKay boy.

A third youngster, Derek Binkley, 7-year-old cousin of Jackie, suffered leg burns and was treated in hospital at Pembroke.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 15 (AP)—Joan Crawford was reported recovering today from an emergency appendicitis operation performed at the Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital Monday night.

No Parking Charge In Spite Of Meters

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 15—(ENS) — Campbellford Town Council decided at a special meeting held Monday night, to have stickers printed to place on all the parking meters in the town, stating that the meters are no longer in operation and it is no longer necessary to pay to park.

The Mi-Co Meter company is to be notified to remove the meters within 15 days or else council will remove them and deduct the expense incurred in so doing from the "take" of the meters themselves.

The agreement between the Mi-Cometer company and the town expired on August 4.

The meters have not yet been removed, and many people who do not know the agreement has been terminated, especially American visitors and others from out of town, have been dropping their pennies and nickles into the meters when parking.

Better Lighting

COBOURG, Aug. 15 (ENS).—Better lighting for night games of Cobourg softball fixtures has been assured as a result of an offer by Stan Williams, local businessman and sportsman. Two more lights and a change of position of the lights in the outfield are expected to vastly improve the lighting system for night ball games, and place it on a par with any softball park in the province.

Salvation Army Work Described At Noronic Fire

Major Morgan Flannigan of the Salvation Army, the first civilian aboard the Noronic after it had been swept by fire in Toronto and took 118 lives, described some of the work done by the Salvation Army following the disaster at the Rotary meeting Monday.

It was the last time he would tell the story, he said, because of horrifying memories it brought flooding back.

Still Not Completed

The Salvation Army's work on the Noronic is still not completed. Only recently the last five unidentified bodies were buried in Mount Pleasant Cemetery in Toronto in a symbolic service in which representatives of many faiths took part.

When Major Flannigan was ordered to go to the Noronic, he was given complete freedom to do what he wanted on board the ship and in the morgue that was hastily set up in the Flower Building in the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

As a fireman was giving him a hand up into the Noronic, he said, "Thank God you're here."

Major Flannigan said there was not much he could do to help on board the ship, but he stayed because he was asked by the firemen until early afternoon.

"They seemed to feel the cloth added a little dignity to the grim scene," the Salvation Army officer said.

Visited Survivors

He said the Army arranged immediately to have some of its members, mostly women, visit the survivors in hospital. It was not possible for the Army to give any material aid to the men women and children bound in bandages, but they were repeatedly asked for prayers and some died as the prayers were being said.

The Salvation Army was asked to set up an interview bureau at the morgue to help in the monumental task of identifying the charred remains of the fire's victims. He said many bodies were identified by relatives who recognized rings, watches and bracelets and other jewellry without the relatives having to see the bodies.

Many more bodies were identified by doctors who had records of medical histories of some of the victims.

Many other organizations such as the St. John Ambulance and the Canadian Red Cross, did tremendous tasks for the survivors and victims' relatives. But in the first few days, the work was left largely to the Salvation Army, Major Flannigan said.

Always Ready To Help

The Army was always ready to help when needed, he said. Plans are already being made to play a part with the Canadian Army special force being sent to Korea.

Major Flannigan was introduced by Major Cyril Everitt of the local Salvation Army corps and thanked by Rev. Ivan Morgan. J. A. Dewart acted as chairman in the absence of president Hugh Waddell.

Monday's meeting was the largest held this summer. About 30 guests from parts of the United States and Canada swelled the large turnout of the local members.

Victim Of Robbery Returns To Hospital

COBOURG, Aug. 15—(ENS)—Because the complainant was in hospital, a charge of robbery was adjourned Monday, the accused being Ronald Elliot, 17, Roland Sandford, Belleville, 21, and Garth Badgely, 22, of Cannifton. They are alleged to have robbed Nicholas Sispatol of Seymour township of $80, August 3.

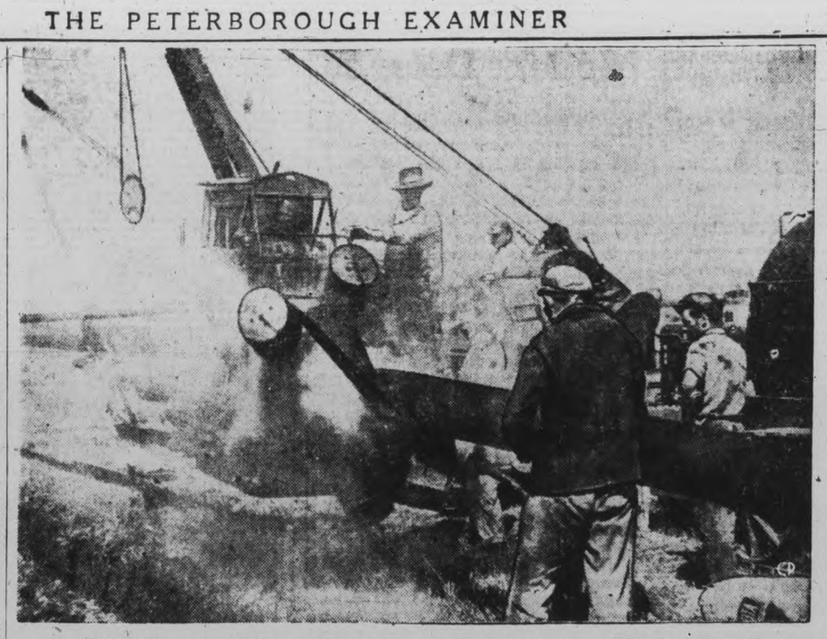
Crown Attorney Harry Deyman informed the court that he was not ready to proceed at this time as he had been instructed that the complainant was back in hospital with a broken jaw. He said that it would probably be a considerable time before Mr. Sispatol would be able to come to court.

Harry Young of Montreal was found guilty on a careless driving charge in traffic court and fined $25 and costs. Provincial Constable C. Meadows testified that he followed Young's car at a speed which at times, was in excess of 80 miles an hour. The chase ended when Young's car left the road. The driver was not under the influence of liquor the constable said.

Three Cobourg juveniles appeared in court Monday, the day after a local upholstery shop was broken into. They were remanded for a week on a charge of breaking and entering with intent to commit theft.

Munro Comes Back

OTTAWA, Aug. 15 (CP).—The American "GI" at the fighting front in Korea "really welcomed" the news that Canada was equipping a brigade for use there if necessary, and hopes the Canadians get there as soon as possible, Ross Munro, Southam news services correspondent, said Monday night. Munro, a Canadian Press war correspondent in the Second World War, arrived back in Ottawa after three weeks in the Pacific war theatre.



SMOKY JOB — Just before a new pipeline is dropped into its trench, this fancy gadget applies hot tar, a layer of glass fibre, and a coating of asbestos paper to prevent corrosion. The covering layers unwind automatically as the machine rolls along the pipe spinning the big bobbins as it goes.

READY FOR OIL — The 75-mile-long pipeline from Gretna, Man., to Winnipeg will be finished by the end of September. This section, between Altona and Rosenfeld, is ready to be buried. The line stretches absolutely straight for many miles across the flat prairie farmland.

Expect Pipeline Done In 6 Weeks

WINNIPEG, Aug. 15—(CP)—A 10-inch steel pipeline, to bring the oil wealth of Alberta to the Manitoba motorist, is moving toward Winnipeg slightly faster than a mile a day.

The $2,500,000 75-mile spur line, to shunt crude oil to Winnipeg refineries from the main Alberta-Lakehead line at Gretna, Man., is about six weeks away. When completed, the line's 6,000 tons of Scottish-made pipe will deliver 1,050,000 gallons of oil daily.

Huge mechanical ditchers started the pipeline trench at Gretna, on the international boundary, July 28. Sixty days was estimated time needed to sink the pipe.

Some 150 men are on the job, financed by a Manitoba subsidiary of Imperial Oil.

On Retired List

LONDON, Aug. 15 (AP). — Vice-Admiral Charles H. L. Woodhouse, British naval hero, was placed on the retired list today. He was in command of the cruiser Ajax which with two other British men of war defeated the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee in the battle of the River Plate, Uruguay, in December, 1939. He was a captain at the time.

99 Traffic Deaths

TORONTO, Aug. 15 (CP). — There were 95 traffic deaths in Ontario last month—the worst of any July since 1937. But statistics of highway deaths so far this year showed 25 fewer persons were killed than in the same period of last year. To the end of July this year there were 271 fatalities.

Land 32½-Lb. 'Lunge

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 15 (ENS).—S. E. Manning of Monaghelli Pa., and his wife, battled a 32½ pound 'lunge in the waters of Percy Beach at Percy Boom on Monday morning.

Mr. Good of Renova, Pa., a fellow American visitor at Jack Goucher's cottages, assisted Mr. Manning in landing the fish, which measured 43½ inches in length.

Mr. Manning has been coming to Percy Boom for a number of years, and took the big fish on a feathered Davis spinner while trolling.

Dionne Quints Attend Service For Teacher

THREE RIVERS, Que., Aug. 15 (CP)—The Dionne quintuplets attended a Roman Catholic church service at nearby Nicolet Sunday, when their former teacher, Sister Rose-Lina, made her final vows on entering religious life.

The quints were accompanied by their father and 11 other pupils of Sister Rose-Lina, who last year taught at the Corbeil, Ont., school.

Born Rose-Lina Dinelle at North Cobalt, Ont., the teacher has been in Nicolet for a few weeks and now has become a member of the Assumption Sisters of Nicolet.

Japanese Undecided

TOKYO, Aug. 15 (AP).—The newspaper Yomiuri said today a poll of 4,000 residents of large Japanese cities showed 37 per cent favor creating a defence army and 34 per cent oppose it. The others were undecided. It also said the Japanese are undecided generally on the effect of the United Nations action in Korea.

Allow Jap Ships

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15 (AP). —Japanese merchant vessels shortly will start calling at United States ports for the first time since 1941, the army announced. The army said that the government had granted clearance for Japanese sea-borne trade to and from American ports but that initially only tramp vessels engaged in bulk cargo-carrying will take part.

Bomber Crashes

FORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 15—(AP).—A crippled B-29 bomber crashed and burned in a field five miles north of Carswell air force base Monday, killing four crew members. Eight men got away with minor injuries. Three charred bodies were removed from the nose section of the plane and one from the centre section.

7 Killed In Bus

SANTANDER, Spain, Aug. 15 (AP).—Seven persons were killed and 42 injured Monday night when a suburban bus hurtled off a highway and rolled down a 50-foot embankment near here. The bus driver was avoiding a truck.

30-Foot Crater Lures Botanist

LONDON, Aug. 15—(CP)—A 30-foot crater, gouged by a German "block-buster" 10 years ago near Box Hill, Surrey, has become a favored rendezvous for British botanists.

For two years amateur and professional students of plant life have been attracted to the spot by an astonishing range of rare flowers thriving in the sprawling crater. How the seed got there remains a mystery.

Already 25 alien plant varieties have been discovered, most of them native to Germany or Central Europe. Some of the flowers, however, are common to France, Switzerland and Spain. None had previously been found in Britain.

One theory offered in explanation of the phenomenon is that the seeds in some way got into the explosive mixture of the bomb. Experts, however, are inclined to doubt the seed would have survived the blast. Another suggestion is that a prankster, intent on confounding the naturalists, was responsible.

Yachtsman Dies

COLD SPRING HARBOR, N. Y. Aug. 15 (AP).—George Nichols, 72, one of the foremost yachtsmen in the United States, died at his summer home here Monday after a long illness. Nichols, a commodore of the New York Yacht Club, skippered the yacht Weetamoe in 1940, when it was defeated by Harold Vanderbilt's sloop Enterprise for the honor of defending the America Cup against the final challenge of Sir Thomas Lipton and his Shamrock V.

Bond Proceeds Could Be Used Finance Defence

OTTAWA, Aug. 15 (CP) — There is nothing to prevent the government from using the proceeds from sales of Canada Saving Bonds to finance defence expenditures, it is learned.

Plans are going ahead for launching a new Canadian Savings Bond campaign, Oct. 16. If the government finds that its defence expenditures as a result of the international situation are running ahead of available revenues it could dip into the bond receipts.

The Canada Savings Bonds were put on sale in 1946 after the government discontinued launching war and victory loans.

The public has invested about $300,000,000 in each issue of Canada Savings Bonds and the money has been used to retire outstanding public debt. This policy could be changed and the money used for defence expenditures.

In the Second World War, the government followed a policy of paying half the expenditures out of taxation and half out of borrowings, much of it from the public.

The success of that program has led to speculation that a similar program may be used by the government now to meet the cost of the increased defence expenditures necessitated by the tense international situation.

To Resist Domination

BELGRADE, Aug. 15 (Reuters) A prediction that Communist China will ultimately resist Russian domination was made Monday by Premier Tito of Yugoslavia. In an interview Tito said Far Eastern Communist parties would show "tendencies towards independence—but not for some time." The trend "can only arise out of attempts of the Soviet Union to interfere in their internal affairs. When the Chinese people find themselves economically exploited, they will be certain to resist."

Confiscate Parcels

BERLIN, Aug. 15 (Reuters) — West Berlin postal authorities said today Russian border officials have confiscated more than 1,000 parcels from inter-zonal trains. They demanded reprisal action by the western allies. The authorities said Russians at Marienborn, checkpoint on the Soviet side of the German zonal border, were reviewing efforts "deliberately to restrict mail facilities in and out of Berlin."

Railways Immobilized?

A week from this morning all railways in Canada will be dead ends, unless agreement is reached between the railway companies and the unions, or unless some other way is found to avert a strike. Today's cabinet meeting may point a way out of the stalemate. It can at least point out what every Canadian already knows: that a railway strike would cripple the country, and must not be allowed to occur. The unions have not budged an inch from their original demands since the dispute began last April. Judging from this, the railways do not want to reach agreement by negotiating with the companies. Do they want to demonstrate their political power, by forcing direct government intervention? Are they prepared to compromise only if the Government takes the railways out of the hands of railway management?

• • •

American union tactics have several times forced the American government to take over the operation of mines and railroads in order to avert strikes. Canadians should view this method with distaste. It smacks more of totalitarianism than of democracy. Large strikes, particularly in public nation-wide services like railways, may cripple the entire country. Governments as representatives of all the citizens' interests may therefore be expected to intervene in order to prevent such strikes. But it is essentially intervention between two private groups—companies and unions—both of whom should be expected in a political democracy to work out differences for themselves, under the laws of the country.

• • •

It is significant that the unions, not the companies, are the ones who appeal most to the government. It is also remarkable that government is expected to take company management from the companies, not union management from the unions. Cannot a case be made out for the Government taking over the union, not the company, as a last resort? In the present so-called negotiations between the railways and the unions in Canada, it seems that the unions have been most stubborn and least anxious to reach a compromise agreement.

• • •

Perhaps union officials, not company management are the more unsuited in this dispute to bargain in a true, collective way. If so, should the Government not take over temporarily the management of the unions, in order to bargain properly for the railway workers; if the Government is forced to intervene directly? The companies have offered a 44-hour week (a reduction from 48 hours) with no decrease in take-home pay. They have acknowledged a "moral obligation to implement the 40-hour week at the appropriate time". The unions have not moved from their original demands, which include a 40-hour week with take-home pay maintained. This, the companies state, would cost them annually more than eighty million dollars, and result in compensatory freight rate increases of about 25 per cent.

• • •

There is no outspoken demand in Canada for the Government to step in. But union strategy seems to insist on it. Why should the unions expect government operation of the railways to favour them? It is not the experience of British railway workers that government ownership and management of the British railways has improved neither their working conditions or their pay.

Parking Meter Account For Peterborough

Our news columns yesterday described a successful, improving use being made of parking meter revenue in the city of Calgary. Calgary's council, confronted with down-town problems of parking similar to Peterborough's, not only installed parking meters along the main streets, but provided off-street parking in parking lots conveniently placed. Their purchase and equipment were financed from the money made on the street meters. The new parking lots are metered, and in a short time are themselves providing sufficient revenue for their own maintenance, as well as for buying other parking lots. The secret of Calgary's successful pay-as-you-park system is that revenues from meters go into a separate account, and are not merely poured into the general civic purse.

Peterborough is now deriving a substantial monthly revenue from its street meters (June, $2,336; July $2,922). The Council would not need to worry about the burden to the taxpayers of providing parking lots down town if the money from the meters were used. The market square is to be metered. It will certainly pay for itself, and provide extra funds to buy or rent other lots.

A separate parking meter department such as Calgary's is not needed in a city the size of Peterborough, but the City Council can keep a separate parking meter account, to be used for improving parking and traffic conditions. After all, it is motorists who provide the money, and that money should logically be used in their interests, and not as a general source of revenue. It is not a tax; it does not fall on all the citizens. Let the parking meter money be used for parking lots and traffic control, and the Council will have no financial problems in dealing with the congestion now apparent.

Royal Example and Planned Parenthood

There is understandable and widespread interest in the birth of Princess Elizabeth's second child, and the Princess is reported to have said that she proposes to have four children, as she considers six a good number for a family. Such a remark, uttered at such a time, suggests that the Princess is giving her tacit approval to planned parenthood. She is also reported to have said that she is sorry for women who cannot afford a family of four; this lends colour to the belief that the Princess advocates relating the number of children in a family to the family income.

If the Princess has chosen, in this way, to show her approval of planned families she is doing a great deal for the countless women who are influenced by her example. Planned parenthood has been under discussion for fifty years, and although it has found many adherents in that time it is still considered in some quarters to be a doctrine of doubtful morality. The example of the Princess can do much to explode this notion.

Accusations of immorality were made, a century ago, against those who advocated the use of anaesthetics in childbirth. There was a Biblical injunction that children should be brought forth in pain, and there were men and women of all sorts who were certain that some dreadful fate would befall the civilized world if that pain were alleviated in any way. The great advocate of anaesthetics at childbirth was the Scottish physician, Sir James Simpson, but he made little headway until, in 1850, Queen Victoria took anaesthetics before the birth of Prince Arthur, who later became Duke of Connaught. She knew precisely what she was doing. She had listened to Simpson, and was convinced that the relief of the pains of childbirth would be a great boon to women everywhere. So she gave an example which was quickly followed.

Princess Elizabeth, it appears, is going to give another example.

Dom. Gov't: See Gov't of Canada

This year's telephone books have a small but significant change in their listing, and the change applies, we believe, to telephone directories across Canada, not merely to Peterborough's. All Dominion Government offices are listed under the heading "Government of Canada". The word "Dominion" has been ousted. Is this part of Ottawa policy to erase from the Canadian scene the word disliked in some parts of Quebec? We shall not quibble about whether Canada is constitutionally "The Dominion of Canada" or simply "Canada". Time and history have made the term "Dominion" part of Canada's name. Indeed, very often, both here and abroad, Canada is referred to as "The Dominion". We object to an insidious, back-hand method of ousting "Dominion" from the national vocabulary, such as changing the name in directories. Nor can we see why Quebec should object to the term. "Dominion" in either French or English does not mean domination. If there is any domination, it is domination by Canadians over their own domain.

Modern Defence

By VISCOUNT TRENCHARD

THE fighting in Korea has not changed the strategic situation very much. It has only emphasised in an unpleasant way the threat to freedom which has existed for a long time. It may even be valuable if it convinces the Western Powers and the democracies that it is not enough to rely on plans, followed by the slow, very slow, assembling of their great military and industrial resources after war has broken out. Its plain lesson is that we must increase our military strength now and rapidly.

◇ ◇ ◇

THE aggressor can always choose his own time and place to challenge us, and we cannot be equally ready to resist him everywhere. But I believe there is much we can do to convince the Kremlin that it would be unprofitable to bring about a major war.

◇ ◇ ◇

IT is satisfactory to know that the Government is prepared, given some American assistance, to increase our defence expenditure to a total of £3,400 million over the next three years, but how much is being done to order the new weapons? How far is the new programme, at present, only a paper plan? And why are the Foreign Ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Council not to meet until the middle of next month?

◇ ◇ ◇

IT is clear that while we may be threatened or attacked in many parts of the world, Western Europe is still the vital area. I believe that we must defend Europe as far east as possible, and that half-a-million soldiers, backed by overwhelming and efficient airpower, will be enough to stop the Russians, should they decide to march.

◇ ◇ ◇

BUT where shall we find the 500,000 men? France was bled white during the first world war, and her main forces are already fighting in Indo-China. Belgium and Holland and the Scandinavian countries are too small to contribute more than a few brigades or divisions, and it is politically impossible for the British and American Governments to commit thousands of their men to static defence positions in Europe in peacetime. We must look to Western Germany to provide a great part of the European ground forces. There is no other way out. As soon as possible, Western Germany must be rearmed on a limited basis.

◇ ◇ ◇

I know the fears that a rearmed Germany will create. I understand the difficulties of taking this step. And the Germans themselves may well say: "Are we to be cannon-fodder for Western Europe and America?" But what alternative is there? Would the Germans willingly allow themselves to be overrun by Russian armies if a system of preventing this were offered to them? I do not believe that any nation would—provided only the defence scheme they are asked to join is a convincing one.

◇ ◇ ◇

THE French, the Dutch and the Belgians may, of course, be afraid that in time the new German army might itself become aggressive. I think the danger can be overcome by the complete integration of German forces into those of the Brussels or Atlantic Pact Powers, and by making them entirely dependent on Western equipment. I would not allow them to develop any major war industries of their own. This would avert the obvious danger that such industries might fall into the hands of the Russians if any ground were to be temporarily lost. And it would be a guarantee to France and the Low Countries that if Germany were ever again to turn against the West her supplies would be exhausted in a few days.

◇ ◇ ◇

OF course, France must be helped to the utmost with her land and air forces. What should be the role of the other European countries, and of America? Britain and America can provide all the major naval contribution required, but clearly we must all put as many ground forces in Europe as our resources will allow.

◇ ◇ ◇

BRITAIN's main task, I believe, will be in the air. I regret that the Government has found it necessary to reduce British air strength to its present level, but the basis exists for its expansion. The Royal Air Force Display at Farnborough last month showed that the R.A.F. has perfect organization, training, maintenance of aircraft, also high-quality new-type machines, and the spirit in the men, but nothing like enough men.

◇ ◇ ◇

THE expansion must begin now. We need aircraft of every kind — long-range bombers, medium bombers, more day and night fighters, Coastal Command aircraft, and the light rocket-firing and bomb-dropping planes that can attack enemy shipping one day and his tanks and armies the next, and transport aircraft.

◇ ◇ ◇

THE list is a long one. And within the next decade the aeroplane may be as obsolete as the battleship is today. But, for the moment, it alone can carry the atom bomb, create disruption among and behind the enemy lines, and join in every battle wherever it is fought. Let us strengthen ourselves in the air. All the world will respect us if we become as strong in the air as we used to be on the sea; and, if we do our share, the combination of British and American air power can be decisive.

◇ ◇ ◇

LET us, with American co-operation, begin now to build great air bases that will cover the strategic areas of the world as our naval bases do today. The Americans have built them here and have been welcomed. Why should we not be welcomed in Western Germany, in the Middle East, in India and Ceylon, and wherever we may have Atlantic Pact or Commonwealth defence commitments?

◇ ◇ ◇

BY air-bases I do not mean aerodromes only. I mean structures as extensive as the naval bases at Malta, bases where there will be workshops, stores of all kinds of equipment, radar, oil, petrol, bombs, ammunition, etc., and garrisons to defend them. Once they are created the Royal Air Force will have flexibility, and in the end we shall need fewer aircraft to achieve our purpose of meeting aggression where it arises than we would need at present. If we had had a chain of substantial air bases leading to Singapore and Hong Kong, we might have sent land-based aircraft as well as ships to help the Americans in Korea.

◇ ◇ ◇

WHERE are we to find the money, the man-power, and the industrial resources to provide the bases and the aircraft for which I ask? Obviously we must make sacrifices, for, above all, we must not endanger our whole future because of unwillingness to find the means of protecting ourselves. The most advanced social services, the most highly developed political systems, the most comfortable standards of living can be maintained only if we are willing to protect them, and the cost of defence must come first. Are we not prepared to do this?

◇ ◇ ◇

BUT surely there are several ways in which a substantial contribution to the cost of new armies may be obtained without seriously affecting the country. First, by examining all our social services, to see if there is not any considerable saving which could be made, in the medical and dental services, for instance. By utilising the full resources of our Colonies, especially with regard to man-power for the fighting services; I have several times advocated that technical schools could be set up, corresponding to Halton, in various Colonies, which would provide man-power and would help the Colonies when the emergency is over. And by revising our views on the basis of modern sea-power.

◇ ◇ ◇

RUSSIA, our only potential enemy, has strong land and air forces—numerically superior to anything we have—but has practically no ships of war except submarines, many of them probably of a specialised kind.

The future efficiency of the Royal Navy, which in the past has made this country what it is, now depends on concentrating upon small, fast, anti-submarine ships and small aircraft carriers. The day of the big ships is over.

◇ ◇ ◇

I have on several occasions raised all these matters in the House of Lords; nothing has happened to change my views. All our brains and strength must go into development of forces that will enable us to play our full part in the dangerous world in which we live. It is in that spirit I make these suggestions.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Then Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said . . . Is not God in the height of heaven? and behold the height of the stars, how high they are! . . . Acquaint now thyself with him, and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee . . .

If thou return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, thou shall put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles. (Job. 22:1,12,21, 23.)

◇ ◇ ◇

Then Job answered and said . . . Oh that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat! . . .

Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him . . . But he knoweth the way that I take; when he had tried me, I shall come forth as gold. My foot hath held his steps, his way have I kept, and not declined. Neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips; I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food.

But he is in one mind, and who can turn him? and what his soul desireth, even that he doeth. (Job 23:1,3,8,10-13.)

No Soap

Among the wonders of Mexico are hot and cold springs situated close together. There one may watch native women boiling clothes in a hot spring, rubbing them in a spring of cold, clear water.

Watching this interesting spectacle one day, a tourist remarked to his guide, "I suppose those women think old Mother Nature is pretty generous, eh?"

The guide smiled crookedly.

"No senor," he replied, "they grumble because she supplies no soap!"

Enduring Glory Of The Winged Victory

(NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE)

In the summer of 1948 an expedition under the leadership of Professor Karl Lehmann of New York University began excavations on the island of Samothrace in the Aegean Sea. Last week the archeologists were rewarded by unearthing the hand and a finger of the Winged Victory of Samothrace, that famous statue which came from the sculptor's chisel more than 2,000 years ago and has stood in mutilated splendor in the Louvre in Paris since 1863.

The discovered hand is reported as being open, and news of this important fact has been dispatched to Paris and the world. Mystery always comes down the centuries when great marbles are found wrecked by time or men's wars, and it has been believed that the statue's hands might have held a trumpet or a crown. But whether or not the Victory bestowed a wreath or sounded a trumpet, one can still find a bit of symbolism in the wings which spread in the Louvre—a symbolism, of course, which the sculptor never had in mind. For victory throughout history proves often to be a winged thing. The Germans, one remembers, occupied Samothrace for a brief part of their Grecian triumphs. Mussolini set up statues of himself in Ethiopia. We hope—to avoid disappointment — that no hasty North Korean general will have either a statue of himself or Stalin erected at Seoul just now. Men do not know what naval captains were celebrated by the Winged Victory—but they know that an artist can live twenty centuries in his creation and the work of a conqueror seldom lasts even one. We hope the marble which stands in the Louvre may yet have another hand—or even a head—added to its enduring glory by the work of New York University's expedition.

Think Of Next Winter!

(Kitchener-Waterloo Record)

All summer long there is a procession of fruit coming in season. Strawberries and cherries came in that order and now raspberries are being offered for sale. Then there will be blueberries, peaches, plums, pears and grapes.

Through the fall and winter months there is nothing quite like taking a pint or quart jar from the shelf and tasting the luscious fruit preserves.

It is no fun standing over a steaming preserving kettle on a torrid summer day, but there is considerable compensation in having cellar shelves crammed with every kind of fruit.

Reaffirm Home Christian Education Basis

TORONTO, Aug. 15 — (CP) — Christian educationists from all over the world agreed today that the home and the family must be the basis of Christian education.

Dr. Gerald E. Knoff, of Chicago associate general secretary of the International Council of Religious Education, said: "The home is an indispensable agent in the teaching of the Christian religion."

Vimala Rajamanickam, of India, said: "The making of the Christian home should be the most important business of the church, to which all else should be subordinated."

Mrs. Josephine H. Kyles, director of Christian education for the Washington, D.C., Federation of Churches, said: "If there is to be a new era in religious education that will influence the conduct and witness of mankind, we must use the home, which is a major resource for teaching and developing Christian personalities."

They were speakers before discussion groups at the World Convention on Christian Education.

Influence Home Life

Miss Rajamanickam, a student in religious journalism at Syracuse, N.Y., University, said the church must strive to influence home life and make every home "a miniature kingdom of God on earth." Many Indian Christians were neglecting home worship because, living among non-Christians, they did not see the need for it.

Dr. Knoff said many families now are not carrying their full responsibilities in Christian teaching.

"This lack of concern," he said, "must be met by a new vigorous emphasis upon Christian education of adults, and especially of parents, by a new evangelistic zeal, and a new sense of urgency about the relevance of the Gospel of Christ to modern family life."

Offer Better Conditions To Beat Reds–Historian

LAKE COUCHICHING, Ont., Aug. 15 (CP—A Queen's University history professor said today that Canada, by joining the United Nations effort in Korea, is "part of a sheriff's posse hunting down the criminals."

"This is a congenial role for Canada, whose ideas of keeping the law are strong," Prof. A. R. M. Lower of Kingston, said in a speech prepared for delivery to the 19th annual conference of the Canadian Institute on Public Affairs.

"We are therefore today on far sounder ground than ever before, when we fought mainly because of our British blood. Today the most nationalist French-Canadian will hardly dare maintain that we are 'fighting Britain's wars'."

Canada, removed from the "storm centre," might best contribute "common sense, sanity, objectivity of view, surgical coolness of approach"—in addition to armed forces.

Study of Communism

Prof. Lower urged a searching study of why Communism has grown so powerful and criticized American cynicism and fun-making towards its own great institutions.

Asiatic peoples do not understand "democracy, liberty and free enterprise," he said. "Reconquest" would accomplish nothing but an "empty assertion of armed power" unless accompanied by sweeping social improvements.

Monday night, Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative member of parliament for Peel and his party's chief foreign-affairs student, urged Canada to take the lead in setting up a Pacific economic pact.

He said Russia was backing the nationalistic aims of the Far East. That offensive must be met and Asia must be given "some legitimate prospect of prosperity and peace."

More Mismanagement

Prof. Lower said that despite maintenance of U.S. bases in the Philippines, that country "internally, through misgovernment, is going the same way as the rest. Hong Kong will go, in Communist China's good time. The decisive point, as in the last war, will be Malaya."

"But the major task for the west . . . is nothing less than the rejuvenation of its own institutions. If it cannot clarify its own ideals and purify is own way of life, it can have little to offer to others which they will esteem worth fighting and dying for.

"Hence, do not write off Asiatic Communism: It obviously has given millions new hope. Our job is to get something with just as big an appeal . . . we have got to recapture passion for our institutions."

A victory of American arms would "necessarily" be followed by a triumph of American culture—"the culture of the soap-opera, the Hollywood movie, the soft-drink cult, the so-called 'comic,' chewing gum and that brand of noise known as 'jazz' music."

"I am perfectly well aware that American life also expresses deep and valuable principles My whole point is that the fripperies have been allowed to take such an inordinate share of attention that they have become, both in American and foreign eyes, almost representative.

Clear Away Rubbish

"This mass of rubbish has somehow or other got to be cleared out of the way before the outer world will be more than lukewarm to American leadership . . . "America—including Canada—has to pull up its cultural socks.."

Canada's "debasement," however, had never gone as far as that of the U.S.

"We have never turned on our institutions in the same vindictive way. We haven't become so hysterical, so pagan, so feminine, so frivilous. We therefore have a good chance to stand for sanity and moderation. . .

"If we are big enough to grasp our opportunity, I imagine there may be a big place for Canada in the future, a place as a real interpreter between the two mighty opposites."

Rubber Roads Possibility For The Future

By FORBES RHUDE,
Canadian Press Business Editor.

Roads made of rubber may be among the things of a future peaceful world.

Harvey S. Firestone, chairman of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, has envisaged such highways, more durable and less costly to maintain than present ones, as possibilities of the next 50 years.

He foresees greater achievements for the rubber industry in the coming half-century than in the first half. He says in part:

"In synthetic rubber different formulas are constantly being created to meet specific needs. Technically speaking, synthetic rubber is a plastic and any one acquainted with the plastic industry ceases to be amazed at the new uses developed and predicted for this material. The future uses of synthetic rubber and other plastics appear to be limitless."

Step Up Production

For the moment, rubber roads seem an unlikely development while war or war scares beset the world. But these same warm alarms are likely to step up the production of synthetic rubber. Already several plants in the United States are being taken out of mothballs to go into production as soon as possible.

Soaring rubber prices, it is predicted, may soon increase the amount of synthetic in automobile tires. The synthetic content has been declining since the war until now it averages less than 40 per cent, but tire manufacturers are reported buying increased quantities.

Incidentally, synthetic rubber competes for some materials which go to make nylon, and so competes with women's stockings.

Also, the United States armed forces have put in an initial order for 10,000,000 yards of nylon for parachutes and kindred war products. The trade estimates that to meet the demand nylon production for hosiery and underwear will have to be cut back about 10 per cent.

Fallis Cemetery Service Held

BETHANY, Aug. 15—(ENS)— The annual Remembrance Day service was held at Fallis' Cemetery on Sunday, with many former residents and relatives attending, bringing floral tributes of respect to those who rest in this historic cemetery, which is connected with Manvers United Church.

This church, which was moved and rebuilt 51 years ago on a lot donated by James Johnston, was originally known as Fallis Methodist Church, so called in memory of Robert Fallis, pioneer settler on the farm now owned by Carleton Patton, and who had given the land free of charge for the church and cemetery.

Since the church was moved to its present site, a committee has been appointed each year to look after and maintain the cemetery.

The Rev. Clare Kellogg, minister of Janetville circuit of which Manvers church is one of the outer appointments, led the service, welcoming those who had come from distant points.

The Rev. Major John Foote of Port Hope gave an address on loyalty. The Rev. J. O. Johnston of Toronto spoke on memorials, paying tribute to the pioneers who settled this portion of Manvers township.

A. H. Monk of Bethany read the scripture and on behalf of the gathering, thanked the committee in charge of arrangements, Fenton Fallis, Norman Fallis, Earl Argue and Norman Porter; also acknowledging the generous donation of the late Miss Annie Bray of Bethany, who in her will, left certain monies to be used each year for the upkeep of the cemetery and which this year had been used to good effect in building a new entrance and fence surrounding the property.

Lindsay Salvation Army Band provided music.

VC Winner Hits Snag Not Taken In Korean Force

OTTAWA, Aug. 15 (CP)—Paul Triquet, who fought so well they wouldn't let him fight any more, is making another try to fight again. His chances don't look too good.

The man from Cabano, Que., who won the Victoria Cross near Ortona, was one of the early volunteers for Canada's special force to fight in Korea or elsewhere.

The army said today his application is under consideration as one among a considerable number of ex-lieutenant-colonelss who have volunteered. He was not, however, one of the three battalion commanders chosen to lead the brigade's infantry units and his chance of acceptance appeared slight.

That would mean another disappointment for the hero of Casa Berardi, the Royal 22nd Regiment company commander who won and held a vital point of ground in the violent fighting for the Ortona area in December, 1943.

He's had lots of them since that day. Because he was awarded the VC, he wasn't allowed to go back to his unit. He tried hard and often, finally with bitterness. He got back to Italy from a bond-selling tour in Canada in 1944, but he still was banned from going back into the line with the Royal 22nd.

The reason was an unwritten law that once a man won the VC he was through as a combat soldier. The policy had a variety of reasons behind it. One was that it wasn't fair to the man. Another was fear of the effect on the public if such a man were killed or severely wounded. A third was that the man would likely try too hard and might take unnecessary risks with the lives of his men.

Today the army said no set policy has been laid down about VC's who volunteer for the special force, but senior officers thought the ban would have ended with the last war. They didn't think a man would be barred from Korean service because he won the VC five or more years ago.

But Paul Triquet was up against even more than that. So many ex-battalion commanders volunteered it was a headache picking those who were picked.

He's a business man now in Quebec City, but his heart, apparently, still is with the old Von Doos.

Cubs Wallop Buffalo In 4-1 Triumph

By The Associated Press.

While Rochester continues to breeze along on top of the International League, there's a real battle brewing between Jersey City and Springfield for fourth place—the final berth for the playoffs.

Jersey City now holds a two-game edge on Springfield, but the Cubs are moving fast. They've won five straight.

The Cubs picked up a game Monday night by defeating Buffalo 4-1, while the Little Giants lost 3-1 to Montreal.

Other League play saw Rochester trim Syracuse 11-2, and Baltimore sweep a doubleheader from Toronto 4-1 and 10-9.

Bill Moisan stopped Buffalo on seven hits to register his 10th victory. He needed Tony Jacobs' help in the ninth, when the Bisons scored their lone run.

11th Triumph

Montreal's Omar (Turk) Lown bested Tony West at Jersey City. It was Lown's 11th triumph.

Rochester's Mike Schultz tamed Syracuse on six safeties. Don Bollweg sparked the Red Wings' 18-hit attack with three runs batted in on two doubles and two singles.

While Baltimore won its two games with Toronto, it was the losers' Bud Heslet who highlighted the action. After drawing a blank in the opener, Heslet clubbed three home runs, a double and a single in the second game to drive home eight runs. His home run and runs-batted-in output tied all-time Toronto records.

Cubs Even Series

Immaculate Conception Cubs evened their semi-final series with St. Peter's Yanks, in the Parish League, by scoring a 15-10 win at Memorial Park last night. The Yanks got away to an early lead and were in front 8-3 at the end of three innings However, the bats of the Cubs began to boom an the Cubs settled down in the field after a bad start and won in convincing style. Jim McGrath, who relieved Jack O'Dette in the fourth pitched good ball and helped his own cause with a three-run homer in the last of the seventh. F. McGillen, Rev. O'Sullivan, D. McGillen and Bill Sullivan had three hits each to lead the winners while Pupola with three hits was best for the Yanks. The third and deciding game will be played later this week at Memorial park, probably Friday night.

IT'S A LOCKE — Back in the United States after an absence of more than a year, stylish Bobby Locke made it clear he has lost none of his touch. Locke fired a 69 beating Lloyd Mangrum in a play-off to win his second Tam O'Shanter All-American title in Chicago. The smiling South African, who repeated in the British Open, is death on the greens. He cleaned up on previous American invasions, but this time came to the US for the one tournament.

Ransom Wins $11,000 Prize In Pro Tourney

CHICAGO, Aug. 15 (AP) — "Daddy" Henry Ransom defeated Detroit's Chick Harbert by three strokes, 69-72, Monday in a play-off for the Tam o'Shanter "world" pro golf championship.

Ransom's first prize—$11,000—was a treasure chest unmatched in golf history. Harbert's cut was $5,000. The difference of $6,000 was decided in a four-hour match followed by 10,000 spectators. Among the crowd was Mrs. Ransom, her 20-months-old son, Henry, Jr., and nine-year-old daughter, Marsha.

They wanted to see what "Daddy" was doing the same as the rest. Well "Daddy" was hot.

The 39-year-old Ransom went six strokes under par on five consecutive holes. He rolled in 12, 13, and 15 foot putts and dropped a 70 foot pitch shot.

The $11,000 skyrocketed Ransom from 10th on the pro-money-winning list to second with a total of $18,885 for the season. Sam Snead still is well ahead with $29,048. Jim Ferrier dropped from second to an unofficial third with $18,771.

Winnipeg Defeated

VANCOUVER, Aug. 15 (CP).—A sporting dictum, "bet a dark horse in the mud," didn't hold true Monday night as Winnipeg Scottish, dark horse in the Dominion soccer championships, lost in the mud to Vancouver City, 4-0.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

It's Owen Sound Crescents vs. the Petes at 8.45 tomorrow eve in Miller Bowl in an OLA senior "A" match. Soooo . . . .

Tougher'n bears are Owen Sound Crescents,
Yet smart as red foxes, withal:
But they'll take a loss
If the Petes play lacrosse,
So, let's watch the northerners fall.

* * * * * *

The Creighton crew will find the loop leaders stiff opposition, but they can be beaten. This lone OLA tilt of the week here ought to see a grand game and a record crowd as the third-place Petes can climb into a tie for second with a win.

* * * * * *

Managers Ken Guilfoyle and Tom Walton of East City and UEW men softballers are wily old warriors and they'll be going all out tonight in that twin bill at the Bowl. Each team has won two in the four-of-seven city semi-finals. The right to go into OASA intermediate "A" playdowns is also at stake, and it could well be settled tonight. If it isn't, these teams meet at 8.15 Thursday eve. If a winner should be declared tonight, that team goes against Mutuals to open the best-of-seven city finals Thursday at 8.15 p.m. Single games in playoffs after tonight's twin bill. They'll really be hustling in the game this gloaming.

Girls Enter Playoffs

Round-robin playoffs for the girls' city softball title and the Robert Cotton Cup are on now, being a home-and-home setup for each team. Ashby's play Marines at eight tomorrow in the Bowl d'Ashburnham, while Friday has Ashby's vs. Woollens at seven, followed by Marines vs. CGE. Top team when the series is over takes the title and trophy. Meantime, Westclox are in PWSU playdowns in Kingston tomorrow and back here at three p.m. on Saturday, third tilt if necessary at 6.15 p.m. Saturday in the Bowl. That's intermediate "A," the junior Woollens hitting into provincial playdowns later, Prexy Bill Flint advises.

About 40 prospective senior "B" gridders met Coach Harv Bamforth at the Ex. last eve for a general get-together of the Orfuns. The coach told 'em what he expected and what his plans were, other club officials also covering their angles on the re-organization. With a tie-in with Hamilton, the local club is expected to be plenty strong in ORFU senior "B" play this semester, going against Orillia, Oshawa and Cobourg. Schedule opens in another month, so the grid hopefuls will be at it nightly now in training, starting this p.m. at 6.30 in Morrow Park. Exercises this week and then the heavy work with pads after that. Other info in elsewhere.

Too Little Too Late

The Petes came on too late last gloaming down in Bowmanville as Oshawa won the Viaduct Loop ball game 11-8 ere it was blacked out. That leaves the Merchants three and a half games out in front of the second-place Murphyites, who are up three and a half on Toronto Aces. Latter have but a game edge on New Toronto, these four being sure of playoff spots, as Dovers and Staffords are too far down now with the schedule ending this week. The Petes go to New Toronto on Friday and play Aces in Toronto on Sunday to end their schedule trips, but they have several postponed games to work in here under the lights. Arcs will be ready Saturday and New Toronto plays twice in Riverside afternoon and evening games.

* * * * * *

Last night saw Doug Plunkett start for the Petes, but he ran into trouble in the fifth, and Gunner Whitehill finished—also having a bit of trouble. Thompson began for Oshawa but was driven to cover in the sixth and Morey finished. Each team had one big inning in a slugfest, and the Petes were really pressing in the late stages. Joe Lowrey was their big hitter with a homer and two singles in four, while Al Menzies and Bud Harrison clouted two bingles each in four tries. Howie Dalton also banged out a homer. Napolitano's two for four included a home run for the Merchants. Petes came up with two double-plays again. Manager Ed Murphy leaves on his job for the Maritimes about Oct. 1, but he's sure hoping for a senior ball title first.

Plans Outlined At Meeting Of The Orfuns

"You'll be eating and sleeping football for the next few months." Coach Harvard (Bammie) Bamforth told the 40 hopefuls at the first meeting of the Peterborough Orfuns Monday night in Exhibition Park.

Coach Bamforth briefed the club on his plans for this year's campaign in the ORFU senior 'B' series with Orillia, Oshawa and Cobourg. He warned the players that he took the position of coaching the club on one condition, that 'I have control of the club and what I say goes."

Planning to have a fast club similar to Bamforth clubs of 10 years ago he stressed the need of perfect condition. He told the players that oneone who likes to play football enough to play every night should forfeit a few things such as drinking and smoking to attain good condition. When in good condition, he added, a player has less chance of being hurt.

Start Drilling

Practices start tonight in Exhibition Park at 6:30. This week will be for exercises only. Next week the pads will be given the players.

Many of the 40 men out Monday night were members of the 1949 Panthers, such as Jim Conlin, Bill Davidson, Wally Farr, Doug Delaney, Gord Beatty and Spike Matthews. Some of the others were: Frank Fitzgerald, a local product who was with the Hamilton Wildcats last year; Hugh Douglas, two years ago middle with the Panthers and this year out with Argos; Stan Facendi, stellar lineman for Alex Londry's 1949 junior COSSA champions. Jack Matthews, although not at the meeting, is believed to be a tryout with the club this year. For the past two years he has played with Johnny Metras' University of Western Ontario champions.

Primary interest of the players at the meeting was the importation of players from other centres. Dave Wilson, manager, told the group that arrangements have been made in Hamilton for four players to fill key positions while others may be arriving from Toronto. These players will have to try out with the teams as well as the local material.

Two-fold Contract

Wilson explained that the purpose of the Hamilton contact was two-fold; first, for players for the Orfuns, and second as an "in" for promising players of the Orfuns.

Frank Foster, chairman of the Booster Club, outlined that part of the team work in this year's setup. To provide financial assistance for equipment and other early expenses the executive and players will be selling season tickets for $10. These tickets will allow the holders to take part in weekly draws, have special seats as well as special parking services at the game.

Dave Wilson, who is also on the players' committee, told the players that 50 percent of the net gate receipts would be set aside for them at the end of the season. Each player will receive an amount corresponding to the point system which will be used this year. Points will be awarded players for games and practices. Should a player leave the club before the end of the season he forfeits his share. This is not so in the case of injury.

Dr. R. S. Chenoweth, president; Clare Collins, vice-president and Donald McGillis, honorary president, spoke briefly to the club. Following the meeting the players were given refreshments provided by Wimp O'Toole through the efforts of Dr. Chenoweth and Dr. Donald Aitken, secretary.

Hastings Wins, 10-4 To Get Playoff Spot

HASTINGS, Aug. 15—(ENS)—Hastings Legion clinched a playoff berth in the T.V.L. here Friday, taking the high-flying Wooler nine 10-4 in a fast fixture.

The game started out as a mound duel between Crowley and McColl. Crowley gave up but six hits and was unbeatable after the third inning and was given fine support.

Big Barney McCall was touched for nine hits, but was wild in spots and this got him in hot water more than once.

Ab Beavis pulled off the fielding gem of the game, going back into deep left to snag a ball that cut short a Wooler threat.

Both Campbellford and Wooler have two postponed games to be played and these will decide the fourth entry into the playdowns, which will commence next week.

Turning back the Petes 11-8 in Bowmanville last night, Oshawa Merchants took a firmer grip on top spot in the Viaduct Baseball League. A good-sized crowd saw a free-hitting tussle, with each squad having one big inning. The Petes started to drive too late, the fray being terminated at the end of the seventh inning. It was pretty dark when the last out was made.

Some Trouble

Doug. Plunkett pitched steady ball till the fifth when he ran into trouble, Gunner Whitehill taking over then and having some trouble, too, before he could retire the side and in the next heat, Darrell Thompson lasted till out in the sixth for Oshawa, Morey having to be rushed to his relief as the Murphyites rallied for five runs in that chukker. The fielding was fair on both sides, and the earned runs were 9-7 for Oshawa. The Petes had two twin killings to one for Oshawa.

Wood led the victors at bat with two for two, one a triple. Napolitano hit a homer and a single in four as Ticcony and Rowland each had two blows apiece, one of the latter's being a double. Bitman banged out a three-bagger and McMullen a double. For the Petes, Joe Lowrey led with three in four, including a homer. Al Menzies and Bud Harrison each got two safeties, one of Bud's being a double. Howie Dalton also smashed out a four-bagger.

Indians Turn Back Tigers In 10-Inning Thriller

By RALPH RODEN,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Early Wynn's contribution to the Cleveland Indians' pennant drive is greater than his record indicates.

The 30-year-old righthander has turned in 13 victories but seven of them have been over the other first division teams—Detroit, New York and Boston.

Only Bob Lemon, ace righthander, has a better record on the Cleveland team. Lemon, who goes after his 19th victory today in the final of a two-game series against the pace-setting Tigers, has scored eight triumphs against first division teams.

Wynn considerably brightened the Indians' pennant outlook on Monday night as he turned back the Tigers, 3-2, in a 10-inning thriller before 60,120 fans in Cleveland's Municipal Stadium. The triumph moved the runner-up Tribe to within 2½ games of the Bengals.

The Indians scored a run in the second inning and Wynn nursed this slender margin until the ninth.

In the ninth, with one out, Hoot Evers beat out a slow bounder. Johnny Groth followed with a home run.

Surprise Homer

The vast throng began to move silently toward the exit gates as Hal Newhouser retired the first two Indians in the last of the ninth. But Al (Flip) Rosen brought them back by socking a home run well over the left field fence to tie the score. The belt was Rosen's 31st of the year.

The Tigers threatened in the 19th but Wynn struck out George Kell with a runner on second to end the bid and the Indians quickly broke up the game in their half of the inning.

Allie Clark started things with a double. Bob Avila went in to run for Clark. Jim Hegan was intentionally passed and Wynn sacrifices the runners along. Newhouser then purposely walked Ike Boone to load the bases.

Wins Game

Manager Lou Boudreau sent left-handed hitting Dale Mitchell up to bat for righthanded hitting Bob Kennedy. Mitchell sent a high bounder to short. Connie Berry fired the ball home but the speedy Avila slid under the throw to win the game.

The game was the only one in the American League. The other teams were not scheduled to play.

Action in the National League also was slight. In the only games played, the Chicago Cubs nipped the St. Louis Cardinals, 7-6, and the improving Cincinnati Reds thrashed the Pittsburgh Pirates, 15-8.

Lynn Patrick Agrees To Coach NHL All-Stars

MONTREAL, Aug. 15 (CP) — Lynn Patrick, recently appointed coach of Boston Bruins, has accepted the National Hockey League's offer to coach the league's all-stars against the Stanley cup champion Detroit Red Wings, it was announced today. The fourth annual all-star classic will be played in Detroit Oct. 8.

Patrick, who coached New York Rangers to the cup final last spring, was invited to act as coach when the league held its annual meeting in June. He was in Victoria at the time and his letter of acceptance has been received by President Clarence Campbell of the NHL.

Patrick listed 12 of the 16 players he plans to use. He will select the remaining six later.

It is the usual policy for the all-star coach to name at least three players from each of the other five NHL teams. Of the 12 already selected, Patrick has named five from Toronto Maple Leafs, three from New York Rangers, two from Montreal Canadiens, and one each from Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks.

Those Chosen:

Still to be selected are two defencemen, a centre, a right wing and a left wing and a utility forward.

Bill Durnan of Canadiens, goalkeeper on the No. 1 all-star selected last spring, will not play this year. Big Bill, six-time winner of the Vezina trophy as low-average goalie in the league, has retired.

All players named to the first and second all-star team as selected by the six NHL coaches last spring are automatically starters in the game. But Sid Abel, centre, and Ted Lindsay, left wing, of the Red Wings who were named to the first all-star team, will not play for the all-stars but with their own champion Detroit team. The same applies to defencemen Red Kelly and Leo Reise and right-winger Gordie Howe, named to the second all-star team.

These five places will be filled by players who made the third team or others chosen by Patrick.

Tommy Ivan, coach of the Red Wings, who has handled the all-stars the last two years and master-minded them to victories, will direct his own Red Wings this year.

In the three previous all-star games, the stars have come out on top.

LaMotta To Defend Crown In Detroit

NEW YORK, Aug. 15 (AP). — Jake Lamotta will defend his middleweight crown next month. He signed Monday to meet France's Laurent Dauthuille at Detroit Sept. 13.

Lamotta is superstitious about fighting in Detroit. He thinks it's his lucky city. It was there he won the title from Marcel Cerdan, and earlier, defeated "Sugar" Ray Robinson, the welter champ.

Dauthuille whipped Lamotta in a 10-round bout at Montreal Feb. 21, 1949. Lamotta will receive 45 per cent of the gate and Dauthuille 15. The latter has agreed on a return bout in 60 days if he lifts the crown from the Bronx Bull.

Make Soviet Jet Fighter Against Night Bombers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15 (AP)—A Soviet jet fighter designed especially for night operations against bombers is listed among four Russian warplanes reported developed recently.

The 1949-model Lavochkin twin-jet night fighter is described in an artcile appearing in the current issue of Flying Magazine. It was written by Charles W. Cain, instructor at the British War Office School of Aircraft Recognition who edited the Russian sector of the authoritative book Jane's "All the World's Aircraft."

Top speed of the night fighter is estimated in the region of 650 miles an hour." Its wings are swept back to a 35-degree angle, its fuselage narrow and tapering, its armament believed to include either two or four heavy cannon.

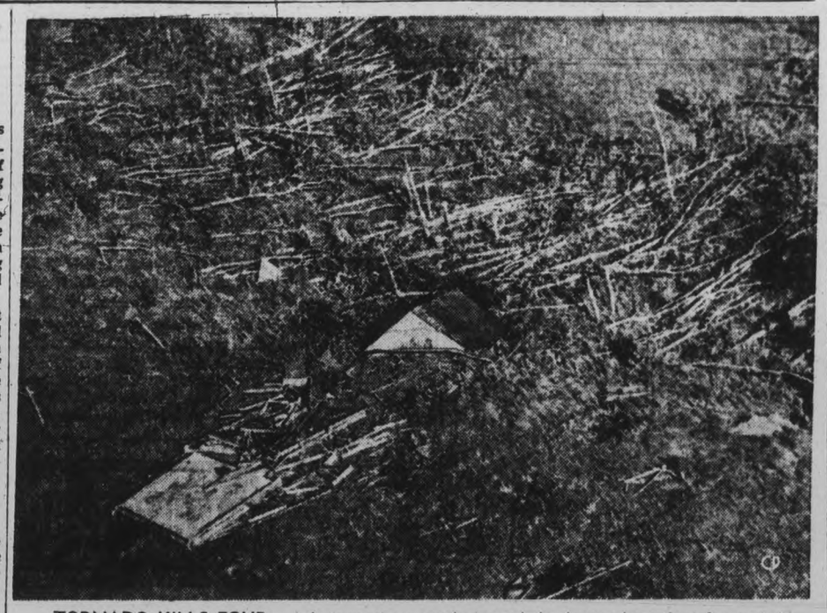
Another of the four new planes is reported to be a twin-jet Lavochkin day fighter, perhaps a modification of the Yak-15 or the Mig-9 designs which appeared about five years ago.

Still another Lavochkin type is a single-jet model with an extreme (54-degree) sweep-back of the wings. One interesting feature mentioned by the magazine is the reported use of dive brakes in the wings—a device used for tactical operation of a plane in a close-in pin-pointing of targets in support of ground troops.

The fourth plane is a single-jet Mikoyan fighter, with a top speed reputedly more than 625 miles an hour. Cain notes the presence of long tubes on each side of the nose which he says indicates Russian engineers may have developed a "small air-to-air missile, possibly guided, or that the plane is equipped with recoilless cannon."

CANADIAN INDIANS

It is estimated that there were little more than 200,000 Indians in Canada at the period of their greatest strength.



TORNADO KILLS FOUR — A tornado which swept through a section of the Stony Indian Reservation, seven miles southwest of Morely, Alta., last Friday killed four Indians and injured six others. This aerial photo shows all that remains of the house of the Ear family. The force of the tornado tossed the heavy logs that formed the wall of the dwelling around like matchsticks. The floor is seen in the approximate centre of the photo while the roof lies to the right. The fallen trees were poplars which fell during the storm as it cut a swath a quarter-mile long through some 25 acres of the reservation.

Civil Defence Conference Held In Ottawa Soon

OTTAWA, Aug. 13 — (CP) — Federal and provincial representatives will meet here within 10 days to consider the problems of civil defence, from sabotage to atomic bombs, and to clear the way for the provinces to cooperate with their cities to get ready for the worst.

Defence Minister Claxton announced that the civil defence conference will be held immediately after the meeting of attorneys-general who arrive here next Monday to discuss constitutional changes. It is expected that the defence conference will be under way by Aug. 23 or 24 behind closed doors.

Official circles said Monday night the federal delegation will include Mr. Claxton, Justice Minister Garson, Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes, Chief of the General Staff, [illegible], chairman of the Defence Research Board, Maj-Gen. F. F. Worthington, Director-General of Defence Research, Commissioner S. T. Wood of the RCMP, and other top-level officials in other government departments.

Skeleton Groups

Informed quarters say the conference should clear the way for provinces to go to their cities and discuss what they should do to prepare for atomic or other attack. Ottawa is not expected to urge any wholesale enlistment of air raid squads on a block-by-block basis at this stage but skeleton groups are apt to be encouraged in each large city.

Some of the provinces have already accepted Ottawa's offer to train key personnel in defence against modern types of attack and the first course will be given next month at the army's Camp Borden, Ont. Others are expected to be held later in other schools as well.

2 War Figures Play Leads In New Film

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 15—(AP)—John Huston is a tall, lean-looking man with a genius for writing, directing and picking players. The latter talent is demonstrated in his choices of Audie Murphy and Bill Mauldin for leading roles in "Red badge of courage."

Murphy and Maudlin are two of the leading names that came out of the Second World War.

Murphy, the quiet farmer boy and orphan, fought in Italy and France and won more medals than any U.S. soldier of that war. At 21, he was a national figure. His face on a magazine cover prompted James Cagney to invite him to Hollywood. After a slow start, his acting career is gaining steam.

Top Artist

Mauldin, a baby-faced pencil artist, shot to fame with his cartoons which captured the muddy flavor of soldier humor. His influence was widespread.

Mauldin has reached the advanced age of 28 and Murphy is pushing 26. Murphy got fed up with the "most-decorated-hero" business and has given all of his medals away to kids, including the Congressional Medal of Honor, the United States' highest military award. Mauldin tiffed with his syndicate over his post-war cartoons and chucked the works. He turned to writing books.

I asked him what he thinks about his acting debut.

"I think it's a damn fool idea," he said. "But I'll go along with it. I can make enough money to go home and finish my book."

Murphy expects to join the Korean War when he finishes the picture.

Capsule Review

"Summer Stock" offers the lively talents of Judy Garland and Gene Kelly, which should be enough for anyone. No one expects surprises in a musical plot, and this one contains none. It is a tired but pleasant story about summers players who invade a farm. Miss Garland, rounder than usual, plays with her infectious enthusiasm, and scores a hit. Gene Kelly is also fine, and Phil Silvers supplies some good clowning.

Officials Express Doubts On N.Z. Training System

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — The Korean crisis and New Zealand's commitment to send a special voluntary force to the front have caused doubts in some quarters as to the suitability of the dominion's system of compulsory service under present conditions.

The program was drawn up early this year under the belief that the country would not be called on to provide an expeditionary force for several years. Under the present system it will be three years before the new trainees become available for overseas duty.

All youths of 18 have to undergo compulsory training in the armed services, providing they are medically fit. They spend 14 weeks in the camp their first year, with shorter periods the following three years.

However, the government has ruled that no men of under 21 will be sent overseas. That means the first men under the plan will not be ready for duty until 1953. On top of this, virtually all the country's training facilities are taken up with these 18-year-olds.

Would Switch Effort

Suggestions have been made that the country immediately switch its major effort to training men who have become 21 since the end of the Second World War. This would cover the 21 to 26 age group, which is completely untrained.

During the war, New Zealand had a system of general conscription, so at present all eligible men of over 26 have either training or war experience. Conscription lapsed at the war's end, however, and the present crop of 21 to 26-year-olds have had no training at all except for those in regular and reserve forces.

Speed-up Training

The training for the Korean volunteers, however, will be simplified by the speed-up system devised for the present training plan. This, together with the fact that about half of the volunteers already signed are ex-servicemen, will help greatly in shortening the training period needed.

This speeded-up program has proved one of the most successful schemes evolved by the Dominion's military authorities. To teach the trainees as much as possible in the short time available, a program was drawn up which almost eliminated formal drill and rifle exercises.

Instead, the course concentrated on teaching the recruits to shoot, to take cover and to perform one operation efficiently in a particular branch of the service —loading a gun in the artillery or firing a mortar in the infantry. Parade-ground exercises were abandoned in favor of obstacle courses.

In spite of criticism from some quarters that a certain amount of discipline had been sacrificed for economy and speed, Field Marshal Sir William Slim, chief of the Imperial General Staff, said that they had the best physique and intelligence of any recruits he had ever seen.

Two Firms Get City Contracts To Build Sewers

Two contracts for sewer construction let by the council Monday afternoon amounted to $45,980.80.

One in the Cameron St., Monaghan Rd. section went to Peter Mohan, Toronto, for $32,990.80, and the other for sewers in Ashburnham and the north end of the city was awarded to R. A Blyth, Toronto, for 12,990. They were the lowest of four tenders.

The south end job comprises: Cameron St. from Park St. to Monaghan Road; Riverside Drive, along the river, east of Monaghan Road; Spruce and Steel Streets between Cameron St. and Riverside Drive.

Bids for that work, arranged as one section by City Engineer Chalmers, were: P. Mohan, $32,990; R. A. Blyth, $40,247; Carroll-Sharp Construction Co., Toronto, $66,174; Curran & Briggs, Toronto, $55,738.

Sewers in No. 2 section, are to be laid on stretches of Armour Road and Dufferin St. In Ashburnham, and in the north end of the city on Wolsley, Wellington and Fairbairn Streets.

Tenders for the No. 2 section contract were: P. Mohan $14,150; R. A. Blyth, 12,990; Carroll-Sharp Construction Co. $23,783; Curran & Briggs $19,895.

Divide Work

The Chalmers plan of splitting the proposed work into two sections provided a saving of more than $6,000. The two high bidders were not interested in sectional jobs. Their prices were specified for both.

The Mohan and Blyth were for either or both sections. They also quoted unit prices of construction applicable to any further sewer extensions the council may wish to undertake before the season ends.

"I think the council would be advised to split the work between the companies with the two low bids," Mr. Chalmers replied to Mayor Swanston.

Motions by Alderman H. Dodds and T. D. Miller accepted the Mohan tender in the south, and Blyth for the No. 2 group of roads.

May Find Water

"They are likely to encounter water in the south end trenches," Mr. Chalmers said.

It was said that Orpington Road may be included in the Mohan job if property owners petition for it again.

Another Dodds-Miller motion authorized the signing of the contracts.

Mr. Chalmers told the council the bids were within his estimates.

Girl 8, Suffers Broken Leg

An eight-year-old girl suffered a broken right leg Monday evening when she walked in front of a car at Scott and Reid streets. The girl, Lorraine Legris, 366 Simcoe St., was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Driver of the car, John A. Reynard, 570 Patterson St., told police he was driving south on Reid St. and saw the little girl start to cross at Scott St. He said she was not watching southbound traffic.

Mr. Reynard said he applied his brakes, and had the car almost stopped when the right front fender of the car hit the girl.

Besides the fractured leg, she suffered a cut on the back of her head, and bruises.

Union Jack Best Welcome For U.S. Visitors

Peterborough merchants are complying with the request of the Department of Travel and Publicity that the Stars and Stripes not be used as tourist bait, James Fraser, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, said today.

Mr. Fraser explained that when American tourists come to Canada they wish to see the Union Jack to strengthen the feeling that they are in a foreign country. Some establishments spoil the effect by trying to attract the American tourists with Old Glory, he added.

Early this year, Tom McCall, deputy minister of Travel and Publicity, said in an address to a group of Peterborough businessmen:

Don't Ape Americans

"Canada is a foreign country to the Americans and Canadians should stop trying to ape Americans, and preserve their own individuality. American enjoy the slower tempo of life in Canada; the courtesy of customs and police officers; the sight of the Union Jack flying over public buildings and the respect for law and order which seems to be an integral part of Canadian life.

"They don't like such things as cheap pandering to their patriotism to get business, some Canadians try by flying American flags at every service station and hot dog stand."

Fly Both Flags

Numerous American cottagers throughout the Kawarthas are displaying international courtesy by flying both the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack. A number fly the flags side by side.

A few American-owned resorts in the district fly only the Stars and Stripes, Mr. Fraser said. Although these resorts cater to American tourists, he added, they should have at least one Union Jack flying because they are on Canadian soil and earning a living here for six months of the year.

The Heiress Scores Big Hit With Summer Theatre-goers

By ROBERTSON DAVIES

It is ironic that one ofthe greatest theatrical successes of the past three years should be "The Heiress", by Ruth and Augustus Goetz. The irony lies in the fact that this play is a dramatic version of Henry James' story "Washington Square"; poor James, who ardently desired recognition as a playwright, wrote fifteen unsuccessful plays. Let us hope that his spirit derives some posthumous satisfaction from "The Heiress", which is an excellent play and, as performed by the Peterborough Summer Theatre this week, a thoroughly good evening's entertainment.

As might be expected in a story supplied by the great novelist, "The Heiress" is a study of the interplay of character. Dr. Sloper is a successful physician; apart from his profession his principal interest is his daughter Catherine, the only child of his beautiful young wife, who died in giving Catherine birth. Sloper hopes that Catherine may be all that her mother was. But Catherine is a dull, worthy girl, who mistakes the attentions of a fortune-hunter for love. Sloper tells her the truth about her infatuation, and she wreaks a terrible revenge upon him. And when she finds out the truth about her lover, she revenges herself upon him also in a characteristic fashion.

It is easy to sympathize with Catherine. But it must be recognized that Sloper also has a good case. His plight, it may be said, is harder than hers. And because it is easier to arouse sympathy for a girl, however plain, than for a middle-aged and embittered man, the play presents the actors and the director with a complex problem.

Met Challenge

The Summer Theatre company under the direction of John Primm, have met this challenge with a success which falls just short of completeness. Miss Kate Reid gives an excellent performance as Catherine; her strongly emotional scenes are first-rate; it is in quieter passages that her touch is not always quite sure. As Dr. Sloper Mr. Donald Glen has everything the part requires except a touch of anguish. He gives us the doctor's bitterness against his daughter in full measure, but he does not quite explain the man's heartbreak and disappointment. As the fortune-hunting Morris Townsend Mr. Frank Perry gives us the best performance we have had from him this season. The part is thoroughly within his scope, and he plays it with subtlety and complete conviction.

What is said above must not be taken as simple fault-finding. "The Heiress" is the most demanding play, in terms of sheer acting, that this company has tackled this year. The degree of success which it achieves is high and deserves to be judged by the highest standards. It is the youth of the company which tells against it in this study of disappointment. If this same company could be re-assembled to perform "The Heiress" in ten years, we might expect perfection.

Secondary Roles

The important secondary role of Sloper's sister is played most successfully by Clarine Jackman; she gave a convincing and humorously pathetic study of a perennially romantic woman.

The supporting company was a strong one. As the Sloper family servant Miss Atkinson played warmly and with charm. As another of Sloper's sisters, Marjorie Root gave a pleasant performance as another of her old ladies; we should like to see Miss Root as something this side of fifty, some time. As her daughter Diana Eager was a good foil for Catherine, and John Primm appeared briefly as her fiancee. Brenda Davies completed the cast as Townsend's sister, and played sympathetically in the scene in which she declines to interfere in her brother's romance.

The play is understandingly directed and handsomely mounted. It is among the best things the Summer Theatre has done, and is decidedly worth a visit.

Ask For Fish For Restocking Before March 1

If you want fish to restock some of Ontario's waters in 1951, you will have to have your application in by March 1, 1951, says the Department of Lands and Forests.

The department has had to move back the deadline two months because it is now receiving 2,000 more applications a year than it did 10 years ago. Last year the department handled 6,000 applications for fish to be planted in lakes, rivers and streams.

The deadline each year from now on will be March 1. Any applications sent in after that date will be held over for the next year.

The number of applications for trees for reforestation has also jumped and the deadline date for these requests is today, Aug. 15, for delivery of trees in 1951.

Zone Foresters John Bell and Mac Kirk will inspect the planting sites mentioned in the applications to see that the trees applied for are suitable for the site.

In this way the department hopes to cut out waste of trees and labor on unsuitable areas.

Spent Bullet Strikes Woman On Back Of Head

MARMORA, August 15 (ENS) —A Marmora woman was slightly injured Saturday when a spent .22 calibre bullet, said to have been fired at a pigeon, struck the back of her head after narrowly missing her husband.

The woman, Mrs. James Gordenier, was unconscious for several minutes. The bullet cut two holes in the front of Mr. Gordenier's shirt, passed through two pieces of heavy canvas, and struck the woman.

Mr. Gordenier, foreman on a construction job, said his wife, an invalid, cried out: "Why did you hit me?" He said the bullet apparently hit a flower before it cut through his shirt, as the blossom suddenly fell to the ground.

Clings To Overturned Canoe Until Rescued From Lake

Fifteen-year-old Bob McGarrity escaped drowning in Little Lake Monday afternoon, when he clung to his overturned canoe and waited to be rescued by Roy Richardson of Keene, a worker in the Trent Canal shops. The boy, who said he could swim, explained he was in his uncle's canoe. He tried to turn when the current and wind caught his canoe and he was thrown off balance and plunged into the lake.

He shouted for help and several people heard him. Lockmaster George Esson said he saw the canoe after it had upset from the top of the lock at the east end of Maria St. Because it was more than 200 yards away, he was not sure whether or not it was just some rubbish which often floats down the lake.

When he heard young McGarrity shout, he yelled for help. At the time, he was putting the cruiser Otonabee down through the lock. Police and firemen quickly arrived, but Mr. Richardson had almost reached the boy by then. The boy's canoe was towed back.

Before the Otonabee had been released from the lock, Mr. Richardson had reached the boy by rowing out his square-end punt.

Alone In Canoe

At first it was feared a second youth may have been in the canoe and gone under, but young McGarrity assured police when he was brought in, that he had been alone.

The youth told Mr. Richardson he had not attempted to swim in to shore because the wind was carrying toward shore and he knew he would have to kick off his shoes to swim.

The rescuer said he had been welding in the Trent Canal workshop and heard shouting. He ran out and saw Mr. Eason shouting. He ran to the punt and rowed out.

A large crowd of adults and children quickly gathered when they saw the excitement. Many had been swimming in the canal just above the lock.

Police said the boy brought the chemicals home from school and was told by his father to get rid of them. While the girl watched, he put a match to the chemicals. The resulting explosion was heard several blocks away.

Recruits Prefer Regular Army To Korean Force

Peterborough men seem to be by-passing the special Korean Force in preference for the active Canadian Army, according to indications at the Armouries during the past five days.

Staff-Sgt. Gerald A. Dunn of the administrative and training staff at the Armouries said today that 30 men have applied there for active service in the last few days, compared with 10 for the Korean force.

Since recruiting started for the special United Nations force, only 65 have appeared at the Armouries.

Two Peterborough men, Frank Johnson, 54 Montgomery St. and John Harold Eggleton, 763 Brown St., applied for active service Monday at the armouries. The Korean force went recruitless.

Standards Lowered

Staff-Sgt. Dunn explained the increase in active recruiting was due to the lowering of enlistment standards in the past week.

The educational standards during the past several years have been high, junior matriculation, then two years high school and then Grade VIII education. At present there is no basic educational standard for the Army. Every recruit has to obtain 130 marks in the M-test, when called to Kingston.

Take Married Men

For a time, the Army refused to accept married men into the active force. Now married men may enlist but the Army prefers them to have a trade or a non-trade specialty. The same applies for single men between the ages of 30 and 35.

No word has been received at the Armouries about any Peterborough or district man being accepted into the Korean force. Staff-Sgt. Dunn reported that Warrant Officer I C. A. Churchill of the 37th Heavy AA Workshop, RCEME, is believed to be a member of the force. A member of the African campaign forces during World War 2, W.O.I. Churchill applied last Wednesday for the force and was told to report back Saturday.

Pass Tests at Bridgenorth

BRIDGENORTH, Aug. 15 — (ENS)—Swimming tests for the classes held at Chemong Lake were carried out Monday afternoon at Blewett's wharf. Of the 33 entrants in the various groups, five only were unable to complete their tests, but will be able to try again next year.

Mrs. Pansy Forbes, coach of the Peterborough Ornamental Swimming Club, examined and tested all the entrants in the junior, intermediate and senior Red Cross, also intermediate, bronze and silver life saving. Mrs. Isabel Crary, instructress at Chemong for the classes, feels that she has had a very successful class of swimmers this year.

Ninety-six children enrolled this summer, coming from as far as the 2nd line of Smith twice a week to learn to swim. Of the 17 entrants in the Junior Red Cross, 15 successfully passed their test and many of these only learned to swim this summer. The poor swimming weather and the rough water of the lake was a drawback in preventing more of the children being able to try their Junior Red Cross this summer.

In the life saving tests, retrieving a weighted object from the bottom of the lake was very hard to do as the muddy and weedy bottom of Chemong Lake makes it hard to see, but all the entrants were able to bring the stone to the surface.

Intermediate Red Cross winners: Phyllis Heard, Elizabeth Sweetman, Linda Touchburn, Gail Fry, Lenore Westwood, Janet McKay, Jane Kelly.

Senior Red Cross winners: Florence McKay, Alice McKay, Sonny Gravelle, Margaret Westwood, Marylin Wright, Scott Morley.

Intermediate life saving: Alice McKay, Irene Kelly, Betty Roseborough, Margaret Parnell, Sally Hartman.

Bronze life saving: Betty Roseborough, Margaret Parnell, Sally Hartman, Florence McKay.

Silver life saving or award of merit: Mrs. Earl Blewett.

Of Interest to Women

DOROTHY DIX

Let Husband Go for a Year If He Asks for His Freedom

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been married for thirty years to a man whom I still adore. I have given him three fine sons of whom he is very proud. I have been a good wife a good mother, a good homemaker. I have saved my husband's money and helped him to succeed. I am good-looking, still have my figure and dress well. I have kept up with the times. But at middle age my husband is suddenly tired of me and wants to be free. He says he is in love with no other woman, but he just doesn't want to be bound down by domestic ties, and asks me to divorce him. What shall I do?—MARION.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: I should say that your best plan would be to ask him to agree to a separation of a year. Tell him that you have no desire to hang on to a man who regards you as an encumbrance and wishes to be rid of you, but that before he messes up your life and his life and the children's lives with a divorce, you want him to be sure that he really wants one.

Age Of Discretion

It is a very common thing for men in the turbulent 50s, which appears to be the age of indiscretion, to have domesticity pall upon them. They get suddenly and tired of it as they do of their business or their professions and crave for a change. They long for liberty and freedom to enjoy themselves. They want to be able to come and go as they please without giving an account to anyone.

While this mood lasts many a man gets a divorce from his wife or retires from business and generally with the same disastrous result. The freedom that he longed for turns to dust and ashes on his lips. He is lonely and miserable without his old wife and bored to death with nothing to do. The girls who seemed so glamorous when he was feneed off from them in the domestic fold he finds to be silly little chits with whom he has nothing in common just as he finds that the idleness that seemed so desirable when he was busy becomes an insupportable burden when he has nothing to do but kill time.

But you cannot argue with a man whose matrimonial fetters have begun to chafe him, and who thinks that he would be perfectly happy if he were free of them. The only thing that will bring him back to his senses is experience.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: My husband tells me that he does not love me. He says that he would not speak to a bum the way he talks to me, and that he has more respect for the women of the streets than he has for me. He seems to blame me for this and think I should do something about it. I do not know what causes his disrespect as I have been a good wife to him, I am honest, moral, and neither in my manner nor language am I common or vulgar. I offered him a divorce. We have no children and I would not expect alimony, as I am young and healthy and able to take care of myself, but it appears he does not want to leave me. I am completely disgusted with marriage and yet I don't want to quit, and I love him in spite of everything. What shall I do?

HILDA S.

ANSWER: Apparently marriage is one of things that your husband can neither do with, nor without, while you seem to be a glutton for punishment. So one's only conclusion in your case is that you are one of the couples who get a sort of sadistic pleasure out of domestic fights.

You are like those strange people who enjoy poor health and who are never really so happy as when they are miserable. Evidently your husband is the torturer type who delights in tormenting someone in his power who is too weak and cowardly to strike back, while you must be one of the doormat wives who enjoy having a man trample over them.

It is easy to see why your husband doesn't respect you. It is because you have no self-respect yourself. Every man treats his wife the way she demands to be treated, and if you had made your husband understand from the start that he had to treat you as a lady, even if you were his wife, you would never have had to put up with the degradation you have suffered.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I have a big family that I have to cook for, and when I go to get breakfast I find the milk is sour and the butter oil because I have no refrigerator. My husband says we can't afford one, although he is going to buy a new car. He accuses me of nagging every time I say anything about getting a refrigerator. Do you consider that nagging? MRS. X.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: There are two kinds of nagging. The one that is fault-finding and the other that is a righteous insistence on justice and fair play, and while some wives nag too much others don't nag enough. I'll bet your husband has all the latest doodads and labor-saving devices to make his work easier. You have a right to the same conveniences in doing your work, and if you have to nag to get them, go to it. And more power to your tongue.

HAVE SNOW IN WEST

EDMONTON, Aug. 15 (CP).—Snow and frost Monday night threatened grain crops in northern areas of Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia with general harvest time several weeks away. Light snow—the first appreciable amount this season—began falling early Monday in northeastern British Columbia and continued into Monday night.

COOKBOOK OF THE WEEK

Not Too Heavy, Not Too Light Unusual Orange Pie Recipe

Everyone wants to try something different once in a while and the Examiner's series of 24 cookbooks are just the reference books you need when you feel in an experimental mood. This week the fifth book in the series, "250 Superb Pies and Pastries," has been released and you will be certain to want it for its exciting illustrations and recipe suggestions as well as its concise, easy-to-follow descriptions of how to reduce these mouthwatering masterpieces.

Here is a recipe that it quite out of the ordinary, and for an unusual decorative touch you might arrange orange segments on top of the custard and then sprinkle shreaded cocoanut heavily over them, instead of the suggested topping of whipped cream.

Orange Chiffon Pie

1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
4 eggs, separated; 1 cup sugar
½ cup orange juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
1 baked Pastry Shell
½ recipe Whipped Cream Topping.

Soften gelatin in water 5 minutes. Beat egg yolks and add ½ cup sugar, orange juice, lemon juice and salt. Cook over boiling water until of custard consistency. Add grated orange rind and softened gelatin and stir thoroughly. Cool. When mixture begins to thicken fold in stiffly beaten egg whites to which remaining ½ cup of sugar has been added. Fill pastry shell and chill. Spread with whipped cream topping. Makes 1 (9-inch) pie.

You can obtain "250 Superb Pies and Pastries" as well as the first four books of the series, Snacks, Leftovers, Cakes and Poultry for only 25c each with a coupon clipped from page 2 of any issue of the Examiner at the Examiner Office or your Examined Carrier or at Braund's Food Markets. If you would rather send 30c a book (5c additional for postage and handling) together with the coupons to Cookbook Department, care of the Examiner.

Height Governs Hat Styles In Paris Picture

By DOROTHY WADDINGTON

PARIS—(Reuters)—The Paris millinery picture, as sketched in collections now showing, has two outstanding trends.

First, for the small girl, there are many variations of high crowns to add inches to the silhouette.

And the tall girl will find her complement in draped turbans which continued on to the shoulder, softly framing one side of the face.

Simplicity of line is the sign of 1951 millinery. Glamor is introduced with exciting new trimmings. Diamond pins dangle for the centre of Mary Stuart bonnets. Simple velvet berets are [illegible] with good-sized brilliants.

"Corkscrew Buns"

Dior, to give supplementary inches to the small girl, has towering hats for tiny heads with "Corkscrew buns" made of fur, tulle, or even hair, crowning a plain-jane hair-do.

Jacques Fath, whose millinery line is always sensational, tops a slender silhouette with Parson-shovel hats, diminutive derbies and little feather caps trimmed with pale feathers which sweep forward into birds' beaks.

Maud and Mano feature Pixie caps in panne velvet, the old-time stand-by of milliners but the sensation of the new season.

Albouy has new veil treatments, using two layers of fabrics contrasting in color and mesh. A large black veil is worn over a fine flesh-colored mesh which tints the skin.

For after dark, veiling is used lavishly. An aptly named creation called "venice" comprises a simple tricorne with a soft fall of lace draping the shoulders and replacing a wrap.

Rose Valois offers solutions for the girl with "difficult" hair. The first group suggests the North African Chechia, high round cap worn by Zouaves. The Parisian touch is introduced by a side tilt, although the cap still completely covers the hair.

Again from Africa comes another hat inspiration, founded on the Kepi of the Foreign Legion. The woollen scarf falls over the back of the neck and over the shoulders to protect hair from snow or rain storms.

The mediaeval influence is predominant in Paulette's collection. Exaggerated brims in plushy felt, cut at right angles form rectangular picture hats for winter wear. The felts are dyed in jewel tones set off with black binding.

Police Free 2 Men Questioned In Robbery

TIMMINS, Aug. 15 (CP) —Police Monday released two men after questioning them in connection with the $96,000 gold-bar robbery at Coniaurum Mines Ltd., Aug. 2.

The three gold bars were recovered shortly after the robbery, believed the biggest in Northern Ontario mining history, in the thieves' abandoned getaway car which had burst into flames from the leaky acetylene tank they had used to break into the mine's vault.

Has Difficulty Forming Gov't

BRUSSELS, Aug. 15 (Reuters) —Veteran statesman Paul Van Zeeland's efforts to form a new Belgian government were hampered today in a widening rift in the ranks of his Belgian Catholic Party.

The All-Catholic Cabinet, which saw its efforts to restore King Leopold to the throne crumble in bloody disorders, resigned last Friday. Three hours after Parliament handed the royal powers to Leopold's 19-year-old son, Prince Baudouin.

Baudouin, now Belgian Regent, caled on Van Zeeland to form a government on Sunday.

Today, as Belgians flocked to the coast in the blazing sunshine of the Assumption Day holiday, he faced growing dissension in his own party.

The extremely pro-Leopold Flemish wing of the party was dissatisfied with Catholic leaders for allowing King Leopold to be set aside.

Van Zeeland, according to the political circles here, has been urged to "water down" his proposed list of ministers with elements from the more moderate wing of the party.

Police Remove Car Blockade

HAMILTON, Aug. 15 (CP). — Police today removed a car-blockade set up Monday night at the city dump by striking civic employees.

The roadblock was established by a ruse in order to prevent private citizens dumping garbage.

Nineteen cars manned by the strikers drove up to the picket line and edged through, accompanied by the jeers and catcalls of the strikers. Police on duty thought the cars were being driven by private citizens attempting to dump their garbage and made no attempt to halt them.

When the cars were through, they stopped, blocking the road for further traffic. A police towtruck removed them this morning.

As the strike of some 1,000 city employees for better wages and hours entered its seventh day, picketing continued at the dump without violence. The workers, who include gravediggers, garbage colectors, and other "outside workers," are demanding an increase of 10 cents an hour. City officials and union representatives are scheduled to meet with members of the Ontario Labor Board in Toronto today.

Lodges Observe Decoration Day

HAVELOCK, Aug. 15 (ENS)— Royal Lodge IOOF No. 286, together with Dorcas Rebekah Lodge No. 98, held their annual decoration day service at Maple Grove cemetery on Sunday afternoon. The Havelock pipe band, under the direction of Pipe Major Harry Anderson, headed the parade from the hall to the cemetery.

The impressive Lodge ritual was carried through by the chaplain, H. F. McNichol, who officiated as master of ceremonies, and was assisted by A. Holland, NG, and Robert Sayers, secretary.

The Rebekah ceremony was conducted by Mrs. George Kennedy, NG, and Mrs. William Rice, secretary. The Rev. F. R. Vanderburgh was the guest speaker.

In the parade were Cantons from Cobourg, Trenton and Peterborough. Other visitors were present from Campbellford and Peterborough.

Self-Serve Laundry Opens In Peterboro'

Peterborough's only self-serve laundry will open its doors to the public on August 17. The Kawartha Laundry Automat has been operating under the owner-manager, Hugh Jung, since last February as a laundry service. However, with its reopening on Thursday, Mr. Jung is introducing self-service for his customers.

Five new Bendix machines have been added to the ten that were already installed. An extractor, which will dry clothes ready for ironing, and three new dryers have been installed.

The laundry has also undergone an interior face-lifting. The walls have been painted blue-green. A new white Ten-Test ceiling has been added as well as a marboleum floor.

Customers will be provided with comfortable chairs while their washing is in the machines, or they may spend the interval shopping. A week's washing will take only 30 minutes.

The laundry will be open from 8.30 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily, except Wednesday and Saturday. The hours for Wednesday are 8.30 to 12.30 p.m., and Saturday, 8.30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Ex-Union Director Files $10,000 Writ

SYDNEY, N. S., Aug. 15 (CP). —C. B. (Jim) Wade, former research director for district 26 United Mine Workers (CCL) filed a writ today against Freeman Jenkins, district president, claiming $10,000 for wrongful dismissal.

The writ, filed by counsel W. A. D. Gunn on behalf of Mr. Wade, also claims $700 in back wages from both Mr. Jenkins and Adam Scott, district secretary-treasurer.

Wade was fired late in May by Jenkins who Wade claimed, told him he was through and then padlocked his office.

The writ requests two months' salary—at $350 a month—and $10,000 for wrongful dismissal. The case will be heard at the October civil term of Supreme Court. It will be a non-jury hearing.

There was no immediate comment from the union chief. At the time of Wade's dismissal, Jenkins said the union had embarked on a campaign to eliminate Communist influence.

Hide Hungarian Crown In Old Oil Drum

By PAUL MOCSANYI

The day Germany surrendered to the Allies in Reims, France, a Hungarian army colonel, accompanied by 12 of his men, stepped into the offices of the Seventh Army interrogation centre at Augsburg, Germany.

The men carried a heavy, ancient iron box. The colonel said it contained the crown of St. Stefan and other royal insignia of Hungary. The crown is the one which five years later figured in speculation over relations between the United States and Hungary.

Maj. Paul Kubala, who was in charge of the interrogation centre, wanted to open the box at once. That was not possible, the colonel explained, because he had none of the three keys. He said he had distributed them earlier among three persons but the three had disappeared.

One Key Found

Maj. Kubala was annoyed. He wanted to remain with the box because he said he was its official custodian. He referred the matter to the American G-2.

It took G-2 two-and-a-half months to find one key. The moment the major turned it in the lock was a solemn one. The cover was lifted. The box was empty. Maj. Kubala gave the Hungarian colonel a hard look and harder words.

The Hungarian remained unperturbed. He said he knew all the time that the box was empty, for it was he who had removed the crown before bringing the box to the American headquarters. He asserted that he had buried the crown with the other royal insignia "according to instructions." Then he volunteered to fetch them.

Treasure Recovered

Maj. Kubala was on his guard. He ordered the Hungarians to remain at headquarters until he contacted the G-2. He tried but failed. Then he put the whole thing off until the next day.

Not so the Hungarians. During the night they sneaked out from headquarters. Next day they were back with a mud-covered gasoline drum. It looked even more suspicious than the iron box.

When it was chiseled open and the cover of three leather-covered boxes lifted, there appeared, covered with mud and dirt, the insignia of Hungarian royalty; the crown, the scepter and the Holy Apple. They had to be washed and cleaned of the German soil that stuck to them.

Taken To Frankfurt

The three symbols of royal power were packed in the towels of the acting American commanding general, put in a box and sealed with wax bearing the impression of dog tags.

Then they were taken to the Reichsbank in Frankfurt and from there, later on, to Wiesbaden pending their return to Hungary.

The story is told, with other tales of art underground during World War II, by James J. Rorimer, former monuments, fine arts and archives officer with the 7th Army in Germany in his book "Survival, the Salvage and Protection of Art in War" (Abelard Press).

England Loses Two Wickets

LONDON, Aug. 15 (Reuters).— England this morning lost two wickets in bringing its overnight first-innings score of 29 for none to 120 by lunch in the fourth and final test cricket match against the West Indies at the Oval here.

They are facing a West Indies score of 503.

Only eight runs had been added this morning when Reginald Simpson hit a long hop from Valentine into Jones' hands at square leg to be sent back for 30.

Len Hutton, joined by Dave Sheppard, showed he was in no mood to allow the bowlers to dictate the run of play, and scored rapidly, with crisp cover drives his main strokes. He had brought his score to 69 when the last ball before lunch saw the dismissal of his partner.

Hutton took a single, leaving Sheppard to face the last ball. Sheppard failed to get on top of a yorker from Ramadhin and was bowled for 11, and two England wickets were down for 120.

Dr. Waksman Given U of T Fellowship

TORONTO, Aug. 15 (CP). — Dr. Selman A. Waksman, head of the Department of Soil Microbiology at Rutgers University, has been awarded the Charles Mickle Fellowship for 1950 for his work on the discovery and isolation of streptomycin, president Sidney Smith of the University of Toronto announced today.

The fellowship, worth $900, is awarded annually to the person considered by the council of Toronto's faculty of medicine to have done the most in the preceding 10 years to advance practical knowledge in medicine.

Here and There In Sport

By The Canadian Press

President Conn Smythe, of Toronto's Hockey Maple Leafs, announced Monday 63 players will report to the fall training camps of the Leafs and Pittsburgh Hornets Sept. 17.

The National Hockey League Leafs will work out at St. Catharines, with a roster of 30 players. The list includes all last year's team with the exception of defenceman Garth Boesch, who has retired.

Hornets, Leafs' American League farm club, will train in Niagara Falls, Ont. Smythe said 33 players had been assigned Hornets.

The Toronto club's annual pre-training camp hockey school will be dispensed with this year. Reason given was raising of the age limit for signing players to a C form to 18.

The Leaf training camp will be under the supervision of Joe Primeau, former Leaf centre star, who was appointed to succeed former coach Hap Day after the close of last season. Day was raised to the post of manager.

Walter (Babe) Pratt, large, amiable playing coach of New Westminster Royals, Pacific Coast Hockey League champions, Monday terminated a short career as a boxing promoter.

Pratt bowed to an ultimatum from Royals' boss Ken MacKenzie who told the big defenceman last week that he must make his choice between hockey and boxing.

Pratt and Gene Mason staged a successful card Aug. 1 at Nearby New Westminster. It was Pratt's only promotional job.

Baltimore Orioles Monday announced they are ending a working agreement on players with St. Louis Browns and taking up instead with Philadelphia Phillies.

Jack Dunn, president of the International League team, said the move becomes effective at the close of this season.

Under the St. Louis agreement of the last two years, Baltimore was supposed to have first call on any player to be disposed of by the major league team. St. Louis, in turn, had the privilege of buying at the end of the season for $10,000 each and two eligible Orioles.

Dunn said a contributing factor toward the termination of the agreement was the Brown's desire to make it more limited next year.

Baltimore will replace Toronto Maple Leafs, another International League team, as the Phils' only triple-A affiliate. Terms of the agreement were not disclosed by Dunn.

Ford Frick ruled out Monday the protest of New York Giants over Saturday's wild game with Philadelphia Phillies, and told Leo Durocher to curb the antics of Eddie Stanky.

Manager Durocher played the game under protest after Stanky was thrown out for jumping up and down and waving his arms to distract Andy Semjonek, who was at bat. The Phillies won 5-4 in 11 innings.

The "Stanky manoeuvre" may result in a new rule being written for baseball, said Charlie Segar of the National League Service Bureau, in explaining the action of Frick, the league president. No rule now covers it, but it won't be allowed any more anyway.

Barrie Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association's junior A loop will be doing business at the same old stand this winter.

Club officials and the executive of the Barrie Arena, at odds over next season's rental, reached an agreement Sunday, ending a threat by coach Hap Emms to find another home for his club.

Emms also announced inauguration of a minor-league farm system including juvenile, midget, bantam and peewee clubs, to be operated at Barrie as a source of playing material for the Flyers. Jack Dyte, former defenceman with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, will head the system.

Five top juniors, to be picked from any Ontario club, will help the provincial junior A champions in their effort to regain the Minto Cup and the Canadian junior lacrosse title, Chuck Rowan, secretary of the Ontario Lacrosse Association, announced Monday.

A team of British Columbia all-stars lost only one game in five to St. Catharines juniors in winning the cup last season. This year's finals will be held in British Columbia late next month.

Cobourg Triumphs

COBOURG, Aug. 15 (ENS) — Defeating Lindsay by the score of 6-1, Cobourg Tennis Club guaranteed themselves second place and a berth in the playoffs of the Kawartha Tennis League. The match wound up the schedule as far as Cobourg and Lindsay were concerned. Cobourg took the ladies' singles, both men's doubles matches and also the mixed doubles and ladies' doubles. Lindsay defaulted one mixed doubles.

By C. H. IRESON

In an exhibition cricket match yesterday at Oshawa, the Peterborough-Whitaker Club won by 104 to 75. Thanks to another fine inning of 52 not out by F. Booth and help from E. Collins 14, and R. Plan A Failure Official Claims

NEW YORK, Aug. 15—(AP)—A vice-president of the United Automobile Workers' Union (CIO) Monday called the Marshall Plan in Europe "a miserable failure to date as far as the common man is concerned."

John W. Livingston, head of a 12-man UAW-CIO group just back from a six-week tour of Western Europe, told a press conference that the union delegates still were in favor of the Marshall Plan.

But the way it's moving now, he added, is benefitting profit-greedy factory owners instead of the workers in the plants.

Unless living conditions improve for the lower-income groups in France, Italy and Western Germany, Livingston said Russia may take over the industries that American money has built.

Expect Alberta Oil Line To Stretch 1,200 Before Fall

By JACK SCOTT

GRETNA, Man.—Imperial Oil Co., which you may have heard about, is laying a pipeline from the Alberta oil fields to Lake Superior, and invited a bunch of us down here to see how they're getting along.

It was a gamble for Imperial. Most of us were daily newspapermen or weekly editors, and thus keen students and critics of all forms of construction. I've yet to meet a newspaperman who could decently put together a set of alphabetical blocks or one who didn't feel qualified to dispute the technique of any large dam, bridge or skyscraper.

As it was, Imperial came off very well, mainly because this is a romantic, dramatic construction job employing some of the most fantastic Rube Goldberg machines extant, and also enough Texans and Oklahomans to delight any spectator. The joy of listening to a gigantic, sun-cured Texan explain his welding technique ("Fust, yuh got yuh stringah-beat, yuh hot pass and yuh weld on the insaid from the outsaid, etc.") was worth the trip alone.

Imperial was wise enough, too, to provide some public relations men with the kind of figures newspapermen adore. We learned that merely to fill the pipeline will require 64,330,000 gallons of oil, or enough to supply the whole of Canada for six days. If it was gas it would drive a car 46,300 times around the earth. Steel in the pipe would make two and a half ships the size of the Queen Elizabeth.

Filled with these splendid figures plus enough Scotch to fill two and a half bathtubs and a filet mignon apiece, we all agreed that it was a fine ditch.

The Ditcher

What Imperial is hoping to complete before winter is a steel pipe something like 1,200 miles from Edmonton to Superior, Wis. The crude oil from the Leduc field and the newer Redwater field (where we recently met the fabulous Mulligan clan) will be pumped under the prairie to the lakehead and tankers.

Some of it will be dropped off at Regina refineries. More will go to a new 10 million buck Imperial plant now under construction at East St. Paul, about eight miles north of Winnipeg. (None of the publicity men knew how East St. Paul was named.)

It was the 75-mile spur line from Gretna, on the Manitoba-North Dakota border, that we were invited to see. It turned out to be well worth seeing. A year from now there'll be nothing visible down that corridor of prairie but the thick, rippling wheat. Now you see a four-foot deep trench and beside it, waiting to be lowered into position, the 10-inch steel pipe, made in bonny Scotland.

This ditch is dug by the most fascinating machine you ever did see. There is a 16-foot front wheel, with fanged scoops all around it, attached to a ponderous sort of tractor. As the tractor thing inches along the great wheel revolves, biting into the soft, stoneless soil and leaving behind a ditch just exactly two feet across and so straight and clean and tidy that someone is bound to exclaim, "Like a knife through butter!" I was just nosed out for this honor by a Mr. Martin from the Country Guide.

Those scoops not only chew into the soil like an angry terrier, but carry the ride up to dump it neatly on the left hand side of the ditch. Later on, when the pipe is down, a bulldozer can just nose the soil back into the trench.

Before the pipe is interred it goes through an elaborate processing including an operation by one single machine in which hot coal tar enamel is smeared on the 10-inch pipe and layers of fibre glass paper and asphalt-based felt are wrapped like puttees around it. They had a time getting us away from that, I'll tell you.

First Move

Jim Wagner, one of Imperial's representatives, told us it's a good deal more involved than it looks to lay down a pipe-line like this.

After the route is surveyed, for example, each individual farmer must be approached. On the 90 million dollar inter-provincial line this meant interviews with more than 2,000 farmers, one of whom talked from in behind a shotgun.

Imperial compensates for crops fences, timber and livestock and when the line has gone on the farmer may work the land over it as he always did.

Here are some more notes I have if you happen to be interested in pipelines:

The lucky man who operates the mechanical ditcher is "Smitty" Smith, who comes from Broken Bow, Okla., and doesn't seem to realize how envied he is . . . Oil moving through the line makes about 45 miles a day nudged along by pumping stations every 200 miles . . . Airplanes will patrol the route on schedule, looking for oil stains that reveal a leak . . . Imperial doesn't worry about anybody tapping the line. You'd have to have your own refinery to make use of it.

The spur line between Gretna and Winnipeg goes under seven provincial trunk highways, 10 secondary roads and 12 railway lines . . . . First oil is expected in Regina this fall and it will serve not only Imperial's plant, but a CCF government refinery. . . . Company figures it can move its black gold underground at about a third of the cost of freight shipping . . . Choice job of all on the line is that of the gink who simply walks along the pipe with an X-ray listening device that picks up any breaks . . . Most of the key men in the crews—or "spreads"—are veterans of Venezuela, Texas, Peru and other points, some of them making a thousand a month.

Oh, yes. Earth from the trench in which the pipe will be placed would make a pile 100 feet square and more than a mile high.

To Check Output Of Armament

OTTAWA, Aug. 15 (CP)—Canada's ability to produce armaments is going to get a thorough going-over by a new group of armament scouts soon to emerge out of the North Atlantic oranization, it was learned on high authority.

This group, to be linked with the treaty's war production board, will have as its express purpose the appraisal of armament-producing facilities of all 12 member nations of the treaty to find out:

1. The best possible source for certain types of equipment needed by the Atlantic powers, principally in Western Europe.
2. Which countries can produce armaments most efficiently, economically and quickly.

TORONTO, Aug. 15 (CP). — A threatened strike at the small arms plant of the government-owned Canadian Arsenals Ltd., has been postponed until Sept. 8, Silby Barrett, Canadian derictor of the United Mine Workers (CCL) announced Monday night. Earlier, the union had threatened to walk out Wednesday unless it is granted recognition by the management. Under federal labor law, the plant is not subject to the provisions of the Canadian Labor Code.

CANADIAN DESTROYER ATTACKS PORT

Red Troops Flee Wildly After Mass Bombing Flattens Waegwan Front

Pilots Report Small Groups Running In Wild Panic On All Sides; Largest Raid Of War Against 60,000 Men

TOKYO, Aug. 16—(CP)—North Korean troops massed near Waegwan on the Naktong river fighting front were reported running in all directions today after 98 United States B-29 bombers plastered them with more than 850 tons of bombs. Associated Press correspondent Leif Erickson said two observation pilots brought back the reports.

The largest raid of the war struck at an estimated 60,000 Red troops massed for an assault on the Allied east bank of the Naktong river near Waegwan.

The observer pilots said the Reds were crossing back westward over the Naktong and fleeing west and north in small groups ranging from three and four to 15 men in a group.

Maj.-Gen. Earle E. Partridge, U.S. Fifth Air Force commander who flew over the raided area in an observation plane after the big strike, reported he saw a small group of Red soldiers fleeing "in the right direction."

Complete Confusion

Another pilot said the North Koreans he could spot appeared "dazed and demoralized." They appeared to be in a state of "complete confusion."

The pilots noted that the Reds wading back across the Naktong were fleeing from an area that had not been hit by the 8-29s.

The enemy troops took cover when the light observation planes skimmed over the treetops. No shot was fired at them.

Two explosions sent columns of water into the air at the point on the Naktong where the North Koreans had constructed an underwater, Russian - type tank bridge. The bridge also had been used to move Red artillery to the Allied east bank of the Allied river barrier.

The American fliers were unable to tell whether the explosions were from American shells or whether the North Koreans were exploding demolition charges, correspondent Erickson reported.

Fled Without Packs

The pilots said North Koreans fled without their packs or rifles. They were about four miles west of the river when the U.S. airmen spotted them.

Erickson said the pilots had been sent over the river area hunting for seven camouflaged North Korean tanks near the west bank.

Five of the seven tanks were knocked out, they reported, but not as a result of the big B-29 raid.

Cayuga Joins U.K. Frigate In Pouncing On Communist-Held Harbor

2 Vessels Shell Docks And Warehouses Causing Serious Damage, Athabaskan Joins Sister Ship On 2nd Sweep

OTTAWA, Aug. 16—(CP)—Canada's destroyer Cayuga has carried out a successful bombardment of harbor installations of a Communist-held port in South Korea, the Navy announced today. It was the first official report that the three-ship flotilla provided by Canada for the United Nations has fired its guns at enemy positions. They had been on convoy duty. The Navy said the Cayuga, senior ship of the three, joined a British frigate in pouncing on a harbor and blazing away at ships, docks, cranes, warehouses, railway rolling stock and rail terminals and large buildings.

There were no casualties. All targets were either destroyed or seriously damaged.

Join Sweep

Of other activities the Navy made this report:

Recently the Cayuga, under Capt. J. V. Brock of Victoria, was ordered to make a high-speed sweep in the western area to investigate a reported build-up of enemy troops. The Athabaskan, commanded by Cmdr. R. P. Welland, of McCreary, Man., and Victoria, intercepted orders while at sea and without specific instructions, joined her sister ship and assisted in the sweep. Cmdr. Welland was later commended for his initiative in this action.

The Sioux, under Cmdr. Paul D. Taylor of Victoria, and the Athabaskan are at present engaged in screening Royal Navy forces carrying out a blockade patrol off the west coast of Korea.

The Sioux recently completed a trip to Pusan, main U.N. supply port in South Korea, with a high-speed convoy. The Athabaskan has completed three voyages to the same port on similar duties. The Cayuga has carried out two such missions and has spent four days with the west coast blockading forces.

Rail Deadlock May Be Broken In Cabinet Move

OTTAWA, Aug. 16—)CP)—The cabinet went into session at 10.30 a.m. EDT today with its most urgent business the consideration of action to halt the threatened Aug. 22 rail strike.

The meeting, convening with less than six days to go before the strike deadline, was expected to bring a government move of some kind of move aimed at breaking the union-management deadlock.

Cabinet ministers entering the session said the rail situation would be high on the day's agenda. They could not estimate when a decision would be reached.

Labor Minister Gregg was on hand before most of his colleagues. All available ministers were at the session.

No Signs Of Settlement

There were no indications of a settlement from the disputants themselves—the railways and the unions representing 124,000 employees that have scheduled a strike for wage and hours concessions.

The strike, which would paralyze rail transport, was under discussion by cabinet at a session that lasted 4¼ hours Tuesday. The ministers recessed overnight to reach a decision today.

One strong report here was that the eventual decision would be to ask the railways to set a definite date in the future—likely two years from now—for bringing into effect the 40-hour week with unreduced take-home pay sought by the employees.

Recruits Swarm To Join Brigade

OTTAWA, Aug. 16 (CP). — Recruits are coming in faster than ever for the army's special force, defence headquarters reported today.

Tuesday saw another 765 added to its enlistment total to make the over-all number enlisted in the first seven days 3,792. In addition, another 885 are in the process of being attested, meaning that the force now has roughly 4,600 men.

There never has been any official public estimate of the size of the brigade group that will fight aggression in Korea or elsewhere, but it is expected to run to around 5,000 men.

However, Defence Minister Claxton said Tuesday night it will recruit beyond its own immediate requirements so as to guarantee reinforcements.

Creamery Thieves Fail To Crack Vault

MILVERTON, Aug. 16 (CP)—Thieves failed in an attempt on Tuesday night or early today to crack open an old bank vault in Milverton Creamery. The safe contained from $400 to $500.

The combination and handle of the vault were broken off and a four by eight inch hole was drilled in the side of the vault.

Coincident with the robbery attempt was a report that the CPR toolhouse here had been broken into some time during the night and a sledgehammer and two crow bars stolen.

Allow 10% Increase In UK Meat Ration

LONDON, Aug. 16 — (AP). — The Food Ministry announced on Tuesday night a 10 per cent increase in the size of Britain's fresh meat ration. Effective August 27, each person will be entitled to one shilling and sixpence (about 24 cents) worth a week. The present ration is one shilling and fourpence.

France Presses U.S. Officials Promise Troops

PARIS, Aug. 16 (AP).—United States officials in France are pressing Washington for a solid promise of aid to Europe in the form of United States troops to build up sagging West European spirits. Their proposals are double-barrelled:

1. The United States should deliver at once, or promise to deliver quickly, at least five more divisions on European soil.

2. A commander, preferably American, should be appointed to unify present undirected efforts at rearmament.

The same officials believe Britain also should agree, now, to send five more divisions to Germany or Northern France.

The crisis in Korea has brought the American position in France to a low point. The first blush of gratification at American intervention in Korea has been succeeded by a wave of dismay at U.S. reverses.

The French long have expected the strength of American arms—especially the atom bomb—to give them time to get well from the last war, and to rearm.

No Such Reaction

Americans newly-arrived on this side of the Atlantic report that the defeats in Korea have hardened American determination to rearm and, if necessary, to be ready for a showdown with Russia.

There has been no such reaction in France. Top French government officials are facing the problem to a degree that generally is pleasing to American observers. But a sampling of sentiment among the French population, brings no such responses.

Lost Plane Safe In Arctic

WINNIPEG, Aug. 16—(CP)—An R.C.A.F. plane, missing two days in the far north with four men aboard, has been located safe at Cape Smith on the east coast of Hudson Bay. Superintendent E. H. Terlson said today: "Everything is okay—they just came down to sit out bad weather." R.C.A.F. headquarters said the police aircraft was located by a four-engined Lancaster bomber which took off early today from Coral Harbor to start a search.

"The Lancaster has reported that the plane appears undamaged and that the men were seen walking around," said an R.C.A.F. epokesman.

"We are trying to make radio contact. If we don't, a Canso from Coral Harbor will land at Cape Smith to confirm that all is well."

Coral Harbor is on Southampton Island which is at the north end of Hudson Bay.

Planes Split Up

RCAF headquarters here said a Canso flying boat and Lancaster bomber took off shortly after 5 a.m. CDT from Coral Harbor, on Southampton Island at the northern end of the bay.

One plane was to fly east to Cape Smith, then turn due south to Port Harrison where the missing RCMP amphibian was headed when it disappeared. That route is entirely over water.

The other was to go to Cape Smith, then follow the indented Hudson Bay shoreline to Port Harrison.

Names of the four policemen aboard the missing aircraft were not announced by the RCMP here. They were on a routine flight from Coral Harbor to Port Harrison and had fuel for 4½ hours. Flying time normally is about three hours and 20 minutes.

Assistant Commissioner J. D. Bird said last night the Grumman Goose probably had landed on the bay at Povungnituk or Point Smith, north of Port Harrison, to await better weather. He said bad weather probably had cut off wireless messages from the plane.

UK Labor Party Delegates Battle European Army Plan

STRASBOURG, Aug. 16—(AP)—Delegates representing Britain's ruling Labor party battled today to block European assembly action on Winston Churchill's proposal for a European Army. Led by James Callaghan, Labor member of parliament, they enlisted Scandinavian support in the Assembly sub-committee on security.

Callaghan threatened to walk out Tuesday night after it voted seven to six, with one abstention, to take action on Army proposal.

The sub-committee's stormy session was marked by bitter clashes. Callaghan and representatives of Norway, Sweden and Iceland contended the European Consultative Assembly has no right to act.

E. De La Valle Poussin, Belgian member of the sub-committee, angrily reminded Callaghan and the Scandinavians that the question already had been decided by the full 125-member assembly last Friday when it approved Churchill's motion by a vote of 89 to 5, with 27 abstentions.

The whole dispute went today to the assembly's committee on general affairs, headed by former French premier Georges Bidault.

The security sub-committee was deadlocked 6-6 on its first vote on the proposal. Chairman Leon Maccas of Greece then cast an affirmative ballot to break the deadlock.

The sub-committee's vote was on a formal proposal by Conservative Duncan Sandys, Churchill's son-in-law, to take immediate action on the proposal to create a European army and European defence ministry.

4 Servicemen Under Arrest

PEMBROKE, Aug. 16 (CP). — Three airmen from the Rivers, Man., station and one army officer have been arrested in connection with a bomb explosion which injured three children at nearby Petawawa last weekend.

The men are LAC. Gordon Hunt, LAC. Albert J Peters, and LAC. Willard E. Pyett, all from the Rivers station, and Capt. Joe Liston of Petawawa military camp. Authorities said the four will be charged with criminal negligence and theft.

The servicemen were taken into custody Tuesday and bail was set at $500 cash or $1,000 property.

Crown Attorney H. B. Johnson of Pembroke, said the charges follow an intense investigation by Ontario Provincial Police, after army authorities turned the case over to them.

The explosion of a smoke grenade resulted in injuries to Donald McKay, 6, of Toronto, John Binkley, 5, of Winnipeg and Derek Binkley, his cousin.

The children found the bomb Saturday while playing at Petawawa Point—outside the camp grounds—after what was reported to be an outdoor party the night before.

Duke Of Edinburgh Made Lt. Commander

LONDON, Aug. 16 (Reuters)—Promotion of the Duke of Edinburgh, from lieutenant to lieutenant-commander in the Royal Navy, was published in the official London Gazette on Tuesday a few hours after the birth of his daughter, Princess Elizabeth's second child.

The duke, a regular naval officer, is 29. His promotion, which dates from July 16, is normal after eight years of service as a lieutenant.

Moves To End War

STRASBOURG, France, Aug. 16. — Reuters). — France today moved to end the technical state of war with Germany. French delegate Jacques Bardoux put a resolution before the European assembly calling on the committee of foreign ministers of the council of Europe to draw up a peace treaty between the western powers and the German republic. The resolution will go to the assembly's general affairs committee.

Strike Means Drastic Cut In Mail Service

OTTAWA, Aug. 16 — (CP) — "Drastic" curtailment of mail service will take place in Canada if the threatening Aug. 22 railway strike develops, the Post Office department announced today.

The emergency will make it necessary to place an embargo on parcel post, newspapers and other printed matter, the department said.

These classes of mail may not be accepted "several days" prior to the effective date of the strike in cases where delivery to the public cannot be assured by Aug. 22.

No immediate restrictions on local mail service are being planned, but the department emphasized that the strike would mean limitations in service to out-of-town points to these types:

1. Letters in ordinary form.
2. Mail prepaid at air mail rates.
3. Medicines, including analyses, specimens and other similar items prepaid at normal rates.

These restrictions will be the "minimum" expectable if the strike materializes, the department said. Further reductions may be imposed as transportation facilities become snarled.

The department made the announcement as the cabinet took the matter of the rail wage dispute and possible government intervention under detailed consideration.

Second Youth DiesOnMountain

LONE PINE, Calif., Aug. 16 — (AP)—The body of 17-year-old Christopher Smith Reynolds, tobacco heir and only son of singer Libby Holman, was found Tuesday on Mt. Whitney at a spot 300 feet from the summit of the highest mountain in the United States.

The body was lowered to the 11,500-foot level by ropes. There it must rest until a sheriff's posse can remove it from the rugged slopes today.

Shortly before word of the discovery was received here, an informant said the body of the second youth to die in the ill-fated climb was found by mountain hikers, and searchers of the U.S. Air Force rescue squad from Hamilton Field.

The body of Wasserman, son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Wasserman, wealthy Philadelphians, was found in a crevasse at the 11,500-foot level of the 14,496-foot Mt. Whitney.

Unable To Break Deadlock Garbage Strike Continues

HAMILTON, Aug. 16—(CP)—Another week of steadily-mounting piles of garbage is the prospect facing Hamilton's 190,000 residents today following breakdown of talks between the city and representatives of striking Local 5 of the Hamilton Civic Employees' Union (CCL).

The two parties met in Hamilton Tuesday with the Ontario Labor Department in an attempt to reach a settlement in the seven-day strike. They remained deadlocked on the union's demands for higher wages and shorter hours.

William Patterson, president of the union local, said after the meeting the breakdown meant at least another week before the strike could be ended.

"It's a deadlock now," Patterson said. "The city broke off negotiations. They walked out of the conference first after we made our counter-proposal."

Mayor Lloyd Jackson said the city made "a generous offer" yesterday in an attempt at settlement. He said the city gave the union specific dates for inauguration of a 40-hour week, and also a cost-of-living bonus.

It was understood the city offered to inaugurate a 42-hour week next January, with a 40-hour week in January 1952 and an immediate wage boost of $1 a week.

On the picket lines, two pickets at the east city dump were struck by the fender of a private automobile as it drove through their lines to dispose of garbage.

BlamePassenger In Manslaughter

HAMILTON, Aug 16 (CP) — In an unusual twist of legal procedure, a passenger in a car involved in a traffic fatality has been charged with manslaughter.

Raphael Pawlina, 21, of Fruitland, appeared before Magistrate Beamer W. Hopkins today on the charge and was remanded until Aug. 23. Pawlina is the owner of a car which struck and killed a bicyclist last May 20

Driver of the car, Henry Marshalek, was charged with manslaughter immediately following the fatal mishap and has already been committed for trial.

It is understood that Harvey F. McCulloch, crown attorney, instructed that the charge be laid against Pawlina because there was evidence that he, as owner of the car, should have had control over the driver of the vehicle.

Constables Prisoners In Own Black Maria

WINDSOR, Aug. 16 (CP)—Two Windsor constables were prisoners in their own black maria for a short while Tuesday until they could identify themselves to pedestrians.

Constables Abe Hodges and Paul Morris, arresting a drunk and quarrelsome man, loaded him into the wagon and were attempting to handcuff him when the rear door slammed shut. It could be opened only from the outside.

A pedestrian, called over to help, refused to open the door until the officers produced credentials.

Polish Ship Bringing Back US Stowaway, Plane Pilot

SOUTHAMPTON, Aug. 16 — (CP). — A man who boarded the Polish liner Batory from a seaplane and another who stowed away before the ship sailed from New York will be returned to the United States aboard the Batory August 30.

The two are William Jesse Newton, 26, of New York, and Howard Campbell, 29-year-old stowaway from Des Moines, Iowa.

Newton was taken aboard in the Atlantic Ocean about 100 miles off New York when he landed his seaplane alongside the ship August 8.

Capt. Jan Cwiklinski said the flier told him he lost his way and was almost out of gasoline.

"There was not quite half a gallon of gasoline in the plane's tank," the captain said.

Both men are being held by British authorities. Newton's plane, which the Batory salvaged, was hoisted to the pier.

Cwiklinski denied there was any mystery about Newton, whose small rented aircraft began circling over the Batory about six hours after she had left New York.

"My job as a sea captain is to save life whenever I can," Cwiklinski added. "I would do the same thing a hundred times over if it was necessary."

"We asked him why he came down by the Batory instead of a freighter which was three miles away. His reply was that he thought he would make a crash landing and he knew there would be a doctor aboard a passenger ship."

A Man Just Isn't Safe GI Takes To Helmet

A U.S. AIR BASE IN JAPAN, Aug. 16 (AP).—All the other airmen and mechanics around here wear those jaunty baseball-type caps but not Sgt. Robert Higging.

He insists on a regular combat infantryman's helmet.

Several days ago Higging suffered a scalp wound when a can of soup fell out of a bomb-bay. Yesterday a bolt from a bomb hoist landed on his head

"No use fighting fate," cracked Higging. "I think my head is magnetic."

Alcohol Plant Destroyed By Flames

Combustion Explosion In Grain Warehouse Blamed For Blaze

AMHERSTBURG, Ont., Aug 16—(CP)—A three-storey alcohol distilling plant and grain storage warehouse were destroyed in a spectacular explosion and fire which rocked this Essex County community Tuesday night.

Loss was $750,000, spokesmen for the owners, Calvert Distillers Limited, said today in Montreal.

Alex Traeff, plant manager, said he thought the fire was started by an internal combustion explosion in grain stored in the building. The first blast apparently touched off nearly simultaneous explosions in four giant alcohol vats on the third floor, wrecking the roof and third floor walls.

The only two persons near the building at the time of the blast —plant policemen William Clague and maintenance man Earl Renaid —escaped injury.

The blast was felt five miles away, and pieces of the wall and roof were found as far as 300 feet from the building.

Firemen, unable to check the flames, succeeded in saving a nearby bottling building, warehouse and two outdoor tanks filled with alcohol.

Stolen Car Recovered Before Found Missing

A car which had not yet been listed as stolen was recovered by provincial constable Russell Pollard on patrol near Fraserville Tuesday night.

Constable Pollard saw the car apparently abandoned and checked with headquarters in Toronto and learned the car had been stolen in Toronto but the theft had not yet been circularized.

Woman Dies From Wounds

SARNIA, Aug. 16 — (CP) — Florence Helen Anderson, 23, wounded when she was shot in the head with a 12-gauge shotgun Sunday night, died Tuesday in Sarnia Hospital without recovering consciousness.

Her fiance, James Walker Clarke, 25, is in London county jail on a charge of wounding with intent to murder the attractive brunette.

"In all probability charges will be changed to murder," Sarnia township Police Chief Risdale said Tuesday night.

Meanwhile Bruce Stanley, 29, of Strathroy, is in Strathroy Hospital shot through the arm with a .22-rifle bullet. Hospital authorities say Stanley is not in serious condition but is in hysterical state.

It is alleged that Stanley was found lying outside the family home wounded in the arm with a .22 rifle by his side.

Strathroy Police Chief George Tanton said Tuesday night no charges had been laid as yet.

Report Trading Quiet On Toronto Exchange

TORONTO, Aug 16 (CP) — Trading was quiet on the Toronto Stock Exchange today as a few key issues climbed slowly over a broad front. Activity was at a slow pace.

The industrial index reached a 16-year high for the third successive day and the base metal index touched a 13-year high. Volume for the first three hours was 472,000 shares.

Spurts of buying lifted several industrial stocks higher. Kelvinator added $3 at $72 and Ford A was 2½ higher at 51½. Massey Harris was a highlight on the agriculture list gaining ¼ at 29¼. Papers showed strength as Abitibi added ½ at 34½ and International Paper gained 1¼ at 62. Steels brightened after slipping in morning trading. Utilities and liquors posted gains. CPR added ½ at 19¼ and Hiram Walkers added ¾ at 46¼

Base metals pushed ahead slowly as senior producers encountered some resistance. Noranda, Cobalt Lode and Normetal were among those pointing higher.

Golds showed a majority of gains but failed to make much headway. Senior producers lagged with a few exceptions. Giant Yellowknife added 10 cents at $6.50 and Kerr-Addison gained ¼ at 15½. Some juniors were active. Macassa jumped five cents and Chesterville added two cents.

Gain and losses held about even in western oils.

UK Grain Experts Surprised At Canada's Wheat Crop

By SYDNEY GAMPELL

LONDON, Aug. 16 (Reuters)—British grain experts were surprised today by the official estimated size of Canada's wheat and other crops announced Tuesday night.

Some described as "staggering" the estimates of 544,000,000 bushels of wheat, against 367,000,000 last year; 433,000,000 of oats, against 317,000,000; 184,000,000 of barley, against 120,000,000; and 15,000,000 of rye, against 10,000,000.

All agreed that in the face of the world political situation these bumper crops should be a great help.

In normal times, it was said, these figures would have caused a slump in grain prices, especially in view of large crops in European importing countries and the hopes of Australia and Argentina.

But now import demand might be boosted by hoarding and by the desire of such importers as India to accumulate economic and startegic stockpiles if they can be financed.

Must Come Down

Even so, it was thought that the export price of wheat outside the international wheat a'reement must come down to the prices inside it.

With such huge quantities to sell, exporting countries could hardly expect to get anythin' over the agreement price, particularly in dollars.

Hitherto Australia, selling in sterling, has obtained much higher prices from such countries as Japan. Unless sterling remained much more plentiful than Canadian dollars, pressure of Canadian wheat was expected to end this Australian advantage.

After allowing for Canadian home consumption and for an adequate stock in Canada next summer, it was calculated that Canada—if she can find markets —could export during the coming year almost twice as much wheat as last year.

Canada's large crops of oats, barley and other feed grain were expected to have a favorable effect on world meat exports, particularly bacon, next year after Canadian farmers have had time to turn the surplus into meat.

The lack of a "will to fight," such as resulted in the French collapse of 1940, is in evidence again. Many Frenchmen solemnly weigh these alternatives.

Would another war be worse than simply to sit down and wait to be occupied by the Russians? Or would it be better to try to take a neutral course in the hope that Russia would not march into France?

The philosophy of "sit and wait" is widespread in France.

The French appear to have lost confidence in aerial bombardment —even with the atom bomb—as a means of stopping ground forces. The Korean experiences have helped to bring that, and the French continue to remember how long it took the United States to get into the last two wars.

RCAF Announces Expansion Of Fighter Squadrons

OTTAWA, Aug. 16—(CP)—The Chief of the Air Staff said Tuesday night the R.C.A.F. is going to expand its total of regular fighter squadrons "considerably beyond" the five originally approved by Cabinet and disclosed they will be trained and available to fight anywhere.

This statement by Air Marshal W. A. Curtis was the second indication in little more than a week that the government now is looking on the question of peacetime forces in an extra-territorial as well as a national light and not simply as something involving Canada's own frontiers.

The first move was formation of a special Army brigade to fight aggression in Korea or elsewhere to back its obligations to the United Nations or the Atlantic Pact. The second indicates the government intends to have air-power ready for that purpose too.

Air Marshal Curtis went on the air with Defence Minister Claxton to call for thousands of recruits—particularly air crew—to fill the ranks for an air force expansion program that will:

1 See not only a sharp increase in the number of fighter squadrons—there now are two—but formation of "a number of radar units across Canada and the activation of other organizations particularly related to the defence of Canada."

More Coastal Patrol

2 Increase the number of Maritime—coastal patrol and anti-submarine—squadrons in the next year. There now is one.

3. Equip the fighter squadrons with Canadian-made planes—the jet fighters CF-100 and F-86A—as the result "of our determination that the RCAF should not be dependent on outside assistance for the provision of vital aircraft in war."

4. Immediately expand pilot training facilities "to meet our increased requirements and also to help other countries." Canada already is training Atlantic Pact country pilots from Europe and may train more.

5. Speed ground crew training.

6. Increase the number of combat aircraft with reserve squadrons and expand the number of reserve radar units.

7. Possibly open the way for short-service commissions for a limited number of pilots trained in the last war provided they are under 27. They should apply to RCAF headquarters.

The RCAF's main requirement, Air Marshal Curtis said, is "for young men to fly our new airplanes." He added, "If you are physically fit and between the ages of 18 and 24, have junior matriculation or its equivalent and are single you are the man we are looking for."

Red Troops

The airmen said they were unable to find any trace of a Red armored column previously reported partly concealed on the west side of the river.

Where there had been medium heavy anti-aircraft fire in the past, the American fliers encountered no ack-ack late Wednesday.

In the second world war the American air force delivered three similar massive blows but not with B-29s. Smaller four-engine bombers—B-17s and B-24s —were used normally only for strategic bombing of fixed targets —went in low against German infantry division at Salerno and Monte Cassino in Italy and St. Lo in Normandy.

Paralyzing Attacks

At Salerno and St. Lo the attacks paralyzed the Germans to such a degree they were unable to halt the allied infantry attacks that were unleashed soon afterward. Saturation bombing of German parachute troopers at Monte Cassino did not achieve its purpose.

The massive air strike Wednesday was the only big activity reported from the whole Korean war front.

There was a lull in all other sectors.

During Tuesday night the Communists had put a force of two or three battalions across the Naktong at Hyonpong, 12 miles southwest of Taegu, the South Korean Republic's emergency capital.

The fighting slowed in the Red Changnyong bridgenead, 23 miles southwest of Taegu, where the U.S. 24th infantry division has been attacking and fighting off counterattacks.

Interested In Air Blow

But allied commanders were more immediately interested in results of the B-29 blow. They sent American ground patrols into the smoking, blazing area to see the extent of damage.

Smoke clouds and silence shrouded the bombed sector. Villages, enemy equipment and trees crackled in flames hours after the big raid.

The B-29 bombing pattern called for 145 all-purpose 500-pound bombs to be dropped in each square mile of a 26 square mile area. The bomb load was the equivalent of 30,000 rounds of heavy artillery.

Correspondent Erickson reported there was no sound opposite the 1st South Korean division ranged along the banks of the Naktong north of east of Waegwan.

AP correspondents Hal Boyle and William Jorden flew over the enemy area during the B-29 raid.

Evenly Spaced Rows

Jorden went over with the lead formation of B-29s. He said the sticks of 500-pound bombs marched through the trees and gullies and up the neights of the terrain in evenly spaced rows of explosions.

Boyle, riding a transport-observation plane below the B-29s, reported the target area was quickly covered with a thickening pall of smoke and dust.

The bombed area is 7½ miles long and 3½ miles wide.

Neither of the flying AP correspondents was able to see any sign of the North Koreans or their tanks and armored vehicles reported concentrated for the drive down the Waegwan corridor The terrain, wooded and broken by hills, is ideal for concealment.

Fixed Assignments

Each of the 12 B-29 squadrons had a fixed assignment. They swept over at levels ranging from 5,000 to 10,000 feet.

Pilots said not a single anti-aircraft shell was sent up against them. Before the raid the Reds had attempted to protect their buildup area with flak.

A general staff officer at headquarters had said the Red Waegwan offensive kick-off appeared to be "very, very close."

Field reports gave this ground situation late Wednesday:

Two bridgeheads had been established on the allied east side of the Naktong below Taegu.

The biggest was near Changnyong, 23 miles to the southwest. The war-weary U.S. 24th infantry division was trying to contain the 12,000 Communists across the river there. Their attempt to wipe out the Reds was halted by a fierce North Korean counter-attack that carried the enemy to points seven miles beyond the east bank.

The other was about 15 miles north of Changnyong where the Communists had built up a force of about 1,500 men near Hyonpong, 14 miles southwest of Taegue. AP correspondent Don Whitehead reported the Reds established this bridgehead Monday.

Trade Dept. Has Staff Changes

OTTAWA, Aug. 16 (CP) — A shift in Canada's trade representation in the United Kingdom and the United States today was announced by the trade department.

A. E. Bryan of Barrie, Canadian commercial counsellor in London who has been twice round the world on trade duties, will take up new duties as Canadian government trade commissioner in New York City.

Mr. Bryan will succeed M. T. Stewart of Wingham, Ont., who goes to the Canadian embassy in Mexico City as commercial secretary. Mr. Stewart has served in Britain, China, Japan, Panama and Colombia.

The changes, which stem from the recent appointment of D. S. Cole, former commercial counsellor in Mexico, as consul-general in Chicago, become effective in November.

MORE ABOUT—Rail Deadlock

Prime Minister St. Laurent, asked after Tuesday's cabinet meeting if the report were correct, declined to comment on it.

But indications were shaping up that the question of the timing of the 40-hour week might be the remaining major barrier to a settlement.

The unions have asked the 40-hour week with the same pay as 48 hours plus an hourly increase of seven or 10 cents. The railways' "final" offer delivered last week was for a 44-hour week with unreduced pay and a recognition that the 40-hour week should be put in at the "appropriate time" in the future.

Ban Shipments

The crisis was brought sharply into focus today when the Railway Association of Canada announced to all freight and express agents in Canada that the shipment of all livestock and perishable goods will cease at 11:59 p.m. August 17.

From that date, no shipment of such goods will be accepted, the association said.

Of the Cabinet meeting, Mr. St. Laurent said only that "very serious problems" had been under discussion.

Cabinet broke up less than an hour before two major railway and union spokesmen took to the air last night in national radio broadcasts which did not indicate any change in views on either side from their attitudes of last week.

Defend Policies

Donald Gordon, president of the Canadian National Railways, and A. R. Mosher, president of the 30,000-member Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees (CCL), spoke largely in defence of the already-disclosed policies of their organizations.

Mr. Gordon said the railways' "appropriate time" commitment for the 40-hour week was an undertaking to put this into effect when it becomes the normal work week in Canada.

Mr. Mosher, who also is president of the 350,000-member Canadian Congress of Labor, said the "appropriate time" assurance is "not nearly definite enough."

Try To Be Fair

The company head, addressing his message particularly to CNR employees, said if they were aware of the facts of the dispute they would decide at once that strike action was not justified. Railway management had tried honestly and fairly to deal with the union demands.

Full acceptance of the union requests, Mr. Gordon said, would cause "ruinous inflation in the price of everything we eat, drink, wear or use. Freight rates would have to go up 38 per cent to cover annual additional costs of $124,000,000.

"Don't be fooled by higher wages under such conditions," Mr. Gordon said.

Mr. Gordon said the eventual company offer, which would cost $37,000,000 a year to the railways, had gone "far beyond" the recommendations of Federal Conciliation Boards that investigated the dispute.

Done Their Best

"I believe we have done our best," he said. "In the light of these facts, it is unthinkable that a railway strike should take place."

Mr. Mosher said the railway workers he spoke for have been getting less than the average worker in manufacturing, despite an idea that rail workers are highly paid. Also, there have been no improvement in hours of work for railway workers in more than 32 years.

"As far as their hours of work are concerned," he said, "railway workers are just where they were in the horse and buggy days. They don't intend to stay there."

"Railway labor," he said, "suspects that management is seeking to capitalize on our long-standing reputation for fair dealing. And railway labor is convinced that right now is the time to call a halt—the time to say that we don't intend to be second-fiddle citizens for ever."

Mr. Mosher also accused the railways of an "unyielding attitude" and of misrepresenting the union position. He said "'misleading propaganda" by the companies had undermined efforts aimed at peaceful settlement.

In Toronto Mayor Hiram McCallum said today he will ask Board of Control this afternoon to appoint a co-ordinator of essential services and supplies for Toronto, who would act in the event of a national railway strike

He said he will recommend Street Commissioner Harold Bradley, who is familiar with transport problems.

Adjourn Inquest After 3 Bodies Found On Ship

TADOUSSAC, Que., Aug. 16 (CP)—With three passengers listed as dead, Quebec provincial police stood guard today over the burned-out hull of the river cruise ship Quebec, tied up at the wharf of this lower St. Lawrence port.

Because of the charred condition of the bodies, positive identification of the dead posed a problem for investigators. But Canada Steamship Lines, owners of the 7,000-ton Quebec, listed Mr. and Mrs. Norman Shapiro and a son of the town of Mount Royal, Que., as missing. A second son escaped.

The company in a statement listed the missing boy as Bernard. But in this there appeared to be some confusion since a Montreal garage operator Andy Levinson, long-acquainted with the Shapiros, said the rescued lad was eight-year-old Bernard, and that Bernard's six-year-old brother, Leonard, must have been the missing lad aboard the Quebec.

Levinson, queried about the listing of Bernard as missing said: "I drove him up from Murray Bay myself, Bernard was rescued and Leonard burned to death."

The rescued Shapiro boy, when he reached Murray Bay Monday night after the fire with other rescued passengers, told of being handed through a cabin window by his mother.

Found Near Cabin

The charred body of a woman and a child were the object of an inquest Tuesday before District Coroner Roland Hould but the inquiry was adjourned indefinitely due to lack of evidence sufficient to identify the two victims.

The CSL in a statement said that three bodies were recovered.

The announcement that three passengers were dead was made Tuesday after earlier company announcements that all passengers, Canadian and United States holidayers, and crew members had been evacuated safely.

Part of a woman's torso and a section of a child's body were discovered during a search of the cooling wreckage yesterday.

The discovery was made near the spot where B deck cabin 157 —the Shapiros—was located.

Korean War Upsetting World Economic Plans

By ALAN HARVEY.

LONDON, Aug. 16 — (CP). — World War No. 2½, as the Korean conflict has sometimes been called, marks a setback in economic planning in the Western world.

For the first time since the 1939-1945 war ended, the dollar drive of Britain and Western Europe now officially takes second place to defence. The ambitious plans for restoring trade balances and meshing free economies must be discarded, or at best revised.

International events march quickly. Three months ago, in what Canadian officials considered to be a bold step forward, it was decided that Canada and the United States would associate themselves with the organization for European economic co-operation to strengthen economic co-operation between North America and Western Europe.

Welcomed Proposal

Broadly speaking, the idea was another phase in the post-war pattern which has seen the West move closed together to try to handle economic problems as a unit. Canada welcomed the proposal as a possible means of regaining some of the markets lost because of dollar-sterling difficulties.

Thus, with the blessing of Canada and the United States, the OEEC met in June to draw up a four-to-five-year program for Western European recovery. Then along came the war in Korea, and this first attempt to plan beyond the end of Marshall aid went out of the window.

Korea means defence instead of dollars, guns instead of butter, so economic planners will have to start again. Member states which have pledged new rearmament programs in response to a call from the United States, will have to submit revised economic estimates based on increased military spending.

Western rearmament also means particular problems for particular countries. Britain, for instance, will have to decide to what extent the woollen mills of Lancashire and Yorkshire are to be turned over to the production of service uniforms instead of shirts for North America.

Other Worries

Prime Minister Attlee has set Britain's expenditure at £3,400,000,000 ($10,200,000,000). If plants are going to start turning out more military equipment, how can the United Kingdom maintain its engineering exports to Canada; will priorities for export markets be established?

These and other questions undoubtedly remain to be settled. Some outline of what the government has in mind may emerge Thursday when Hugh Gaitskell, as Minister of Economic Affairs, meets representatives of organized labor to explain how rearming will affect industry.

Attlee may fill in other details in a broadcast August 23. Present guesses are that the government will increase the call-up period from 18 months to two years, and increase service pay.

Lieut.-Col. Odell Dies At Cobourg

COBOURG, Aug. 16 (ENS) — One-time commanding officer of the Cobourg Second Heavy Battery and a prominent educationist, Lieut.-Col. J. W. Odell, 84, died Tuesday at his home here. He had been in poor health for several years.

Lieut.-Col. Odell was born at Orono but had lived in Cobourg for more than 40 years. He was in command of the Cobourg Heavy Battery before war broke out in 1914 and took the battery to Vancouver early in 1914. He returned to Cobourg and organized the Second Heavy Battery, CEF and on arrival at Halifax, the unit was joined by details from Montreal, Levee, Quebec, Winnipeg, Halifax, Charlottetown and St. John, New Brunswick.

He took the battery to England, but due to poor health, he had to give up his command and the battery was taken over by Major F. Scully, who took it to France. Lt. Col. Odell was transferred to the reserve pool of officers where his expert artillery knowledge was very valuable.

When he returned to Cobourg after the war, he resumed his duties as mathematics teacher at the Collegiate Institute. After teaching there for 20 years, he became public school inspector, succeeding his brother, Albert, in that position. He retired in 1938.

Lieut.-Col. Odell was a former town councillor and was a member of Trinity United Church. His hobby was fishing. He is survived by his widow, Jessie Dewar. Funeral will be Thursday with burial in Cobourg Union Cemetery.

Thousands of Untested Ontario Drivers

We called attention on Monday to the check being made in British Columbia of all that province's drivers. Every license-holder is being re-tested, and a shockingly large number have already been found unfit to drive. It is a compelling argument in favour of a periodic re-testing of licensed car drivers who, both in B.C. and Ontario, have had only one test made of their technical and physical capacity as drivers, a test made when their first licenses were issued. The situation in Ontario may be even worse than in B.C.

* * *

All car drivers in Ontario who are over the age of 40 and have been driving since they were 19 have never had a driving test in their lives. The reason is that until 1929 no licences were required, except for persons wanting chauffeurs' licenses. In that year all who had been driving got licenses automatically without undergoing tests required now for new drivers. They have had these licenses renewed every year since. One cause of the large number of accidents in this Province is certainly the unskilled, physically unfit licensed drivers, who may not even know how incapable they are. Certainly the licensing officials do not.

Perilous Intervention In Formosa

American policy in the Far East is undergoing a drastic reversal. Until the beginning of this year the U.S. had chosen to put the weight of its defence against Russian communism in Europe and Africa. Arms and money were sent to the Far East but the commitment was limited. Mao over-ran China. Chiang Kai-shek was defeated and his regime discredited. He retired with the remnants of his Nationalist forces to the island of Formosa. By the beginning of this year the United States, for its own purposes, had written off Kai-shek, Formosa and Korea. Now all three are back on the books with the firing of the first shot in Korea. The U.S. intervened immediately. And immediately Formosa (including Chiang Kai-shek) was coupled with Korea, although there has been no convincing statement from the U.S. Department of State of the reasons for doing so.

In a special copyright article elsewhere on this page, the brilliant British analyst of international affairs, Sebastian Haffner, discusses this change of policy in Asia. His point of view is startling to people who can hear nothing but Korean war propaganda. It will shock those who believe that now at long last the U.S. has stopped bungling in Asia, and that Secretary of State Acheson and Defence Secretary Johnson have been impeachably wrong in their earlier policy advice to the President.

As Mr. Haffner points out, the potential enemy Power, Russia and her satellites, threatens Europe and Asia alike. Western Europe is not strong enough to defend itself. The analyst believes that effective defence cannot be produced in anything less than a minimum of two or three years after the present re-armament drive gains momentum. The United States is not capable at this time of splitting its forces successfully between Europe and Asia. "The time may be approaching when a hard and realistic choice has to be made, between the relative importance of preserving France from the Red Army or preserving Indo-China from Ho Chi Minh".

Mr. Haffner insists that the global situation makes a policy of caution and retrenchment, even appeasement, necessary in the non-European world. Specifically, he believes that "it would be a world-strategic blunder of the first magnitude to risk hostilities with China over Formosa at the present moment". The war in Korea was justifiable and unavoidable. To hot up the conflict in Formosa and Indo-China is not.

> "What is really indefensible in the general context of the global shadow war is American action over Formosa—an action which, in historical perspective, may come to be seen as no less catastrophic than the Athenian expedition to Sicily in the midst of the Peloponnesian War in 415 B.C."

There are loopholes in Mr. Haffner's analysis. For instance, if intervention in Korea was "justifiable on grounds of higher world policy," the defence of Formosa could similarly be justified, and also as an important adjunct to the winning of the war in Korea. Mr. Haffner's point of view is European. To him Europe must come first. But others, non-European, may also believe in the prior importance of Europe. Present American policy in the Far East is not by any manner of means inevitably or historically the right one.

The analysis at least serves to recall that Europe as well as Asia is threatened by Russian communism, and that this continent is deeply involved in Europe. This is a reason why The Examiner, in the midst of clamour for a Canadian Korean force, has not been in the first ranks of the Korean clangers. We have several times reminded our readers that Canada's major foreign commitment is in the Atlantic Treaty. Will this country be able to fulfil its obligations as a defender of all North Atlantic countries if it is panicked into Asian war?

1843: Almack's

A stern lesson to advertising copywriters of 1950 appears in the April 22, 1843 issue of The Illustrated London News. The article in queston, whose language leaps disconcertingly from London to Paris, and back again, describes an institution called Almack's. This suite of assembly-rooms (according to the Encyclopedia Britannica) was built by one Macall, or McCaul, in King Street, St. James, in 1765. When the gentleman, an anagram of whose name provides the word "Almack", died in 1781, the rooms were left to his niece, Mrs. Willis. The old "Almack's" ceased to exist in 1863, although a 20th century club has adopted the name.

Equipped with background material (with which the news item was not equipped), we returned to the 1843 periodical, to learn that "to throw wide the door of Almack's was to put the crowning fiat upon the opening of the London season; to be the pet of its patronesses was to bask in the very glow of fashionable sunshine; to be the habitue of the brilliant salons was to be par excellence of the haut monde—to be excluded was to expire on the threshold of ton, or to bury grief in the meaner merriment of less recherche haunts. And so, with somewhat restricted influences, it still holds its reign . . . " And what a reign!

"The series of balls which are given within its splendid rooms . . . are, all badinage apart (the 1843 equivalent of 'No Kidding!'), of most brilliant and recherche order . . . Costume, manners, Terpsichorean pas and graces, galliopade, cotillon, mazourka—all are elegant alike. Exquisite beauty, lively wit, beau-ideal fashion, all sparkle in turn; but the brilliancy is one of repose, dazzling certainly, but full of sang froid and paradoxical, because both animated and nonchalant."

And so this news item goes, on and on, superlatives vying with superlatives, lest one should seem less colorful, less possessed with savoir faire, less glittering like a radiant ruby—but now we're doing it . . .

"Almack's is still most powerful," the item continues, "and where is the reader who does not find some interest at the announcement of its formidable name?"

Here.

Dangerous To Talk About "The Communist Menace"

Lazy or muddle-headed people rely heavily on catch-phrases: they pick them up and bat them around like yo-yo's. Such a phrase now current is "The Communist Menace". The first few people who singled out the phrase probably used it with a pretty clear understanding of what it and they meant. Now it has become a shibboleth, a hack term, and most people thoughtless or lazy enough to use it probably could not define a Communist or say what the menace is.

When a situation as important as that confronting western political democracy is reduced to a glib words and generalized as "Communist Menace" it is time to take stock of ourselves. When a populace slides into such grooves of thought and words, it is in danger of being led by the nose by any tin-pot demagogue who can roll the phrase thunderously. People dependent on "The Communist Menace" and other pat generalizations have stopped thinking, never started, or have become the dupes of propaganda. Communism does menace certain parts of the world and certain forms of government. It is important to know how, where and why. The situation should not be dismissed ten thousand times a day with the phrase "The Communist Menace", said in capital letters and with the mechanical blat of a soap opera signature tune.

Take A Cummerbund With You

By ALAN MOOREHEAD

TWICE within the past few weeks I have travelled from Florence to London, and it has made me wish all over again that someone would write a new guide-book for the embattled British tourist in Europe. It ought to be a special sort of guide, something along the lines of the old Baedekers of fifty years ago, but dealing strictly with the technique of travel itself.

Baedeker around the turn of the century used to say very firmly what was good and what was bad, whom to tip and how much, and he never hesitated to describe a hotel as "unpretending" or "for the poorer sort."

Since then travel may have become faster and more comfortable, but in many ways it is immensely more complicated and harassing. I can see no reason, for example, why passengers should be woken at midnight on the French-Italian border to be submitted to a custom and passport examination; nor yet again why they should be held up for an hour at Dover for the same reason when the inspection could be made just as well in the train on the way up to London.

* * *

As for the question of tipping, utter confusion reigns. Why do you tip the British porter who takes your bags on board at Dover, and the French porter who takes them off at Calais? What do you tip a Wagon-Lit attendant, if at all, and in what currency? At least in Italy there is a regular tariff on porters and it is posted up at the railway stations; but even there this trivial and exasperating battle of wits goes on between the tourist and the people who live off him. The perspiring traveller shuffles an unfamiliar bundle of francs or lire in the crowded corridor; the train is about to go; the porter eyes him with a steady, guarded stare, ready to lift his cap or turn away muttering. In the end the passenger hastily overtips or truculently undertips, but in any case he never gets it exactly right, for he is gripped in the same old tangle of amour-propre and opportunism, and it will all happen over and over again before he reaches his journey's end.

This is where my new guide-book would come in. I would tell the passenger just how much to add to the restaurant bill in Zurich, and I would advise him on how to take a gondola in Venice or a cab in Cairo without having a fierce and embarrassing argument at the end of the journey. I would urge him to avoid Sunday as a day of departure or arrival, and to reject the pleasant room with a view over the quaint old market square (unless he happens to enjoy the noise of motor-cycles and fishmongers all night long). This side of libel, I would like to save him from those hotels where the service is reluctant and the food bad and expensive. And he ought to know where not to change his money.

* * *

WHEN my mother travelled abroad many years ago she always carried with her a special list of articles. It consisted, among other things, a green-lined umbrella, a bottle of smelling salts, a small blind for attaching to uncurtained windows, a flask of brandy (for accidents), a spirit lamp and ingredients for making her own tea, a red flannel cummerbund, and that invaluable Baedeker which assured her that the touts in Marseilles were apt to be insolent and that the water everywhere was undrinkable.

Even now in the fifties that list could hardly be bettered. But I think she enjoyed herself abroad more than we do now despite the malaria and the rough roads and the bandits in Calabria. She had time to dispose of it. She did not post herself like a letter in a roaring aeroplane and emerge unadjusted and unprepared for the strangeness of a new country. She proceeded gently southwards, accustoming herself to the food and the climate and the language, and the journey itself was part of her holiday. She tried to live the life of the country she was visiting, and with the aid of that cummerbund and her special teapot she was seldom ill.

* * *

SHE had, of course, the advantage of living in a limited world that moved slowly. No sudden Korean crisis threw her off her plans, and year in and year out cities remained pretty much what you expected them to be. Now this would be one of the prime objects of my new guide-book for the fifties—to keep track of these changes which constantly keep happening to the tourist centres of Europe, especially since the war. There was a time, soon after Germany was defeated, when Rome was probably the pleasantest city in Europe. Later on Paris abruptly picked it up. It would be agreeable to record now, in 1950, the remarkable change that has overtaken London within the past six months. This perhaps is something which has not been fully evident to Londoners themselves, for it is difficult to keep track of blessings that have been bestowed grudgingly, one by one, over a long period of time, particularly when they are accompanied by a steady rise in prices and an unrelenting taxation.

But the people I have met returning to London after an absence of a year or even less all speak with astonishment of the change they see here. The London of 1949 they remember was a place of clothes and petrol rationing, of half-lit streets, of a galling shortage of cigarettes, drinks, and eatable food. Compared to the Continental cities they claim the atmosphere was listless and dull. But now they say they see the first breath of the pre-war life again. They believe, moreover, that it is still cheaper to live in London than in Paris (where five thousand and ten thousand franc notes are, ominously, about to make their appearance), or Rome (which has been engulfed by the Holy Year), or New York (where prices have bounded to painful heights since the Korean crisis).

* * *

THERE is much else besides that might be got into my little book: such things as how much to get a sleeper at the last moment, how to trap a consul in his consulate when you urgently need a visa, how to speak foreign languages without actually knowing them, and how to gain entry into those galleries and museums on the Continent which are inexplicably shut whenever you arrive. There was, I remember, a little book brought out by Stephen Potter a year or two ago called "Gamesmanship, or The Art of Winning Games Without Actually Cheating." Mr. Potter should be encouraged to produce the guide-book I have in mind, handling the art of travelling in the same way, for it has become an elaborate business now, requiring much skill and resourceful deception. Above all, he ought to convey to his readers that, despite all the timetables and the regimentation, there is still an element of surprise and wonder in going to a foreign country—that sort of wonder which my mother certainly had so many years ago.

I recall her first trip to Paris. She had gone up the Eiffel Tower and through the Louvre. She had been to the Comedie Francaise, visited Versailles, seen a street riot, a balloon ascent, and a bicycle race. After a week of this, marvelling at all she saw, she sat on Saturday afternoon taking an aperitif in a pavement cafe just outside Paris. I sat facing her with by back to the street.

"You know," she said gently, "I shall never really accustom myself to the French. Fancy having a lion walking up and down the street." I digested this for a moment while she went on: "I understand it, of course. It's pretty. But it's so strange."

I turned around then and saw a large lion slowly pacing by over the cobblestones. Later we discovered it was a pet—some relic of the gay eccentricities of the George Moore days on the left bank—and the owner had brought it out in his car for an airing in the country. But I am grateful to my mother for her acceptance of that lion. She had a wonderful gift for taking things and enjoying them as she found them. And quiet nerves.

Dangers Of Intervention In Formosa

American Policy and the Shadow "War"

By Sebastian Haffner, Foremost European Correspondent on International Affairs

AFTER Pearl Harbour, in 1941, America, faced with a two-front war in Asia and Europe, made a clear-cut decision to give the European theatre over-all priority over the Asiatic one. Without this decision, there would have been a dispersion of resources and a dilution of effort which would certainly have made the war far longer and costlier, and which might possibly have lost it for the Allies.

Though Korea, in 1950, has not started a war but only, as it were, a shadow war, it demands a similar clear-cut decision on American over-all strategy. Once more the actual first shot has been fired in the Far East. But once more the potential enemy Power, or coalition of enemy Powers, threatens Europe and Asia alike. Once more America has to face the threat of war on two fronts, and once more she has to give a clear priority to one—and take her losses, however bitter, on the other—unless she is fatally to disperse her energies and risk compromising her position on both.

But in contrast to 1941, there is at present no sign that this is fully realised in Washington. American policy in Asia is incompatible with her policy in Europe. It looks as if U.S. European policy and Asian policy are made in watertight compartments, and as if America's right hand does not know what her left hand is doing.

* * *

IN Europe America is asking her Allies and partners for a large-scale joint rearmament effort with the aim of creating a balance of military power and making Western Europe defensible on land against a possible Russian attack.

It is obvious that the success of this programme depends on three basic requirements:

1. Time;
2. Concentration of European resources on Europe's own defence;
3. Large-scale engagement of American resources in Europe.

The time factor is fundamental. Western Europe, at this moment, has neither the men, nor the arms, nor the military organisation with which to meet a Russian attack. Nor are Western Europe's industries geared for arms production on anything like a sufficient scale. All this is now about to be changed, but the rearmament drive which is about to begin cannot produce an effective defence in anything less than a minimum of two to three years. If the effort is to make sense, it must therefore be accompanied by a policy which tries to buy time—if not at any price, at any rate at some price. The least price to be paid is the avoidance of foreign policies which risk precipitating war now over issues which are less than vital to the survival of the Atlantic Community.

If the present tremendous gap between the military forces threatening Western Europe and the local forces available for its defence is to be filled in the short time of two or three years, it can only be done by freeing European forces to the largest possible extent from outside commitments. The defence of Western Europe would be a quite hopeless proposition if the armies and airforces of the European nations were all engaged overseas. Luckily, Britain and Holland have largely disengaged themselves from threatening or actual wars in the Middle East, India and Indonesia. But the core of the French army still remains tied up in an interminable-looking war in Indochina while the Rhine is virtually undefended. The time may be approaching when a hard and realistic choice has to be made between the relative importance of preserving France from the Red Army or preserving Indochina from Ho Chi Minh.

* * *

EVEN when the bulk of Europe's forces is reassembled in Europe and made available for European defence, it is generally agreed that it cannot do its job of shielding Western Europe from invasion without heavy American arms aid and substantial American reinforcements. The arms and the forces which America will have to invest in European defence may not exhaust her ultimate potential, but they definitely do surpass her immediately available resources. Taking account of the American commitment in Korea and other existing calls on American arms and armed forces, and short of total mobilisation in America (which only actual war would justify), they can be met only if America, for at least one or two years to come, avoids any new commitment elsewhere, which can possibly be avoided without vital injury.

* * *

TO sum up: The inevitable corollary to the European defence effort now to be jointly undertaken by the Atlantic Treaty Powers is a foreign policy of maximum retrenchment—one might even say: of appeasement—in the rest of the world. And "the rest of the world" means primarily the "second front" in the shadow war: Asia.

But American policy in Asia has, inconceivably, just at this moment thrown retrenchment and caution to the winds and, reversing previous decisions, embarked on the offensive.

Forcible American reaction to the open aggression on Korea, even though it constitutes a painful drain on American resources at the present time, was justifiable on grounds of higher world policy and must inevitably be continued now. What is unjustifiable on such grounds is intervention in Formosa. The decision to step up the conflict in Indochina is also of dubious wisdom in the light of the global strategic situation.

It may be a difficult and delicate task to disengage America and France from the existing conflict in Indochina with the least possible loss of face; there might even be a case for intensifying it if there was a real prospect of thereby bringing it to a victorious conclusion quickly—a prospect of which there is, unfortunately, little evidence.

* * *

WHAT is really indefensible in the general context of the global shadow war is American action over Formosa—an action which, in historical perspective, may come to be seen as no less catastrophic than the Athenian expedition to Sicily in the midst of the Peloponnesian war in 415 B.C.

Leaving completely aside the moral and legal aspects of the Formosa question, putting the local strategic importance of Formosa at its highest, and even supposing for argument's sake that the Chinese Government of Mao Tse-tung were an irreconcilable and inappeasable enemy of the West and that General Chian Kai-shek had a real chance of reconquering China and re-establishing his authority there if sufficiently aided by America, it would still be a world-strategic blunder of the first magnitude to risk hostilities with China over Formosa and in the present situation. It would even then be exactly the same mistake which America would have committed if she had, in 1941, after Pearl Harbour, squandered her insufficient existing arms and armies in local actions in the Pacific, and in the meantime allowed Hitler to finish off Russia and invade Britain.

By putting a chip on her shoulder in Formosa, America is giving Mao—and possibly Mao's Allies in the Kremlin—a blank cheque to force her into exactly that position every day that it suits him, or them. She puts it into his hands to force war on America now and thereby to cut off the time needed for Atlantic rearmament; she commits her as yet unmobolised resources in advance to the, strategically less important world front, denuding the decisive European front; she sets Russia free in Europe at any time to be chosen by Mao; incidentally, she makes Communism a present of the sympathies of the non-Communist Asian nations, some 600 millions of people.

No effort should be spared, and no time lost, to end this highly perilous and completely superfluous state of affairs.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken. But there the glorious Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams; wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ship pass thereby.

For the Lord is our judge, the Lord is our lawgiver, the Lord is our king; he will save us. (Isa. 33: 20-22.)

* * *

Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear: but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear....

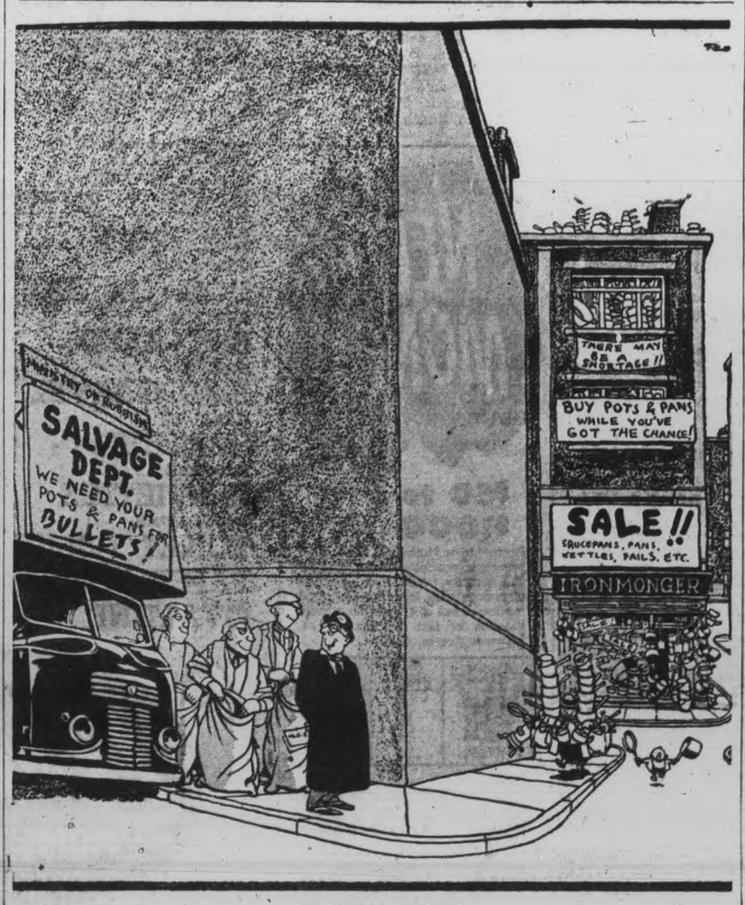
And he saw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor: therefore his arm brought salvation unto him; and his righteousness, it sustained him. For he put on righteousness as a breastplate, and an helmet of salvation upon his head; and he put on the garments of vengeance for clothing, and was clad with zeal as a cloak . .

So shall they fear the name of the Lord from the west, and his glory from the rising of the sun. When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him. And the redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord.

As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord; My spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever. (Isa. 59: 1, 2, 16, 17, 19-21.)

* * *

All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee. For the kingdom is the Lord's: and he is the governor among the nations. (Ps. 22: 27, 28.)



"READY, MEN"

LET'S STOP THIS RAILWAY STRIKE!

A strike on Canada's railways would be, at any time, a tragedy. Today, as we prepare to meet the threat of expanding military aggression, such a strike would mean national disaster.

The Boards of Conciliation, which reviewed in detail all the facts of the dispute, said in their report:

"It is our firm opinion that the recommendations herein contained embody the utmost in the way of concessions which the railways ought to grant at this time."

Yet, the railways offered the unions concerned in this dispute a settlement far more generous than the Boards' recommendations.

HERE IS WHAT WE HAVE DONE

Our offer, which we published in detail, included these benefits for our employees:

(1) A shorter work week for the great majority, with no loss of pay
OR (if the unions prefer)
A substantial increase in "take home" pay.
These higher hourly rates would result in higher overtime rates.

(2) Acknowledgement by the railways of a moral obligation to put the 5-day 40-hour week into effect at the appropriate time. The Board of Conciliation said this: "The 40-hour week is not in Canada, as it is in the United States, the normal work week. On the contrary, the evidence before the Board indicates that the 40-hour week is very rare in Canadian industry."

(3) Separate consideration to be given the claims of hotel and water transport employees on merit.

WHEN APPLIED TO ALL EMPLOYEES, THESE BENEFITS WOULD COST THE RAILWAYS APPROXIMATELY $37,000,000 A YEAR

THE TIME IS NOW!

The welfare of every Canadian is involved in this critical dispute. The Board of Conciliation said: "In the consideration of increases of this magnitude in railway wage scales there is, besides the employers and the employees who conduct the negotiations, a third party, unheard at the council tables, whose rights must be weighed — the ordinary Canadian citizen." Let's stop this railway strike NOW! The time to do this is not at the eleventh hour, or after a strike begins. The time is NOW!

East City and UEW Tied Up In Men's Loop Semi-Finals

Splitting evenly last night at the Bowl in their City Softball League doubleheader, UEW and East City again knotted up the best-of-seven semi-finals. East City won the first game 8-3 while UEW took the nightcap 6-3 before a big crowd to make it three wins each. Both were snappy encounters and full of excitement. The deciding game will be played tomorrow night at 8:15, the winner taking on Mutuals next week for the city championship and the Taylor Trophy.

The initial encounter saw East City strike hard and early and then protect their lead with errorless ball behind good flinging by Terry Woods and nice relief work in the eighth by Lefty Doris. Reg. Gordon also pitched steady ball for the losers but two homers by Red Sullivan and one each by Scriver and Wade along with Wade's double and Cornwall's two bagger made the difference. Sullivan had three for five for East City, as Thomson led UE with two in three tries. A catch by O'Heron and the fielding of Sullivan and Legrow on third were defensive features.

Fielded Better

UEW got the jump early in the second fray to earn the duke, fielding much better than East City and having three-hit hurling by Chuck Birch till he got wild and gave way to Reg Gordon in the fifth, the latter throwing hitless ball then in a relief role. Lefty Doris came back to pitch a good game for East City but lacked the backing. Mackness led at bat with three in four and shone afield for the victors, while none of the losers got more than one safe blow, though they threatened several times on walks. Spencer hit a triple, as doubles were conked by Jaquith Mackness and Taylor.

Menzies Atop With .363 To Lead Petes

Al Menzies, classy catcher of the senior Petes in the Viaduct Baseball League, continues to lead the regulars at bat after 32 scheduled games with a fine .363 average. He is followed by Danny Brown (on the Chicago Cubs' list) with .341, Danny coming along strong lately at the plate besides fielding in fine fashion. Howie Dalton, always a dependable batter, is next of the regular players with .321, though Lefty Dadson—filling in as an infielder and a pitcher—has a neat mark of .333 in 18 games. Bud Harrison also makes the charmed circle with .306.

Those above .250 were considered either real good or pretty fair hitters among the regulars, while those further down—apart from pitchers—are falling off in their batting as the schedule nears a close and playoffs loom. The Petes' batting order may be switched shortly with the steadier hitters getting the spots in the list as good fielders who aren't hitting may sit out certain important games, according to Manager Eddie Murphy.

Turk Broda's Stars Playing Trent Crew

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 16 — (ENS).—Turk Broda's All-Stars, the NHL softball team with the Turk in charge, will visit Campbellford on August 24 (Thursday) to play an exhibition game against the best in the Trent Valley League. The event is sponsored by the local ball club, which at the present time is in debt, and it is hoped this will do much to enable the club to get back again and pay off obligations.

Playing on the visiting team will be a host of NHL hockey stars: Cal. Gardner, Jimmie Thompson, Gus Mortson, Max and Bill Quackenbush, Bill Barilko, Ed. Harrison, Flem. Mackell, Bud Poile, Sid Smith, Al Dewsbury, Chuck Webster, and of course the Turk himself.

Dit Clapper and Harold (Baldy) Cotton will umpire the game, and Dr. Fred G. Robertson, Liberal M.P. Northumberland, and Hon. W. A. Goodfellow, Welfare Minister, will pitch and bat respectively to open the game.

The local club has been granted permission by the council to close off portions of the streets around the ball diamond, to make ticket taking easier, as it is hoped the crowd will be large at this game.

Hurricanes Triumph

Hurricanes won 5-2 from Shrimps in a tadpole lacrosse tilt yesterday. Parry scored for the winners in the first and Anthony in the second. Parry got three more in the third, as Walling counted two for the other side.

Hurricanes: G. Heffernan, Crough, Parry, Patterson, Coughlin, Parks, B. DeNoble, W. Anthony, Davis.

Shrimps: Reid, Walling, P. DeNoble, Wilkinson, Chambers, Sage, Sutherland, Pace.

Referees, J. Fitzgerald and F. Heffernan.

Minor Baseball

Secretary Al Watkins of the Peterborough Minor Baseball Association has drawn up the following schedule for the rest of the week, all night games starting at 6.30: Wednesday, North and south peewees at the Ex.; Thursday, East and south juveniles at Riverside, while east and south bantams go at the Ex Friday. east midgets against the southend juveniles at Riverside, and east vs. south peewees at the Ex.; Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Bowl east and north peewees. Playoffs will be started next week, the schedule being drawn up in a day or two.

C's Beat Havelock

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 16 — (ENS).—The local softball club walked away with a nine inning tussle with Havelock by a score of 20 to 6 at the High School diamond on Monday evening, to put themselves out in front of a best of five series by a two game to one lead.

Triples to Bennett and Herd and McFarlane, and home runs by Herd and Hardy did much to take the game for Campbellford.

The next game will be in Havelock on Wednesday night, and could be the deciding game.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

It should be a knock-down and a drag-out battle at Miller Bowl tonight when the loop-leading Owen Sound Crescents tackle the third-place Petes. An OLA senior "A" scrap that might well be the best seen here this semester. It's at 8.45, and we mention the time for district folks and tourists, as local fans to the tune of 2,000 or so a game know this. Schedule is nearing a finish and the gutted-stick guys of this group (tops in the country) are playing it plenty hard as they jockey for playoff spots. The Crescents can be "had" and it could happen here this eve if the Creighton crew go all out for victory.

A note from Ralph Charlton on the Kawartha Lakes tennis tournament. A big affair for the racquet-wielders, wide open, and it's at the Kawartha Club on Aug. 26, a week from Saturday, commencing at nine a.m. Ladies' and men's doubles with prizes for winners and runners-up as well as the winners of consolation events. Entries close on Aug. 24 at a buck a person, so send in your name and that of your partner to R. Charlton, 159 Rubidge St., city, or phone him at 6884 soon. In case of rain, the tournament will be run off the following day.

And the Lights Shineth

At long last, the lights are up in Riverside Park. An historical occasion for baseball in Peterborough. The arcs will be ready for use Saturday night, and New Toronto plays the Petes here twice that day. Viaduct League fixtures, one at three in the aft and the other at 8.15 p.m. The city is putting them up with the senior ball club certainly contributing its share with a donation of $15,000, plus 25 per cent of all games from now unto eternity, and also by aiding minor ball in various ways—including a full-time coach all summer. But, anyway, baseball here is finally getting up-to-date and playing under lights.

Batting averages for the Petes after 32 games are in tonight. Catcher Al Menzies continues to lead regulars with a healthy .363, as Danny Brown (improving plenty at bat lately) is next with .341. Then of the regulars comes Howie Dalton with .321, and Bud Harrison (a comparative newcomer) is going fine with .306 to make the charmed circle. Paul Estlick and Joe Lowrey are doing pretty fair, too. Lefty Bill Dadson is well out in front of the pitchers at the plate. Manager Ed Murphy as a pinch-hitter in six games is batting .500 to show he is still a fine hitter after retiring as a regular some time ago. The averages speak for themselves, so why should we go delving deeper to embarrass lower hitters?

A Tight, Tight Series

East City beat UEW 8-3 at the Bowl last e'en, and then UEW turned around and defeated the East Citizens 6-3. Which leaves the men's softball semi-finals tied at three games each. Deciding tilt is at 8.15 (mark ye the time) in the Bowl d'Ashburnham, winner going against Mutuals next week for the city championship. A big gallery on deck and two neat numbers reeled off last gloaming. Lefty Doris and Reg Gordon saw a lot of service on the opposite mounds but Terry Woods and Chuck Birch got deserving victories for their efforts. Sullivan and Thomson were the big hitters in the opener and Mackness waved a mean mace in the nightcap. The joust tomorrow ought to be a humdinger as the loser is out.

* * * * * *

The girls' softball playoff tonight at the Bowl betwixt Ashby's and Marines will be played at seven bells, instead of eight. Friday has Ashby's vs. Woollens at seven, and then Marines vs. CGE, these being round-robin games for the Knox Trophy and the city intermediate title. Westclox lasses, who won the senior city crown and the Cotton Cup, are off to Kingston tonight to open PWSU intermediate "A" playdowns, return game being here Saturday aft at three and third, if necessary, at 6.15 Saturday night. Woollens the junior winners, have an exhibition in Lindsay tonight whilst awaiting PWSU playdowns.

Down Sports' Rialto

Our junior lacrossers next week meet the Maitlands-Owen Sound winner in best-of-five for the junior "B" title. Bun White has been released by Owen Sound Crescents while Mimico swapped Vic Demarco and Tommy Banks to Weston for Ted Downer just before the deadline for senior "A" deals.... St. Peter's junior and senior grid prospects are to report to the school at 6.30 p.m. Monday for a get-together under the Rev. J. F. Coughlat; Coach Fred Allore will be back shortly to start drills.... Petes' ball game in Bowmanville last night was postponed as the park was in use.... Aces beat Staffs 6-3 last night as DeLaurentis pitched one-hit ball with Oshawa taking Dovers 5-1.... All PMBA coaches and players will take part in the big baseball parade at 7.30 Saturday night from the Empress to Riverside; players will wear their uniforms.... Woollens play Westclox in fastball tonight at Quaker.... Civic games tomorrow: Foresters vs. Post Office at Armour Field, and Grant and Loucks vs. Police at King Edward.... Minor ball schedule for the rest of the week is in tonight; playoffs start next week .... Nothing more on the mind at the moment.

Charles Makes Dull Showing Louis Stock Up

By MURRAY ROSE

BUFFALO, N.Y., Aug. 16 (AP) —Joe Louis' stock rose sharply today following Ezzard Charles' one-sided but lacklustre conquest of Freddie Beshore.

A "new" Charles was supposed to be unveiled in Memorial Auditorium Tuesday night but it was the same old cautious Eddy in action. The NBA heavyweight champion, who made good in his third title defence by stopping Beshore in 2.53 of the 14th round, certainly wasn't a "tiger."

But Charles and his managerial brain trust of Jake Mintz and Tom Tahnas, expressed satisfaction with the lean Cincinnati Negro's performance.

"He needed the workout," said Mintz as Charles nodded agreement. "It was his first fight in 10 months and he wasn't as sharp as he should be. His timing was off. But he'll be ready for the next one, whoever it is."

"Whoever it is" refers to one Joe Louis who once ruled all of the heavyweights until he went into temporary retirement. Ezzy is recognized only in 47 states of the U.S. New York doesn't list a champion at the moment.

Tentative Date

The comebacking Brown Bomber and Charles are tentatively scheduled to meet in Yankee Stadium, Sept. 27.

Louis already has started preliminary training in West Baden, Ind. Charles, who suffered a slight cut over his right eye Tuesday night, said he will be ready to resume work again in a couple of weeks.

When discussions first got under way about a Louis-Charles scrap, the experts' consensus was that Charles would be a big favorite to outstab and outrun the aging, one-time destroyer. After Tuesday night, the Bomber's stock soared.

The 29-year-old Charles never was able to floor the 26-year-old Beshore who outweighed Charles 184½ to 183¼.

Referee Barney Felix halted the fray when blood streamed from a nasty cut on Beshore's right ear and while the aggressive, game challenger was taking a good shellacking. Besides the ear cut, Freddie gushed blood from a cut under his right eye and from the nose and mouth.

Petes Victorious

Petes took Tigers 13-9 in peewee lacrosse yesterday. Coombs accounted for four goals and Kent one for them in the first, Hawthorne thrice aiding, as Jay scored for Tigers. Coombs, Hawthorne and Davis, with two, were their snipers in the second, Hawthorne having an assist and Kent two. Anthony got a goal and an assist for Tigers and Pace one marker. Kent, Davis and Hawthorne hit the mark in the third, the latter and Mountney drawing assists, while Jay got two goals for Tigers, Anthony helping once. In the fourth, Jay got a goal and assist and Ketcheson two markers for Tigers, Anthony scoring one. Hunt tallied for Petes. Teams:

Petes: F. Heffernan, Hawthorne Coombs, Kent, Mountney, Hunt, Davis.

Tigers: G. Heffernan, Jay, Ketcheson, R. Anthony, Pace, Murduff, McCarthy, Dixon, Maniece, Barrie.

Referee: J. Fitzgerald.

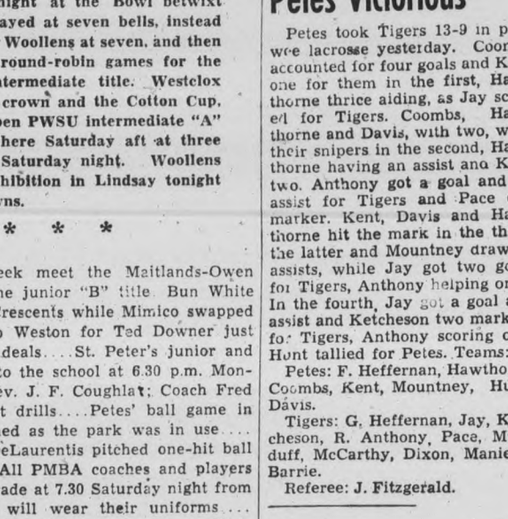
Tigers Beat Lions

Tigers took Lions 9-4 in a peewee lacrosse match yesterday. Parry and Ellis scored in the first for Lions as Jay got two for Tigers, aided by Pace and DeNoble. The latter with Jay and Parry counted in the second, Anthony getting a pair, with Pace twice assisting and Jay once. Parry from Trudeau tallied for the Lions. Jay got two more in the third, McCarthy once helping, as Ellis scored for the losers.

Tigers: G. Heffernan, Jay, G. DeNoble, R. Anthony, Murduff, Pace, McCarthy, Dixon, Barrie, Heard.

Lions: Reid, Parry, Danahy, Ellis, Trudeau, Moffat, Patterson.

Referees, R. Hobart and J. Fitzgerald.



WINNER ON TKO — Champion Ezzard Charles did not look too impressive in his bout last night with Freddie Beshore, taking 14 rounds to gain a technical knockout when the fight was stopped. Beshore was cut up pretty well by that time. The thrice-postponed scrap at Buffalo did not draw as well as expected, and the odds rode four to one on Charles with few takers reported. Beshore is shown above on the left and the champion on the right.

Busmen Triumph Over Bankers

Bus Drivers waltzed to an easy 17-0 Civic League victory over Bankers Tuesday night at King Edward school diamond. Lindsay Brown went the five-inning route, called on account of darkness, holding the Bankers to two hits and allowing only one man to reach third base in the first.

Don Brown, a brother of the Bus Drivers' hurler, also went the route for the Bankers. Although steady he never managed to reach the pitching form of his brother. Several pop flies into the outfield were dropped, starting rallies.

Bus Drivers sent eight runs across in the first, four in both the second and third and one in the fourth.

Line-ups:

Bus Drivers— O'Dette, Brown, Gordon, Edmison, Page, Parnell, Gray, Simmons, Clarke.

Bankers—Sims, Ethier, Rollins, Loveless, Shaver, Curry, Brown, Robertson, Grant.

Babe Ruth, mighty Yankee slugger, died of cancer in New York two years ago today. "The King of Swat" in 1926 smashed out 60 home runs for the all-time baseball record.

Doubleheader Swept By Jersey City

By The Associated Press.

Roger (Doc) Bowman looms as a bright pitching prospect for New York Giants. The way the sturdy lefthander has been hurling for Jersey City this season, he certainly rates another crack at the big time.

The six-foot southpaw has won 13 games while losing nine for the Little Giants. He has struck out 113 batters and walked 87 in pitching 14 complete games.

Bowman, 23 Friday, stopped Montreal Royals in the second game of a doubleheader Tuesday night, 8-3. Jersey City won the opener 5-4 to make a clean sweep.

Bowman scattered 10 hits, walked three and struck out three. He bested righthander Jack Banta, who was hurling before his boss, Branch Rickey, president of Brooklyn Dodgers.

Take Twin Bill

Baltimore also copped a twin bill, defeating Toronto 5-1 and 8-2. Tom Fine held Toronto to seven hits in the opener, then Irv Medlinger turned in an eight-hitter for the winners in the second game. Baltimore moved to within a half-game of the second-place Montrealers.

Rochester divided a doubleheader with Syracuse, winning the second game 5-3 after being blanked by Eddie Blake's four-hitter in the opener, 2-0

Hank Edwards' pinch single in the 10th inning gave Springfield a 7-6, 10-inning victory over Buffalo. Bill Voiselle, who pitched the 10th, was the winner.

Provincials Win Sports Honors At Police Picnic

Ontario Provincial Police were top winners in the sports program at the annual Kawartha District Police Association picnic held in Nicholl's Oval.

William Stringer, OBE, Commissioner of Police for Ontario, presented the trophies to the winning teams, men and women. Inspector C. W. Farlow accepted the trophies on behalf of the provincial police teams representing District 8. Sergeant Leo Murphy of the city police received the awards on behalf of his department.

Many of the police officers' wives also took part in a sports program.

The Peterborough city police won the baseball game 15-7 to take the Mr. and Mrs. H. R Northey trophy.

The city police tug of war team also won that and with it, the Ostrander s Challenge trophy.

City Constable First

In the track and field events, city constable Donald Jones was first across the tape in the 100 yard dash winning the Warne trophy. The hop, step and jump was won by provincial constable Clyde Naismith, who also won the running broad jump.

Provincial constable Archie Eady won the shot put and the stout man's race. The provincial constable relay team, composed of Constables Ray Kowal, C. E. Meadows, Naismith and Eady won that event.

Constable Naismith was presented with the M. E. Knox trophy for accumulating the highest number of points. The Provincial police won the Kenneth Morris trophy for having the largest total number of points gathered in track and field events. The provincial police also won the Bert Austin trophy for winning the biggest number of points for all the afternoon's events.

Leads Women's Scores

Mrs. Robert Menzies won the Peterborough Credit Jewellers' trophy for building up the most number of points in the women's events. She won the 50-yard dash and the shoe race. Mrs. Andre Dalton won the egg and spoon race; Mrs. Ray Pope won the shot put event; and Mrs. Garnet Samis was first in the softball throwing event.

William G. Underwood demonstrated Defendo, a police method of defence.

The committee in charge of the program were city police constable Andre Dalton, provincial constables Ray Pope and Emmett Crough and Chief Constable Garnet Samis of Lakefield.

For Weston, Vic Demarco, Tommy Banks, Bob White and Wilf Chard each scored twice.

International Competition In Tennis Drama

By N. R. WHEATLEY.

QUEBEC, Aug. 16 (CP). — A wealth of promising international drama was packed today into the Canadian tennis championships.

In the men's singles, seven of eight third-round matches offered international competition — Canada vs. France and Canada vs. the United States.

Canada's No. 1 player, Henri Rochon of Montreal, was drawn against Alain Lemyse of France in a battle of southpaws.

Rochon played both first and second round matches Tuesday won without the slightest trouble over J. Y. Laurin and Jacques Giguere, both of Quebec. Lemyse was pressed in his second set with Don Platt of Toronto.

With Rochon, Canada's other three Davis Cup team players found themselves against foreign opponents. The draw saw Brendan Macken of Montreal against Roland Haillet of France, George Robinson of Montreal against Jean Ducos de la Haille of France and little Lorne Main of Vancouver against Bill Tully of Bronxville, N. Y., 1948 Canadian singles champion.

Macken allowed Marc Blondeau of Quebec only two games in their match Tuesday and is favored over Haillet who dropped six to young Hamilton Quain of Ottawa.

Here and There In Sport

By The Canadian Press

Cleveland Indians pulled off the rarest kind of triple play Tuesday against Detroit Tigers—one that started in the outfield.

Hard-throwing Bob Kennedy, the Tribes' veteran rightfielder, got his glove under George Kell's short liner just as it was about to hit the grass. His throw to the shortstop caught a runner off second and the relay to first picked off another runner there

The action came in the fifth inning and was set up this way:

Gerry Priddy walked and stopped at second on Don Kolloway's single to right. Then Kennedy sprinted in to catch Kell's liner and threw to Boone, doubling Priddy off second. Boone fired the ball to Luke Easter before Kolloway could get back on first.

The Tribes' last triple play occurred in Boston in 1948. Tuesday's was their third in 15 years and the first they've ever completed in their home park, Cleveland Stadium.

Miller Grattan, owned and driven by Gordon Ramsey, of Stratford, won both divisions of the Matron Stake Pace for two-year-olds at Thorncliffe Raceway in Toronto Tuesday.

A non-betting attraction on the program, running of the stake saw Miller Grattan win easily from the only other starter, Judy Volo. The gelding negotiated the first mile in 2.17, and the second in 2.19 3-5.

Sam Davison, of Winnipeg, tour manager of the Dominion Football Association, resigned at the annual meeting of the association in Vancouver Tuesday.

Davidson, who has managed every major cross-country soccer tour, said he was resigning "to let somebody else see if they could do better."

"I'm tired now," he said.

An Australian Davis Cup team comprising the veteran Jack Bromwich, Frank Sedgman, Ken McGregor and George Worthington has been named for next week's challenge round play with the United States defenders at Forest Hills, N.Y.

Some 117 golfers, 32 of them amateurs, take off today for two days of play in the Ontario Open Golf Championship and $1,000 first-prize money.

Many of them fired practice rounds Tuesday over the par-70 St. George's course at Toronto. No one broke par but Dick Metz, of Virginia Beach, Va., and Bob Gray, of Toronto Scarboro, both equalled it.

The 60 low scorers and ties from today's 18 holes qualify for the final 36 rounds Friday.

Canada's Teddy, who burned up eastern tracks as a three-year-old in 1948, died Tuesday night in Toronto. The thoroughbred was stricken with a gastric ailment in the spring of 1949 from which he never completely recovered, although he ran in a few races this year.

Canada's Teddy showed little promise as a two-year-old, but he came into his own after being purchased by Morris Fishman in his third year. He won the Breeders' Stakes and other top Ontario races as a three-year-old.

Ontario Baseball Association senior playdowns must start by Sept. 25 and finish by Oct. 5, the OBA ruled in Hamilton Tuesday night. Finals must be finished by Oct. 7.

The dates were set at a meeting of an OBA sub-committee and representatives of senior leagues. W. J. Snider, of Hamilton, was appointed convenor for senior playdowns.

Bobby Locke shot a three-under-par 69 on his first trip around the Royal Montreal Golf Club course Tuesday.

Despite insistent requests that he stay over for the Canadian open tournament at Montreal starting Aug. 24, Locke said he would have to fly to England today where he is booked for several exhibitions and a tourney.

Dropo Beaned Goes To Hospital

BOSTON, Aug. 16 — (AP) — Boston's Red Sox and their legion of supporters thought it was rough when the club lost Ted Williams and his menacing bat, but now the fourth-place locals must get along for a time without Big Walt Dropo and his heavy bludgeon.

The slugging rookie, who leads the American League in runs batted in, was struck just above the left ear by a Hank Wyse pitch Tuesday night. He is under observation for a cerebral concussion at Sancta Maria Hospital in adjacent Cambridge.

Wyse, righthanded pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics, not only insists "I never threw at a man's head in my life," but intends to visit the rugged Boston rookie today.

The "beaning" occurred in the fifth inning of the first game of a two-night doubleheader at a time when the lights were on but full darkness hadn't closed in.

Some immediately accused Wyse, former Chicago National League hurler, of throwing a beam ball because Dropo had hit him for a two-run homer in the previous inning and Vern Stephens had hit him for another two-run four bagger before Dropo came to bat.

Sox manager, Steve O'Neill, said after the game: "No, I don't think Wyse threw at him (Dropo). Walt sometimes seems to have trouble getting out of the way of a high inside pitch."

Groth's Big Bat Brings Detroit 4-1 Victory Over Indians

By JOE REICHLER,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

A difference of $5,000 once kept Johnny Groth from wearing a Cleveland uniform. Today the Indians would pay that sum many times over to get him out of their hair.

Since joining the Detroit Tigers two years ago Groth has made a career out of belting Cleveland pitching. If the Tigers beat the Indians to the wire it can be traced directly to Groth s batting feats against the club that once spurned him.

It wasn't Groth's fault that the Tigers could get no better than a1 even break in their two games with the Tribe.

He slammed a home run in each game. Unfortunately, only one came with the bases loaded. That was Tuesday's. The Tigers didn't need any more to defeat Bob Lemon and the Indians, 4-1.

Groth's homer Monday night came with one on. Since it happened in the ninth to overcome a 1-0 deficit, that blow appeared sufficient. The Tribe, however, came back with single runs in the bottom halves of the ninth and 10th to win.

Changes Events

Groth went to Cleveland for a tryout after the war and was offered a contract. As he was about to sign, Groth's father reminded the boy he had previously promised the Detroit club a chance to match any offer. The Tigers offered $30,000. Cleveland would go no higher than $25,000.

Detroit's victory opened up a three and a half game spread between the league leading Tigers and their pursuers. The New York Yankees split a doubleheader with Washington to move two percentage points in front of Cleveland in their race for second place. Washington won the opener, 10-5. The Yankees took the second, 9-0.

Boston's Red Sox moved within seven games of the top, taking two from Philadelphia Athletics 8-3 and 9-4.

Philadelphia increased its National League lead over Boston to six games, defeating the Braves 9-1 Brooklyn climbed to within three percentage points of Boston with a 1-0 triumph over the New York Giants. Chicago's Cubs tallied twice in the eighth inning to dump the St. Louis Cards 3-2. Pittsburgh rallied for six runs in the ninth to match Cincinnati's total in the top of the inning and outscored the Reds 10-9. Ralph Kiner clubbed his 33rd homer for the Bucs.

Wins 15th Game

Curt Simmons won his 15th game for Philadelphia, with the help of Jim Konstanty in the eighth. It was the 53rd relief appearance for the Phillies' fireman. Johnny Sain was the loser.

The Red Sox double victory was dimmed by an accident to Walt Dropo, their sensational rookie first baseman. Dropo suffered a cerebral concussion when "beaned" by Hank Wyse in the first game. X-rays showed no fracture. He is expected back in the lineup within a few days.

The Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Browns were not scheduled.

B.C. Preparing Strategy For Civil Defence

VICTORIA, BC — (CP) — British Columbia is getting down to brass tacks on civil defence problems.

An organizational blueprint—for use in case of an attack on the province—is being prepared by a special committee of civil servants, set up by the provincial government.

The committee, headed by H. A. Pennington, deputy provincial secretary, is assembling data gathered at civil defence meetings recently in Seattle. At those talks, officials from both the United States and Canada discussed defence problems—mainly with a view toward atomic attack.

Informed sources here say the report the committee will submit to the provincial cabinet will probably contain a proposal to set up an advisory council of experts on utilities, fire fighting, law enforcement and other services that would be called into play in the event of an emergency.

Up to the present the stress in British Columbia has been laid on planning rather than the actual setting up of a civil defence organization. Sources say such a step may come later, after the return from England of Gen. F. F. Worthington, chief of the National Civil Defence Organization.

Inventory Resources

Meanwhile the committee here is making an inventory of the actual resources of the civilian population which could be used to combat a disaster.

Another plan being studied by the committee is a program of general public education on what steps civilians can take to help themselves in an emergency.

Said one official: "It's good insurance for the public to know what could be done to lessen the loss if an atomic attack or similar disaster occurred."

Also under study is the matter of zones for civilian defence and the legal problems involved in setting them up, when several municipal authorities would likely have to be co-ordinated under an over-all authority.

Stratford Theatre Capacity Increased

Brian O'Rorke, architect for the national theatre, is preparing the expansion plans, entailing drastic change in the theatre's original seating arrangements. The work is expected to be completed within four months.

Rebel Chief's Death Ends Long Uprising

RANGOON, Aug. 16 — (Reuters) — Military quarters here Tuesday said they believed the death of Sau Ba U Gyi, Karen rebel chief, meant an end to the 14-month-old rising by Karen tribesmen in Burma.

The Karen chief was killed with Capt. Davis Vivian, former British Army officer, and an English adviser named "Baker", in a battle with Burmese government forces in a village near the Siamese frontier.

Betrayed by Karens loyal to the central govenment, they were surprised while completing plans to flee to Siam on elephants.

Sau, self-styled leader of 2,500,000 Karen tribesmen, proclaimed a separate Karen "Sovereign State" in Burma in June, 1949, and launched full-scale attacks on central government forces.

Viking Ship Presented To Two Towns

CLIFFSEND, Isle of Thanet, Eng. —(CP)— Built by the Danes to celebrate the 1,500th anniversary of the Thanet landings, a Viking ship with a its dragon figurehead and many-colored shields, has been presented to the east coast towns of Ramsgate and Broadstairs.

The ship, christened the "Hugin," has been berthed in a concrete cradle on a cliff-top prominence near here. It will serve as a permanent monument to the close historical associations between Denmark and Britain.

Replica of the rugged craft that carried the early Norsemen on their voyages of conquest and discovery, the "Hugin" was rowed across the North Atlantic a year ago by a crew of 50 modern Vikings. After visiting several British ports it was bought by the London Daily Mail and presented as a joint gift to the two towns.

Thousands watched the colorful ceremony as bearded Danes in picturesque dress, horned helmets and carrying battle-axes, turned the ship over to its new owners.

Reaffirm Friendship

Viscount Rothermere, chairman of Associated Newspapers, Ltd., in asking Prince George of Denmark to present the ship, declared:

"Since 1066 nobody has repeated the experiment of invading these shores. If this country keeps up its spirit as it has during the past 900 years, I think no one ever will. I trust the "Hugin" may serve as one of the many reminders of the kinship and love between the people of Denmark and this country."

Said Prince George: "Nowadays it is not necessary to stress the friendship between Danes and Britains. All the same I think it is good that from time to time this friendship, which is often taken for granted, should be reaffirmed as it was by the visit of the "Hugin."

Visiting members were present from Havelock, Hastings, Norwood, Peterborough, Lakefield, North Dummer and South Dummer lodges.

10% Recruits Rejected For Brigade

OTTAWA, Aug. 16 — (CP). — Defence Minister Claxton said on Tuesday night the percentage of rejections among volunteers for Canada's special army force is less than 10 per cent and that "their physical fitness is remarkable."

He said the great part of the equipment required by the brigade group is already in mobilization stores or on issue to the units. The force should be recruited virtually up to its full strength—around 5,000 men — in the next few days, but it would take on extra men to bring all units over strength and provide for replacements.

Mr. Claxton, in an address over the CBC, said 3,600 men had been enlisted in the special and the regular (army) force by Monday as a result of the twin recruiting drives. The special force is to fight aggression in Korea or elsewhere. The regular army is for home defence.

It was announced earlier Tuesday that the special force has enlister 3,027 men. This indicated the regular force has enlisted 669 in its own separate drive, started July 20.

Some 50 per cent of those enlisted are veterans and more than 20 per cent have trades qualifications.

Reports from Toronto said the army's central command had temporarily halted recruiting because it had already taken in 693 men and had reached its quota. Headquarters here said all 13 recruiting stations have been told to recruit indefinitely and that no ceiling has yet been placed on the total to be taken.

Informed estimates are that some 8,000 or more men might be taken in, all told, to guarantee reinforcement.

Two Laws Conflict On Killing Pet

COOKSVILLE, Aug. 16 (CP)—John M. Duff of Clarkson, charged under the Criminal Code with killing a neighbor's dog, was remanded one week Tuesday when his counsel contended a provincial act permitted him to do so.

The dog, a great dane owned by Robert Elliott, was found dead near Duff's home. Duff said he had chased the dog several times because it was destroying his flowers.

His counsel, John Pallett, said the Dog Tax and Livestock Protection Act, a provincial statute, permitted his client to shoot the dog if it strayed from its owner's property between sunup and sundown. Eugene Gerheart, Elliott's counsel, said he couldn't understand how a provincial act could permit something forbidden under the Criminal Code.

Religious Celebration

THREE RIVERS, Que., Aug. 16 (CP).—James Cardinal McGuigan of Toronto Tuesday urged Roman Catholics to turn to the blessed Virgin and she will "show her great intercessory power and save us from the evils that exist today in our civilization."

Cardinal McGuigan was speaking at a pontifical high mass here in honor of the feast of the assumption at the national shrine of Our Lady of the Cape in nearby Cap De La Madeleine. More than 100,000 pilgrims from across Canada and the United States attended the ceremonies which started with a midnight mass Monday night.

MARK FRIENDSHIP—Ceremonies were held during the week-end at the historic old Indian village of Fairfield, founded in 1792 by Moravian missionaries and destroyed during the war of 1812, to mark the friendly relations existing between Canada and the U.S. Located 20 miles east of Chatham in southwest Ontario, the site of the village was discovered four years ago by the late John R. MacNicol of Toronto. Representatives of the Moravians as well as U.S. and Canadian dignitaries attended the tree-planting ceremonies. Here, the pipe of peace which missionaries brought from their homeland, is examined by a Moravian immigrant. In native costume are, left to right, Mrs. Mary Stojaspal of Centralia, Jolin Minarik of London, Ont., Chief Omer Peters of the Moraviantown Indian Reserve, and Frances Stojaspal of Centralia.

Roosevelt Urges Congress Authorize Niagara Project

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP). —Congress was urged Tuesday by Representative Franklin Roosevelt (Dem. Lib. N.Y.) to authorize a step-up in electric power production at Niagara Falls.

The House of Representatives public works committee opened a hearing on a bill by Roosevelt to authorize the use of more of the Niagara river's waters near the falls. Modern power plants also would be built.

The increased diversion of water has been approved in a treaty with Canada which the Senate ratified last week.

Roosevelt told the committee the power which it is possible to develop at Niagara exceeds that at any other single site in North America.

Total production, he said, would be near 23,000,000,000 kilowatt hours a year. This would be shared equally by Canada and the United States.

Three Times Greater

The estimated production, he said, would be about three times greater than the present capacity of the falls.

Roosevelt said Niagara alone could produce 65 per cent as much power as the whole Tennessee Valley Authority system. The American portion, he said, would equal that of Boulder, Bonneville, and Shasta dams combined.

"This potential power," Roosevelt said, "is desperately needed by upstate New York—industry, farmers and domestic users."

"But even more important," he added, "is the fact that this power is a critical factor in America's defence effort."

Roosevelt said federal power commission engineers estimated that the new power works would cost between $308,000,000 and $350,000,000 depending upon the type of construction used.

There is little likelihood that the house will act on the bill this session of Congress. The present hearing, therefore, is mainly to acquaint Congress with the project.

William R. Farley, chief of the federal power commission's division of licenced projects, testified there would be an ample market for not only the Niagara project power but also for that of the proposed St. Lawrence river project.

The St. Lawrence proposal for Canadian-U.S. joint development of the river is not a part of the Roosevelt bill. The St. Lawrence project authorization bill has been pigeon-holed for this session of Congress.

Packinghouse Workers Sign

TORONTO, Aug. 16 (CP) — The United Packinghouse Workers of America (CIO-CCL) Tuesday announced the signing of a new working agreement with the Robin Hood Mills at Humberstone, Ont.

The agreement, covering some 200 employees, provides for a 44 hour week instead of 48 hours and for a nine-per-cent wage increase to maintain take-home pay. Wages will range from $1.03 to $1.36 an hour.

Lloyd Fell, UPWA spokesman, said the new rates are the highest in the flour milling industry.

Announce Appointment

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 16 (CP). —The Most Rev. John C. Cody, Roman Catholic bishop of the London diocese, announced the appointment of the Rev. Edward Ambrose O'Donnell, Woodstock, to succeed the late Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. N. Campeau as Dean of Kent, pastor of St. Joseph's Parish, Chatham, and member of the diocesan council. Father O'Donnell has been pastor of St. Mary's parish, Woodstock, since 1928. He will take over his new charge Sept. 3.

Average Earnings

OTTAWA, Aug. 16 (CP) — Average hourly earnings of Canadian manufacturing workers paid by the hour reached a peak of $1.03½ at June 1, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Tuesday. The figure compared with $1.02½ at May 1 and with 99 cents at June 1 of last year.

Cable Snaps

AURORA, Aug. 16 (CP)—An elevator cable snapped Tuesday and the cage dropped 45 feet. Bruce Bales, 25, the operator was rushed to hospital with a broken back. Hospital officials said he will be in a cast for at least three months.

National Museum Guarding Folk Lore of Early Canada

By KAY REX

OTTAWA (CP). — From its store of folk-songs and legends of early Canada the National Museum has compiled two bulletins on Canadian folk-lore and hopes to turn out more in the near future.

The books, "Folk-Lore of Waterloo County, Ont." and "Folk-Lore of Lunenburg County, N.S." are the first Museum publications of their kind in "20 or 30 years."

"There's no limit to what you can do in this field," says the chief curator, Dr. F. J. Alcock.

Lack of funds and consequent lack of necessary staff is holding up the work.

Exhibits in the Museum are fine but it's only the people who come to Ottawa who see them, said Dr. Alcock. Only through publications could the work of the Museum be made known across Canada.

Can't Delay

It also was important to collect material on early Canadian life without too much delay.

"We should get all this material while we can," he said. "It's from the older people that we get it... the longer we leave it the harder it is to obtain . . . people spend more of their time these days driving or listening to their radios, they don't sit around telling the old stories or singing the old songs, and the past is slipping away."

As it is the Museum already has accumulated a mass of folk-lore material. It contains thousands of written records of myths, folk-tales, sayings, games, dances.

Folk-song collections alone include phonographic recordings of 3,000 Indian and more than 6,000 French-Canadian songs.

Book of Songs

In addition there are several hundred British-Canadian folk-songs mostly from the Maritime provinces.

Dr. Alcock said he hoped the Museum's next step would be the publication of a book of Canadian songs.

The 163-page Lunenburg County publication was compiled by Helen Creighton of Dartmouth, N.S., who for the last three field seasons has been employed by the Museum on folk-lore studies in Nova Scotia.

Blood-chilling tales of ghost-ships predominate in the book. They should provide a wealth of material to writers seeking story plots.

Arrange Publication

Material in the 68-page Waterloo County bulletin was left in manuscript form by the late W. J. Wintemberg, a resident of the area. It was arranged for publication by Dr. Douglas Leechman of the Museum staff.

The German dialect spoken by the early settlers of the district fascinated Wintemberg. The book is filled with sayings and superstitions still known in that part of the country.

Research into the Canadian past has attracted much evidence abroad. In fact the next edition of the American Journal of Folk-lore, published in Berkeley, Calif., will be an All-Canadian number.

There still is much to be done if Canada is to bulid her tradition and preserve relics of the past.

Dr. Alcock reported Newfoundland "practically untouched" when it came to folk-lore research.

But it won't continue long that way. The curator said a member of the Museum staff is spending two months this Summer in the new province, beginning a study into Newfoundland folk material.

Gets New Post

OTTAWA, Aug. 16 (CP)—Dr. Loris Shano Russell, director of the Royal Ontario Museum at Toronto, has been appointed chief of the zoology section of the national museum of Canada.

Donna Reed Finally Gets Film Romance

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 16—(AP)—After years of puppy love with Mickey Rooney and platonic affairs with Alan Ladd, Donna Reed is finally getting some real romance on the screen.

"I feel like a new woman," she glowed. "I've got a new home, a new baby, a new contract and a new kind of role—the first I've ever had with any sex in it."

The sweet-faced actress has just signed a deal with Columbia. Her first assignment is to make torrid love in "The Hero" with John Derek, the most popular bobbysox idol of the moment.

"It's a real witchy part," she declared. "I couldn't be happier. And for the first time I get to wear some appealing clothes. I have the first low-cut evening gown I've ever worn in films."

Donna did 20 pictures in eight years at M.G.M. and she was inevitably cast as the home-type girl. Either she ended up in a nunnery, as in "Green Dolphin Street", or she held hands with Mickey Rooney, "or I was a mother with three children."

No Soap

"The only picture I had any romance in was 'They Were Expendable,' " she sighed. "I had some wonderful love scenes with John Wayne. But then the real-life counterparts of our roles saw the picture and complained that they were both married and that there had been no romance between them. So the scenes were cut out of the picture."

Her film romances with Alan Ladd were no better.

"I played the widow of Alan's war buddy. The studio felt veterans would resent it if Alan tried to make love.

"And in 'Chicago Dealine' I was dead when the picture started. Alan and I were supposed to have some love scenes in dream sequences. But at that time, Fantasy had failed at the box-office and the studio didn't want to take a chance on it."

Violent Quake Rocks Recorders In Many Cities

By The Canadian Press

The earth shook Tuesday to the most violent quake in recent years.

Where it occurred was not immediately determined. But scientists agreed it was of an intensity that causes great damage when centring in populated areas.

From Auckland, N.Z., came a report that Rotoru—centre of noted Hot Springs Spas—was shaken by a severe quake at 6.45 a.m. EDT.

However, Boston College and Harvard University seismologists said the New Zealand quake definitely was not the one that rocked seismographs in widely separated parts of the world.

In Calcutta, reports said a severe earthquake caused heavy damage at Siliguri in West Bengal Province. A 10-second shock hit the town of Patna in Bihar, but no damage or loss of life was reported. "Seismographs in Calcutta recorded a one-minute shock.

The seismographs around the world wrote wild, incoherent messages which fascinated scientists could not imediately interpret.

Only Rev. Daniel Linehan of the Boston College Seismograph Station in Weston, Mass., offered a positive estimate of the location three hours after the quake flung the record far off the recording paper.

He placed the quake at 5,215 miles from Boston—possibly in North or Northeast Turkey or the Caspian Sea area.

Hazards Guess

But Dr. L. Don Leet, head of the Harvard University Seismograph Station in Harvard, Mass., hazarded a guess that it originated 8,000 to 9,000 miles distant, probably in the East Indies. He said it probably was the biggest quake of the present generation.

The quake record began at 10:23.57 EDT at Harvard.

Hours later the earthquake's waves racing thousands of miles through the earth's crust still were so huge that instruments were "saturated" with motion.

The quake was one of the five greatest ever recorded, the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey at Washington reported. It tentatively placed the earthquake's location in the northern tip of Burma near the China border.

Capt. Elliott Roberts of the survey told a reporter that the earthquake had a magnitude of 8.4. He said this compares with 8.5 for the maximum so far recorded. Roberts said it was premature to be too exact of the quake's location, although he was reasonably sure that the Burma-China border was correct.

At Hartford, Conn., Trinity College's seismograph recorded quakes described as terrific about 3,000 miles distant in an undetermined direction.

Father Linehan said the recording light beam that traces the record on photo-sensitive paper a foot wide was swinging in a path six feet wide.

The Rev. Joseph Carroll, S.J., at Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wis., believed the tremor was located in the Pacific, possibly in the vicinity of Japan. He said the needle in his seismograph travelled at a dizzy pace.

But the central meteorological observatory in Tokyo, which recorded the severe shock at 10.16 a.m. EDT, believed it originated somewhere in the northern part of the American continent.

Colossal Quake

In London, seismologist H. V. Shaw described it as "a colossal earthquake" which might have been a submarine disturbance.

At Dorking, England, observer E. W. Pollard said the tremors were so violent his seismograph record was blurred.

At Seattle, the University of Washington Geology Department said the shock was about the same distance as the recent quakes in. Venezuela — though they might be from any other direction.

Yet in Venezuela the National Observatory recorded a moderate tremor "quite a distance from here."

The California Institute of Technology seismograph in Pasadena recorded the "great earthquake" at 10.24 a.m.

A very severe earthquake was recorded at the Ottawa Observatory at 9.23 a.m. and continued for approximately two hours. Dominion seismologist E. A. Hodgson reported.

Fire Chiefs To Attend Dominion Convention

Two fire chiefs of the district will be leaving soon to attend the 42nd annual convention of the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs in Victoria, B.C., September 5 to 8.

Chief Allan H. Clark of the Lakefield fire department, who is also secretary-treasurer of the Dominion association, will go accompanied by his wife and daughter Jean.

From Port Hope, Chief Record and Mrs. Record will also be attending.

Delegates at the convention will hear addresses by outstanding fire officials of Canada and the United States and be shown demonstrations of fire fighting methods and exhibits of the latest equipment.

The association is expecting, on the number of reservations received so far, that the Victoria convention will be the largest they have ever held.

Hydrogen Bomb Carries Double Action Threat

NEW YORK; Aug. 16 (AP) — The hydrogen bomb, if 1,000 times more powerful than an atomic bomb, is like a fireworks piece that shoots more than once.

The first shot is a flash of heat at the speed of light. This shot covers a circle 40 miles in diameter with heat that can be fatal to anyone without shade. In Japan the similar area of fatal flash burns from the A-bomb was less than two miles in diameter, but it accounted for 20 to 30 per cent of the deaths.

The 40-mile circle is not the limit of H-bomb flash heat. In Japan the A-bomb flash caused serious skin burns up to 10,000 feet. This means that a thousand-fold greater H-bomb would burn the flesh painfully within 100 miles.

The second shot is blast or concussion. This is a wall of compressed air about 1,000 feet thick for the A-bomb, much thicker for the H-bomb. The wall is followed by big winds, blowing out and back.

The blast will flatten nearly every kind of man-made structure inside a circle 20 miles in diameter.

Not The Limit

The circle is not the limit. The H-concussion goes 10 times farther than the A-concusson, and at Nagasaki a barracks collapsed at five miles. Buildings near the barracks were unharmed. This means that in a circle of 100 miles some buildings will topple.

The H-bomb with this immense spread will be detonated several miles above the earth. If exploded lower, its reach will be shortened.

Assume a perfect H-hit on New York City, some miles directly overhead of Broadway and 42nd St.

The blast would flatten all but the strongest buildings in all Manhattan. Brooklyn would fall, almost to Coney Island. Northward the Bronx and everything to the north city limit at Van Courtland Park would go down. Across the Hudson, Bayonne and Jersey City would be destroyed and nearly all the great city of Newark.

Going Other Way

Eastward on Long Island the blast would flatten Jackson Heights, Forest Hills, Flushing and many other large suburbs. It would destroy LaGuardia airport and even reach the edges of Idlewild the new international airport. Fort Totten, on north Long Island's shore would be at about the eastern limit of complete blast destruction.

Down New York Harbor the concussion would knock over the Statue of Liberty and tear down the buildings on the north shore of Staten Island.

Steel skyscrapers probably would not fall. Their walls would be blown out. Their upper storey steel ribs would stand bare and twisted.

CAPT. CYRIL H. BURCH, master of the S.S. Quebec, whose actions in bringing his stricken vessel into dock and safely evacuating personnel on board, were praised by passengers.

Canada Seen Food Stronghold Of Democracies

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—(CP). — Canada today truly promised to be the food stronghold of democracies faced with the threat of total war.

With her own yearly wheat needs considered at less than 150,000,000 bushels, the country was expected this year to produce 544,000,000 bushels of wheat—a big, bumper crop that would be the third largest in history.

Along with this forecast, the Bureau of Statistics estimated that Canada this year would produce bigger harvests of oats, barley, rye, flaxseed, potatoes and some forage crops.

The 544,000,000-bushel wheat harvest forecast compared with the previous records of 567,000,000 in 1928 and 557,000,000 bushels in 1942.

By way of contrast, it would be 178,000,000 bushels higher than the previous five-year average of 366,000,000 and 150,000,000 bushels greater than the 10-year average of 394,000,000.

Gloomy Influence

The unexpected high output may have a gloomy immediate influence on international prices. A few days ago the Chicago wheat market dipped slightly when a private grain report placed Canada's possible wheat harvest at about 485,000,000 bushels. New fluctuations may result from the higher forecast. The Chicago market had closed by the time Tuesday's official forecast was made public.

The general harvesting season still is about 10 days away. Heavy rain or frost may change the picture. So could a railway strike, now looming.

In the prairie provinces, the wheat crop is expected to yield 509,000,000 bushels, an increase of 172,000,000 bushels over last year's output.

The higher output this year resulted from increased yields per acre.

HEARD THIS ONE?—Prime Minister Robert Menzies of Australia tells a joke at Vancouver airport and draws appreciative laughter from Brig. M. P. Bogart, officer commanding the British Columbia area, and Acting Commander Glen McDonald of the Navy. Ald. J. D. Cornett, in background, appears to have missed the point. Prime Minister Menzies made a quick inspection of the city en route home from a visit to Ottawa.

Use War Fogs To Fight Polio

LONNDON, Aug. 16—(AP)—British doctors today used war-tested insecticide fogs in their fight against an infantile paralysis outbreak which so far has hit nearly 1,400 persons in the United Kingdom.

Machines developed in the Second World War were employed to fill infected homes with a fog of DDT and pyrethrum and to spray ponds and other areas with the insect-killing mixture.

The Ministry of Health described the outbreak as "serious" but said it was not yet at an epidemic stage. The number of confirmed cases stood at 1,388, nearly double the number reported at the same date last year. Deaths this year from the disease were 195 against only 83 to Aug. 15, 1949.

The outbreak has brought a flood of applications for Lloyds' "polio" insurance. Purchasers pay £1 and receive compensation up to £1,000 if they get infantile paralysis, smallpox, typhoid or paratyphoid.

Textile Workers Win Vote At Trenton Plant

TRENTON, Aug. 16—The Textile Workers' Union of America (CIO) [illegible] won a certification vote at the Downs Coulter Manufacturing Co. The CIO union replaces the United Textile Workers of America (AFL) as bargaining agent for the workers at the plant.

The AFL union called a strike of the textile workers before last Christmas when a new agreement was up for negotiation. In February a group of workmen, escorted by police, passed the picket lines and re-entered the plant, which has been in operation since then.

In Tuesday's balloting there were 96 votes for the CIO union, eight for the AFL, and there were six spoiled ballots.

Things Of Interest and Fun For Everyone

Christian Church Said Venture In Education

TORONTO, Aug. 16 — (CP) — A Yale University divinity professor today termed the whole Christian Church a "venture in Christian education."

Dr. Paul H. Vieth said that in previous years, education was regarded as prepartiaon for life.

In n address prepared for delivery to the World Convention on Christian Education, he said: "Perhaps there was a time when the world was sufficiently static so that in the first 20 years of a person's life adequate preparation could be made for two-score years and ten of maturity.

"But this is not the case today. If intelligence, rational self-control and competent social guidance are to characterize our civilization, we must have adult education— education which is coextensive with life."

Dr. Vieth spoke on the closing day of the conference, being attended by some 4,500 delegates from all over the world.

He said that one generation of Christian adults would solve the problem of Christian education of children and young people. Any program of Christian education for adults should include the teaching that the Christian gospel should be lived as well as believed. It should "constantly seek to understand what Christian living means in the home, the community and the world at large."

PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER

VOL. CI. No. 38 — WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 16, 1950

Night Baseball Scheduled For Saturday

Saturday night will issue in night baseball in Peterborough. Alex Sinclair, recreation director, announced today that the first game under the new lights will be played between Eddie Murphy's senior Petes and the New Toronto nine, a Viaduct League fixture. This game will be the second part of a double header.

Parade Arranged

A parade has been arranged to proceed the opening. This will form at 7.45 at the Empress Hotel. Led by the Citizens' Band will be a first car with Mayor M. J. Swanston, R. J. Bolton, chairman of the recreation commission, and commission members. Ald. Hurrell Dodds and Clare Collins, a second car with Vernon Dawson, George Clarke and Hugh Campbell, all prominent in the Peterborough ball club. Following the two cars will be players from the minor leagues and then the senior ball club.

Mr. Sinclair will act as master of ceremonies. After the official opening by Mayor Swanston at 8.30 the team will be introduced.

Firmly entrenched in second place of the Viaduct League, the New Toronto squad is flirting with Toronto Aces for the third position.

The Petes are at present the hottest club in the league, recently taking 11 straight victories, lifting them from a low fourth place nearly to the top. Oshawa stopped them Saturday.

LOST HIS ARM when gangrene set in following a fall from an apple tree, Bobby Clark, aged 9, is recovering in the Civic Hospital.

Examiner Will Accept Donations

Bobby Clark Benefit Fund Sponsored By Warsaw W.I.

The Women's Institute of Warsaw is arranging to receive contributions from the public in aid of the nine-year-old boy, Bobby Clark, who recently suffered the loss of an arm by amputation. They have appointed the following members as a special committee to solicit the generosity of the people of the county and city Mrs. Stuart Clysdale is convenor Mrs. Milton Drain is vice-pres.; Mrs. Emma Selkirk is secretary; and Mrs. Harold Ray is treasurer

Subscription lists have been placed in the stores of Hilliard Darling and Franklin Sidey at Warsaw, and also at the Warsaw Lunch, operated by Leo Krikorian.

The community is planning a Bobby Clark Fund benefit in their arena. Details have not yet been arranged.

Mr. J. A. C. Rogers has requested the Examiner to co-operate with the Warsaw Women's Institute in behalf of Bobby Clark and his mother.

"One of the first contributions we received was a five dollar bill from an American tourist who heard about the boy's grave injury," Mr. Rogers said.

Personal circumstances in this case, beyond the boy's physical loss, greatly appeal to the Warsaw women whose sympathies were aroused before Bobby fell out of an apple tree and broke his arm.

Gangrene developed, and the boy narrowly escaped death.

Mr. Rogers has been interested in the family through his connection with St. Mark's Anglican Church of Warsaw and his co-operation with Rev. W. E. Kibblewhite.

The Examiner will receive contributions to the Bobby Clark Fund through its business office. This unfortunate boy will be disabled for life, and will need the assistance of kindly people of the city and county who perceive the boy's plight and have the goodness of heart to help him.

Hi Mr. Motorist Watch That Child Don't Hurt Him!

Children will often forget to heed the rules of the road, simply because they are children and do not always realize the necessity for staying out of the motorist's way, like mother and father told them.

The following message has been received by the Examiner from someone who has the protection of children on the roads at heart:

"I saw you barely miss a little boy on a tricycle this afternoon and heard you yell, "Get the H . . . out of the way! Don't you know any better than to ride in the street?" He didn't answer because he hasn't learned to talk very well yet. So I'm going to answer for him.

"No, the little boy doesn't know any better than to ride his tricycle in the street. He has been warned not to, but little boys don't always heed warnings. Some adults don't, either, especially traffic warnings; for example, the one limiting speed of automobiles.

"I'm going to tell you something about the little boy. He has a mother who endured considerable inconvenience, anxiety and suffering to bring him in to the world. He has a father who has worked hard and made many sacrifices to make him healthy and happy. The supreme purpose of their lives is to have their little boy grow up to be a useful man.

"Now stop a minute and think. If you should kill a child, how would you feel facing its parents? What excuse could you possibly offer Him whose kingdom is made up of little children?

"Children, my hasty friend, were here long before you or your automobile were thought of. We could get along without you, but we can't spare a single little boy on the street."

LONDON, Aug. 16—(Reuters)—England was forced to follow on today on the fourth day of the fourth and last cricket test match with the West Indies.

In the second innings England had scored one run for none by the lunch break.

Ontario Expects New Record In Wheat Crops

Assurance of abundance of cookies, three-tiered cakes and a wide assortment of pies is implied in the announcement today that Ontario may harvest the greatest wheat crop in its history.

That is an estimate of the Ontario Department of Agriculture in its review of farm affairs.

The reports from county representatives of the Department indicates that "yields are generally excellent, and that damage from sprouting in the stook, a consequence of recent rains, is not so great as first believed. Fall wheat in some counties, is yielding up to 50 bushels an acre and oats 60 bushels."

Why worry about beef at 30 cents on the hoof, with that good news of an ample cereal stock for the first meal of the day, plenty of cookies in between times and pastry flour, for the last course of dinner?

There's no shortage of cakes and tea, or that old English combination, cakes and ale. This translation of the week's harvest report from Col. T. L. Kennedy's department may be a little short on proteins, but their is no shrinkage of carbohydrates. Or do you rate your rations according to dietary science?

Probably not. And in the same lack of understanding, housewives are going to hear about that tremendous crop of Ontario winter wheat, possibly more than 31,000,000 bushels, and they are going to protest: "But bread went up a cent a pound yesterday." Tell them that Ontario wheat makes only pastry flour, and they may retort, "But it looks like another bumper wheat crop in the west." So what,—or something.

And as for proteins, in afterthought, why not buy a pound of cheese a week, at the very least, and take up the slack the dairy folks are always talking about?

Centennial Year

Did You Know These Facts?

THAT on arrival at Port Hope in the summer of 1825, 500 emigrants under the leadership of Peter Robinson, set to work to repair the road and before the winter set in, had transported three large boats by road to Rice Lake.

THAT Peter Robinson reported on his first expedition up the Otonabee: "The first party I ascended the Otonabee with consisted of 20 men of the county hide as axemen and 30 of the healthiest of the settlers. Not one of these men escaped the ague and fever and two died."

THAT a small log house was built for each head of a family on their respective lots, by the end of the first summer here.

THAT Peter Robinson reported to the Government in England: "It gives me great pleasure to be able to say that they (the settlers) have been obedient and well conducted and that they have cleared and cultivated as great proportion of their land as could be expected."

THAT when Robinson joined the settlers at Kingston he found "some of them were suffering from fever and the ague occasioned by the excessive heat of the season, the thermometer having stood at 100 degrees in the shade the last 10 days in July."

THAT 500 embarked at Kingston on a steamer and landed the next day at Cobourg and the boat made the trip each week, bringing more to Cobourg.

THAT this information and a good deal more about the history of Peterborough since the arrival of the first settlers, can be obtained from manscripts, pictures, maps and other exhibits at the centennial display at the Public Library.

PETER is about as ordinary a looking cat as you would find anywhere. But Peter is a very unusual cat. In the first place, Peter is not a he. In the second place, Peter has just emerged from three months in a cold storage room chasing mice and catching so many she refused to eat meat that was placed in the cold storage room for her. But a pipe leaking ammonia gas chased her out of her 30-degree hideout and now she refuses to be caught behind a closing door of any kind.

Parents' Day On Playgrounds In Sports' Week

A feature of sports week, August 26 to September 2, on the playgrounds will be a Parent's Day on Wednesday. Alex Sinclair, recreation director, said today that he hopes to have fathers, mothers, daughters and sons taking part in the activities.

Arrangements for the week are nearly completed. Joe Kirkwood, golf artist in trickery, will open the week with a display of competitive golf Saturday, August 26, at the Peterborough Golf and Country Club. After the nine holes of golf he will perform his tricks which have brought fame throughout the United States and Canada.

The Ladies' Softball League all-stars will open the activities Monday night at the Bowl with an exhibition game with Toronto Sunnysides. The men's league will on Tuesday night play Turk Broda's all-stars.

Wednesday will be Parents' Day on the playgrounds and the lawn bowlers will sponsor the Black Memorial Gold Cup doubles tournament. The senior ball club will play a playoff Viaduct League game under the lights in Riverside park in the evening.

Something new will be tried by the soccer officials on Thursday when a Peterborough team, possibly the UE, will meet a visiting team under the floodlights in Riverside park. The opposition will either be from Toronto or Cobourg.

Friday night is lacross night with Red Creighton's seniors playing the first game of the playoffs.

Saturday will nearly equal the Wednesday in activities. The cricketers will be battling with a Toronto club at the Oval in the afternoon. In the evening at the Lions pool an aquatic show will be held featuring races, diving and the Peterborough Ornamental Swimming Club.

Car, Truck Damaged

A car and a truck were slightly damaged Tuesday when they collided at Sherbrooke and Rubidge streets.

John Yzereef, 39 Jackson Ave., told police he was driving west on Sherbrooke St. when a truck also going west and driven by Percy Wood of Keene, struck his front left fender.

Wood said he started to pass the car when Yzereef turned left. Police said the horns on both cars were not working and brakes on the truck were not good.

Peter, The Wise Female Cat Never Went Short of Mice

It was simple logic. Mice like cheese. Any cat with brains would go where the cheese was—even if it was a cold storage locker. Peter, a female cat, knew a good thing when she had it and stayed three months in a locker of Montgomery Bros., Robinson St., and wouldn't be chased out. But Peter had a discouraging experience while in the locker and now won't go into any room, no matter what its temperature, if a door can close behind her.

On the prowl for mice one day about three months ago, the cat wandered into the storage room and there caught a couple of mice. The two mice, and many more, were there because the room was full of cheese.

When plant workmen tried to shoo the cat out, she holed up in an unused drain and settled down for the summer in a cool 30 to 40 degrees temperature.

Men in the plant put out meat for the cat, but she was getting hers on the hoof, and disdained the offerings.

But finally the embittering blow fell. One day one of the cooling pipes sprung a leak and suffocating ammonia gas leaked out. Peter fled and the room was emptied of cheese.

Two of the men, Neil Harvey and Mike Kell, stuffed up the drain pipe Peter had used as a retreat, but the precaution was not necessary.

Peter had had her fill of cold storage rooms and chilled mice. She was back out in the warm sunshine and she liked it. Besides, she soon became the friend of butcher Bill Sturdy who dishes up handouts daily.

"All I have to do is call 'Peter,'" says Mr. Sturdy, "and she will come from half a mile away."

But the meals are served outside. Peter won't come inside, even if there is plenty of food. It's 20 degrees cooler in the shop.

Gardeners Show Gladioli In Market Hall

Thousands of gladiolus blooms, in dozens of shades, tints, and colors are decorating the tables in the Market Hall waiting for Peterborough's centennial flower show to start tonight.

The show, which will last throughout tonight and Thursday, is sponsored by the Peterborough and District Gladiolus Society.

Colors of the many spikes vary from pure white to dark wine and deep blue shades. Others are many-colored, having the outer part of the petal light, turning to a deeper shade or another color in the centre of the blossom.

Some glads are named after the person who first developed them, others (Elizabeth the Queen, Dieppe) after Royalty and World War II battle scenes. Yet others (Temptation, for example) bear names that might well have been filched from perfume bottles.

Most of the flowers are displayed in plain milk bottles, apart from those made into wreaths and hat decorations. However, a number are set up in florists' baskets.

Nine special awards, some in the form of trophies, will be presented, along with 71 prizes in the four classes—one spike, class A open, three spike, and two spike. A special award will be made for the exhibitor obtaining the most points in the junior division.

Judges of the glads will be Mr. and Mrs. H. Taylor, of Toronto. The show will be the eighth sponsored by the Gladioulus Society.

The numbers of Peterborough small fry who will be returning to public school or going for the first time are expected to be more than last year, but Board of Education officials cannot yet estimate how many more.

Last year 3,900 enrolled the first day, and at the end of the year there were 3,976 enrolled.

TOWN REBUILDS—The little lumber town of Cabano, Que., slowly rises from ashes. The community was two-thirds destroyed last spring in one of two disastrous fires that swept two Quebec centres. The other ravaged city was Rimouski which is also undergoing a rebuilding project. This photo shows some of the 95 new homes being erected at Cabano.

Canada Hints Some Help For UN Police

OTTAWA, Aug. 16 (CP).—The Korean war may lead to Canadian steps to back her United Nations obligations with ground troops in not one but two distinct ways.

It may also bring a new official statement on the present situation from the government next week when External Affairs Minister Pearson makes two speeches on the Pacific coast, one in Victoria Monday on "Canada and the Far East" and one in Vancouver which as yet has no title.

Mr. Pearson is expected to leave by train today and will probably fill out the drafts of his speeches on the long ride west. His office said it is not certain but likely that he will have something to say about Korea.

One question he could elaborate on if he wished is that of army support for the U.N.

Police Division

The current emphasis on national units for Korea, such as Canada's special force, has obscured but certainly not killed the earlier proposal that the U.N. recruit its own police division from volunteers drawn from the reaches of the world—including Canada.

This proposal is under "exploratory" consideration and discussion in London, Washington and at Lake Success and Ottawa has been taking an active interest in it. Officials here feel something may yet emerge.

One largely-overlooked paragraph in Prime Minister St. Laurent's Aug. 7 announcement that Canada will form a special brigade group for Korea or elsewhere was one in which he said:

Sounds Like Promise

"There has been talk of a U.N. police division of volunteers and this may in time work out and be of value for areas other than Korea. If and when such a division is formed along lines considered practicable, the government will recommend appropriate Canadian participation."

That sounded like a promise to allow Canadians to volunteer for such a force. It was an unusual encouragement which diplomats are believed to be following up in the current discussions.

Canada, officials say, is not taking the lead in discussions either about the raising of units such as her own special force for U.N. service or about an entirely distinct U.N. division.

But her interest in the latter has been made known to U.N. partners. It is conceived as a force for which Canadians as well as Americans, Britons, or any other nationality could volunteer. Similar to other nationals who join the U.N. staff, they would cease to be Canadian or American or British citizens and hold allegiance to the international authority. They would be sent where the U.N. decides they should be sent.

BABY DOCTOR—Dr. Robert H. Stevenson and his wife took time out during recent celebrations in his honor at Danville, Que., to take a buggy ride, reminiscent of the days when he made his calls by this mode of transportation. The doctor was honored by more than 400 "babies" he brought into the world. The celebration marked his 50th anniversary as a general practitioner.

Truck Out Of Control, Seven Ball Fans Hurt

NORTH AUGUSTA, Ont., Aug 16 (CP).—Seven young persons were injured early today when a truck in which they were riding went out of control and overturned near this town, about 10 miles northeast of Brockville. They were returning home from a ball game when the accident occurred.

Taken to hospital were Helen Kilmury, Doreen Grand, Courtney Lepage and Morley McGill, all believed residents of the district. Three other victims whose names could not immediately be learned were also taken to hospital for treatment.

No fatalities were reported.

Canada, New Zealand Conclude Air Pact

OTTAWA, Aug. 16 — (CP)— Canada and New Zealand have concluded a new air agreement, it was announced Tuesday.

It provides for direct carriage of traffic between Canada and New Zealand from designated airports at Vancouver and Auckland, and is similar to one concluded with Australia in 1946. It was signed on behalf of Canada by Alfred Rive, Canadian high commissioner in Wellington, and for New Zealand by Hon. F. W. Dodge, New Zealand minister of external affairs.

Canadian Pacific Airlines already has been designated by the Canadian Government to operate international air services in the Pacific, and, since 1949, has maintained a service between Vancouver and Sydney, Australia, with round trips every two weeks.

TORONTO, Aug 16 (CP) — Provincial Secretary Welsh and Col. E. J. Young, executive assistant to Premier Frost, will represent Ontario at a dominion-provincial meeting on civil defence scheduled to start in Ottawa next week. Mr. Welsh said he had already had five meetings with Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, federal co-ordinator of civil defense, and was pleased with the outcome.

Ask Civil Servants If They Wish Join TLC

TORONTO, Aug. 16 (CP) — Ontario's 10,000 civil servants will be asked if they want the Ontario Civil Service Association to affiliate with the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

Don McMaster, secretary-treasurer of the association, said Tuesday night ballots are being mailed to members and will be counted at the association's annual meeting Sept. 18.

The decision to hold the vote was made at a closed meeting shortly after the officers of the association resigned last month. They resigned when Premier Frost refused to discuss wages in the presence of Mr. McMaster on the grounds that he is not a civil servant.

Plan Air Force Hut Serve As 2 Churches

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 16 (CP). —A three-section air force hut, since 1945 known as Fingal Hall at University of Western Ontario here, is about to serve its third purpose since it was built for the RCAF bombing school at Fingal, Ont., during the Second World War.

One section has been purchased by the diocese of Huron and will be made into two Anglican churches. One church will be located at Dundas and Avondale streets, east of the city. Location of the second is undecided, but it is expected to be outside of London.

Remainder of Fingal Hall will stay at the university as a cafeteria building.

World Bank Aids Expansion In Many Lands

By FORBES RHUDE,
Canadian Press Business Editor.

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development is well-embarked on a new phase of operations.

It consists of looking at member countries and seeking what makes them tick economically, and what will make them tick better. This, of course, is done only on the request of the country concerned.

The first major step is a report just completed, called "the basis of a development program for Colombia" and it is the work of a mission headed by Canadian-born Lauchlin Currie.

The report is focussed on how the country's physical and financial resources can best be used, and what government and private action should be taken to that end.

Colombia, incidentally, is one of the countries of operation of International Petroleum Co., Ltd., whose head office is in Sarnia, Ont., and of International's subsidiary, Andian National Corporation, Ltd., with head office in Charlottetown.

Makes Other Studies

The bank, commonly called The World Bank, is making other studies, including one in Ethiopia with a view to possible financing of projects in Ethiopia's development program.

The bank's loans in widespread parts of the world totalled, at June 30, $816,445,000, an increase of $166,345,000 in a year.

These loans represent a concrete piece of world co-operation by more than two-score countries, (including Canada) which put up the money.

They are not loans of a relief nature, but are for developments which are considered sound banking risks, but which might find difficulty in getting money from private financial sources because of world upset. They are enabling the carrying out of projects vital to the countries concerned.

Of special Canadian interest are loans which are aiding expansion programs in Brazil and Mexico by Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Co. Ltd., and Mexican Light and Power Co., Ltd., both with head offices in Toronto.

THIS IMMENSE pavement frescoe, one fifth of a mile long and 30 feet wide, on the main hillside road leading to Ste. Adele en haut was designed and executed by Robert LaPalme, noted French Canadian artist and newspaper cartoonist. It was done to lend color to the current Ste. Adele, Que. Chamber of Commerce celebrations, consumed 500 pounds of weatherproof paint and will last it is said, for several months.

Warkworth Band Plays In Park

WARKWORTH, Aug. 16 — (ENS)—Warkworth band, under the leadership of Joseph Minicola, presented the second outdoor concert in the community ball park on Sunday.

Rain sent the band and large audience into the town hall soon after the program had started, and the concert continued under cover.

Alan Buchanan, who acted as master of ceremonies, opened the concert with an introduction about the progress of the band.

Francis DeCarrol, soloist of Miss Ina Bowen at the piano, sang 'The Lord's Prayer' and 'The Pilgrim's Way.' These were followed by the 'Floral Dance' and 'The Hills of Home.'

Plays Piano Solos

Miss Marjorie Massey presented piano solos, 'Malaguema' and 'Tea for Two,' which were thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

During the course of the program two of Mr. Minicola's pupils, Miss Evelyn Atkinson and Miss June Orr, presented trombone solos with Mrs. Douglas Knight at the piano.

A silver collection totalled $63.74.

Next Sunday the band will play at Hastings community park.

Children Recite Psalm At Mission Band Meet

SPRINGVILLE, Aug. 16 (ENS)—Springville Mission Band held its August meeting at the home of Neal Cathcart with 16 boys and girls in attendance.

The business part of the meeting was presided over by Joy Seymour. Arrangements were made for the September meeting to be held at the home of Nelson Edgerton with Hilbert Flokstra, Nancy Johnston and Mrs. Edgerton as the lunch committee.

The worship service was in charge of Mrs. Clifford Johnston and Mrs. Ray Kelk. Nelson Edgerton gave the temperance report and Nancy Johnston, the peace report. The roll call was answered by a verse of the 23rd Psalm, the successive verses taken in turn by the children. Memorizing this psalm has been one of the projects of the Mission Band.

At the close of the meeting the children enjoyed races and games and lunch served by Rocula Flokstra, Beryl Kemp, Billie Whitfield, Doreen Stevens and Reginald Edgerton.

Expressing his opinions "as a soldier and not in the capacity of governor-general," he said that "Communist aggression must be stopped now. It will go on if it is not halted".

Viscount Alexander said in an interview it will be necessary for the United Nations to build up large forces to push the North Koreans back "unless the Russians call it off".

Asked whether he might accept a second term as governor-general of Canada, Viscount Alexander replied that he had not been asked yet. His five-year term expires next April.

Blind Woman Visits Family in B.C.

VANCOUVER —(CP)— As she saw her family off to Canada from England 28 years ago, Florence Hutton promised she would save her money and come to see them some day.

She has arrived at her family's home here but she hasn't seen them. She never will.

For Miss Hutton—now 60—who flew here from her home at Coventry, England, for a visit, is totally blind.

Despite her handicap, she moves around her 90-year-old mother's small suburban home with confidence. She knits, sews and crochets.

The plucky Briton is unhappy about one thing only. She is allowed but three months in Canada. Immigration regulations concerning handicapped persons allow her no more time.

Wanted to Stay

"That was the immigration department's stipulation, and I shall abide by it," said Miss Hutton. "But I did so want to make my home here with my mother and sister. I thought we could end our days here together."

Besides her widowed mother and sister with whom she is staying, Miss Hutton has a brother living here. Another brother lives at Summerland, BC, and a sister at Calgary. Two brothers and sisters remain in England.

After trying for three years to make the trip to Canada, permission was finally granted by immigration authorities on the understanding she would ask no extension of the three-month limit.

Miss Hutton said her sight was poor throughout her life, but she worked 25 years as an expert masseuse with the British ministry of pensions. Five years ago she became completely sightless and had to give up her work.

JACOBY ON CANASTA

Once in a while the penalty for making an insufficient meld may be severe. For example, suppose you put a joker, two kings, a deuce and two eights on the table when you need 120. This only counts 110 as your opponents promptly point out.

It is a remarkable thing that although all Canasta players have trouble with their own count, no Canasta player ever has trouble with his opponents' count.

Now you have to discard one of those cards. You are privileged to discard the deuce or the joker, thereby freezing the discard pile, but in all probability you will discard a king or an eight.

Now, if the play proceeds, and neither you nor your partner can meld 120, you may eventually have to throw away your deuce and your joker. In most cases, however, one of you will get the count before this unpleasant thing happens, and you will be able to save your wild cards.

Incidentally, any time your partner does make an insufficient meld, you should make every effort to go down immediately, even though you must use nine or ten cards. Give your partner a chance to be out of his troubles.

If you have penalty cards on the table and your partner makes the initial meld himself, he is not allowed to touch your penalty cards, but at your next turn to play, you may meld your penalty cards in any legal manner you wish.

For example, you have on the table as penalty cards a joker, a deuce, two eights and a king. Your partner melds four aces and a joker. At your next turn to play you have the right to add your joker and deuce to his meld of aces, thereby making a canasta for him and leaving your king and two eights still as penalty cards.

Or, you may add your joker to his ace meld, meld the deuce and two eights, discard the king and be all out of penalty cards. Or you might make your best play, which will be to add the joker to his meld of aces, discard the king, and leave the deuce and two eights as penalty cards for one more round.

Then at your next play you can decide whether you should meld the deuce and eights together, add the deuce to the aces, meld the deuce with some other pair in your hand, or simply discard an eight and wait one more round with the deuce

You see you are never compelled to meld a penalty card, but if you don't meld it, you must discard it eventually.

Good Soap Chases Dulling Grey Film

By ALICE HART
NEA Staff Writer

Don't give a hopeless, it-can't-be-helped shrug if you discover a dirt-white film dulling your dark sheers and summer blacks just after you've done them up. They don't have to look that way.

These grey smears occur for two reasons — unsuitable laundering methods and wrong choice of starch. When these are corrected, your dark clothes should regain and retain the coal-blackness that fashion favors this season.

If you use a good soap or detergent that suds up well, there should be no film left to dim dark-hued garments. It's a good idea, however, to forego rinseless detergents for these clothes since any residue at all will interfere with action of the recommended starch. Thorough rinsing is a very important step in the procedure, regardless of what dirt-remover you use.

Since much of the styling of this season's sheer coats, overskirts, capes and full skirts depends upon crispness, starching is also a matter that deserves special attention.

Plastic starch is best for dark clothes because it penetrates the fabric through molecular action rather than simply forming a stiff film upon the surface. For best results, allow the garment to dry completely before dipping it into the starch solution.

Another advantage of plastic starch for blacks and navies is its virtue of lasting through many launderings. One maker claims his product will withstand from eight to 15 washings. Since applications are infrequent, the coating that forms from repeated starchings is automatically eliminated.

QUEEN MARY'S CARPET: "Can you tell me where and when Queen Mary's carpet will be shown at the Canadian National Exhibition? Who is exhibiting it? To whom do the funds go? What is the charge to see this carpet?"
The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire have bid $100,000 (which has been accepted) for Queen Mary's carpet and are spearheading the drive to collect the money to pay for the carpet. When the money has been collected it will be sent overseas to relieve the dollar shortage in Great Britain, and the carpet will be given to the National Gallery in Ottawa. The famous rug will be shown in the East Annex of the Coliseum and will be on view daily from 9.30 to 10.30. Admittance charge will be 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children.
PIE CUTTERS: "Where can I purchase pie cutters which will divide a nine-inch pie evenly? How much?"
The A. O. White Supply Co. Ltd., at 151 King Street West, sell these dividers for $1.00.
GRASS STAINS: "How can I remove grass stains from white flannel trousers? The trousers have been dry cleaned since the stain was acquired."
If the flannel trousers have gone through a dry cleaners and the stain is still as bad as ever it is not likely any home application or stain remover will budge it. However, try rubbing the stain with lard, then rinsing after 10-minutes in Tamblyn's Safe-T-Kleen.

Lives 86 Years In Manvers; Plans Celebration

BETHANY, Aug. 16 (ENS). — William Cavano celebrated his 85th birthday on Tuesday and is looking forward to family celebrations on Sunday, when the birthday party will be held. He and his wife also celebrated their wedding anniversary this year.

A son of William Cavano Sr. and his wife Sarah McMahon, he was born on his father's farm, August 15, 1865. This farm is now occupied by William Armstrong. He is the only surviving member of his father's family, two sisters, Mary and Minerva (Mrs. Aikens) and one brother James, all having predeceased him.

Mr. Cavano attended Galloway's school until the entrance examinations and then, for six months, was a pupil at Fallis' school, which then had 72 pupils on the roll, in comparison with today's 14.

Mr. Cavano has lived his entire lifetime in Manvers township, within a five mile radius. When he was first married to Miss Ada Beer, they farmed on the property now owned by Henry Jakeman. His wife died in 1904. Six years later he married Miss Emma Gillespie in May 1910 and this year they celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary.

Moved Ten Years Ago

In 1921 they purchased the farm property of the late Robert Patton, where they lived until ten years ago. At this time they moved to a smaller farm close to Manvers Station, previously owned by W. Johnston. In 1945 they retired to live in Bethany village, purchasing the former home of Mrs. Margaret Jemison.

Among his many vivid memories are the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway through Manvers; the moving and remodelling of Fallis' Church and its name being changed to Manvers. He is keenly interested in the changing methods of farming; the modern machinery which eliminates the hard work of his boyhood days; and wishes that prices for farm produce had been as good then as they are now.

Mr. Cavano enjoys reasonably good health, although a severe illness some 24 years ago left him rather crippled with rheumatism. Despite this, he remains active, working in his garden each day and this summer he was busy putting brick siding on part of his home, doing the work himself.

Enjoys Picnics

He is a decided baseball and softball fan, following all the home games, but his favorite recreation is a picnic on a ranch he still owns and where he goes trout fishing in the stream which runs through it.

He is a member of Bethany United Church and while living in Manvers, belonged to the Board of Session in that church.

Mr. Cavano has two sons by his first marriage: Leonard, who is employed with the Canadian Pacific Railway at Streetsville; and Ernest, a former reeve of Manvers township, who is a farmer on the property formerly owned by his father.

He has two granddaughters: Miss Joyce Cavano, who is nursing at Kingston Hospital and Miss Marilyn Cavano, who is a teacher in Bethany school.

Church Kitchen Dedicated At George St.

A dedication service for the kitchen of George St. United Church, which has undergone extensive renovations, was held on Tuesday afternoon, in the Sunday School Auditorium by the members of the Women's Association.

The Rev. Dr. James Semple conducted the short dedication service and Mrs. Charles Elliott, president of the Women's Association was in charge of the tea that followed. Mrs. James Semple and Miss Mary Elliott poured tea.

The table was covered with a Chinese banquet cloth and decorated with daisies and white candles. Baskets of phlox were also included in the floral decorations.

Mrs. Elliott was assisted by the members of the Social Committee of the Women's Association, Mrs. W. G. Benton, Mrs. H. Delahaye, Mrs. W. H. Fryes, Miss Thursa Allen and Mrs. W. J. Allisons.

Kitchen Renovations

Extensive renovations have been made. The walls have never been painted primrose yellow, which complemented by the white woodwork gives a very attractive appearance. The three windows have been outfitted with window boxes with dropped edges. A new inlaid linoleum floor has also been added.

Mainly for utility, but still adding to the general attractiveness, tables with new blue grey tops that form an L-shape around the new stainless steel heating cabinet have been installed.

The new stainless steel sinks, with a grill above and cabinets and counters have been built in. The counters are covered with blue grey arborite. The cupboards and pie shelves have been painted white and outfitted with chrome handles.

A new electric range and extra bake oven, and stainless steel coffee and water urns have also been added to the culinary equipment. Pull out trays now house the silverware and cups.

The two serving windows and doors have been completed so that they will be completely soundproof when closed.

Belleville Refuses Contract To Eastwood Construction

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 16. — The Belleville Board of Education, with the approval of City Council, Monday evening, at a special meeting, voted to award to the St. Lawrence Contracting Company of this city the contract for the construction of the new public school in the east end of the city.

The St. Lawrence tender, the second lowest of the four tenders received, was for $246,793, which with architect's fees, landscaping, equipment allowance and other incidentals, would bring the school cost to $299,657.

The lowest tender, that of the Eastwood Construction Company of Peterborough, was for $241,000, but in this price the cost of marboleum flooring was not included. This would be roughly $2,000, which would bring the contract price to $243,586, or a difference of something over $2,000.

Other tenders were from the Andre Construction at $249,963, and Bradford Horshal at $254,660.

In the original tenders called last March the lowest tender by the McFarland Construction Company was for $219,000, while that of the St. Lawrence Contracting Company was for $242,000. The Board of Education voted to award the contract to St. Lawrence, but Council refused to provide the money, claiming the lowest tender should have been accepted. Had the St. Lawrence tender been accepted last March the total school cost would have been $293,190.

Change in Plans

In the second call for tenders, however, there was a change in boiler specifications with the additional for the twin boilers specified, amounting to slightly over $2,000.

Passing of the bylaw to provide the school board with $300,000 to build the new school met with little opposition in Council, although Aldermen Haig and Clarke did register opposing votes.

"I do not want to appear to be an obstructionist," Alderman Haig said, "but I feel the lowest tender should be accepted."

He admitted that acceptance of the tender of a local contractor, local labor might stand to benefit, but he pointed out that in any event most of the labor would be local with the possible exception of skilled trade. He noted that local sub-trade tenders in some cases were higher than those of outside firms.

Goes to Board

The bylaw will now go to the Ontario Municipal Board for final approval, following which will be returned to Council for the third reading. To allow the school board to award the contract immediately Council gave assurance there would be no holdup in approval of the bylaw in its third reading.

Alice Irene Rumary Bride Evening Ceremony Monday

In St. John's Anglican Church, at seven o'clock Monday evening, Miss Alice Irene Rumary became the bride of Mr. Stanley Gordon McDermott in a ceremony performed by Venerable Archdeacon W. P. Robertson. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert G. Rumary of Peterborough and the groom a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. McDermott of Lakefield.

Baskets of gladioli and ferns decorated the church and white gladioli were on the altar. Wedding music was played by Mrs. Robert Neal and during the signing of the register Victor Coleman sang "O Perfect Love."

An original gown of white marquisette over taffeta, with bouffant tiered skirt, a scalloped neckline and long pointed sleeves was most becoming to the bride. She wore a crown of lily of the valley which held her fingertip veil of nylon net and she carired a bouquet of rubrum lilies and bouvardia. Mr. Rumary gave his daughter in marriage.

Bridal attendants were two sisters and a niece, Mrs. E. J. Doughty, matron of honor, Miss Beverly Joan Rumary, bridesmaid, and Miss Judith Ann Doughty flower girl. Mrs. Doughty wore orchid marquisette over taffeta with bouffant skirt in three tiers, similar to the bride's gown. Her headdress was a crown of fresh gladioli flowerets in gold shade and she carried a ring bouquet of the same flowers. Miss Rumary's frock was identically styled of pale green marquisette and taffeta and her headdress and ring bouquet were of fresh gladioli in a deep salmon pink shade. The flower girl also wore a frock with tiered skirt made of pale pink marquisette and finished with puffed sleeves. She carried a basket of gladioli and sweet peas and her headdress was of matching gladioli.

Mr. Charles V. McDermott was groomsman for his brother and the ushers were Roy Abbott and Walter Thom.

Receiving the guests took place in the Empress Hotel Kawartha Room where Mrs. Rumary and Mrs. McDermott assisted the bridal party. The bride's mother was gowned in teal blue crepe with Chantilly lace and she wore pink accessories and a corsage of sweetheart roses. The groom's mother wore a gown of grey sheer with butterfly roses on the shoulder and also completed her outfit with pink accessories.

When leaving for a wedding trip on which the couple will tour the New England states the bride was wearing a pink crepe dress trimmed with inserts of matching lace, white accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

The Great Charter was granted by King John at Runnymede on June 15, 1215.

DOROTHY DIX

Can Marriage Be Successful When Mother Lives There?

DEAR MISS DIX: Can two people who are sure that they love each other, having been engaged for four long years, hit it off O.K. with a third party, my mother, thrown in on the deal? I am an only child. My father died when I was only five years old and mother has been everything to me. I owe her everything, including my living. Naturally when I marry I shall insist that she live with my husband and me, and my fiancee agrees that he can and will get along with her and insists that everything will be all right. Why all this folderol about mothers-in-law? It scares me before I even start. HELEN.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: It has been done, Helen. There are exceptions to every rule. There are many households in which the mother-in-law is not first aid to divorce but the guardian angel of the home. And there are plenty of sons-in-law who love their wives' mothers as well as they do their own.

Tact Needed

It depends chiefly upon much tact and selfcontrol the mother has and upon her willingness to sacrifice woman's innate mania for running whatever house she happens to be in. It also depends upon whether your prospective husband is one of the possessive men who want to monopolize their wives. It likewise depends upon how much good, hard, horse sense you have in managing the situation and keeping both your husband and your mother feeling that he or she is first with you. And, believe me, that requires some doing.

If your mother is one of the bossy kind of women and will not only rule you, as she has always done, but will tell your husband where he gets on and off, you will never make a success of your marriage. Nor will you if your husband is so much in love with you that he is jealous of your affection for anyone else. And you will certainly mess things up and probably land in the divorce court if you are always throwing mother in husband's teeth and telling him that mother thinks we should do thus and so, and mother says we shouldn't do that.

But if mother is one of the rare women who can keep her fingers out of other people's pies, and if husband is an easy-going, good-natured chap, who likes company and doesn't object to a third party and if you are an adept at rubbing fur the right way, why, there is no reason why you shouldn't marry and live happily ever after, despite the handicap of having a mother-in-law in the house.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am married to a man who is good and kind, without any bad habits, and who is a good provider. But we are unhappy with each other and quarrel over little things. He complains because I like to stay up late at night and read and sleep in the morning and he has to get his own breakfast. He has to go to work early, but I leave the things on the table at night for him to cook. Also, he tracks in dirt, and when I scold him he only says: "What harm does it do?" And he leaves his shoes on the floor for me to pick up. Don't you think that he is unreasonable in these matters?

S. E. C.

ANSWER: No, I don't I think you are making mountains out of molehills and that if all you have to complain of in your husband is that he leaves his shoes on the floor and tracks in a little dirt, you are blessed among women.

If you had a husband who beat and mistreated you or one who was a drunkard whom you had to haul in the door because he couldn't find the keyhole or if you had one who was a philanderer who kept you awake wondering what pretty young girl he was out with, then you would have a right to bewail yourself, but you have no cause to weep over a pair of shoes or a mud or snow stain on the floor.

Also, it seems to me you are giving your husband a mighty raw deal when you won't get up and get his breakfast for him of a morning, and if he were not as patient as Job he wouldn't stand for it. If a man is willing to toil hard all day to support his wife, she might at least be willing to cook the food that he brings home.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: You have never given a logical definition of love. Please send me that information at your earliest convenience.

W. R. Y.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Nobody has ever given a logical definition of love because there is no logic in love. It comes and goes as it pleases and none know why they love nor why they cease to love, nor is there any way of reviving love when it is dead.

What's Right?

At a party where the guests are married couples, the husbands get off in one corner of the room and leave the wives in another and the hostess tries to get them all together.

WRONG: Pay no attention to the hostess.

RIGHT: The men should join the women out of courtesy to the hostess and to the women guests.

COOKBOOK OF THE WEEK

FOR EYE APPEAL and low caloric count, leave off the top crust of an apple pie and see the luscious fruit perfectly baked.

Waistline Saving Apple Pie Which Not Too Fattening

Every reader of the Examiner can now increase the scope of her pie-baking talent with the many suggestions in the fifth book of the Culinary Arts Institute series of 24 Cookbooks which are being presented weekly to our readers.

This book, called "250 Superb Pies and Pastries," follows the release of those storehouses of information, the Snack Book, Leftovers, the Cake Book and the Poultry Book, all of which are still available along with this latest release.

The Pie Book has all the run-of-the-mill recipes that you might want to check with your present piebaking methods and it also has a host of new ideas to delight your imagination and your palate. There are quite a number of variations of the good old favorite, apple pie. If you are among the fortunate who do not worry about what it will do to your silhouette, why not try the following tasty suggestion:

Dainty Apple Pie

3 cups sliced tart apples
2½ cups grapefruit juice
1 Graham Cracker Pie Shell
½ cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 recipe Whipped Cream Topping
8 maraschino cherries, chopped

Cook apples in grapefruit juice until tender. Arrange apples in pie shell. Mix sugar and cornstarch, add to juice and cook until clear and thickened. Pour over apples. Cool. Cover with whipped cream topping and sprinkle cherries over top. Makes 1 (9-inch) pie.

However, if calories matter you can follow the suggestion that accompanies this illustration and and leave off the top crust. Just sprinkle your fruit with water and you will have a delicious not-so-fattening pastry.

The Pie Book is available to readers for just 25c and one coupon clipped from page 2 of any issue of this newspaper at the Examiner office or from your Examiner carrier or at Braund's Home Food Markets. If you prefer to obtain your copy by mail, send 30c (5c additional for postage and handling) to Cookbook Department, Examiner, Peterborough All five books are obtainable in the same manner.

Jackie Robinson Expects A Trade

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Aug 16—(AP)—Jackie Robinson, famed Negro second baseman of Brooklyn Dodgers, said today "I won't be surprised if I'm traded to some other club before the start of the 1951 season".

Robinson gave this opinion amid indications of rising tension on the Brooklyn team, such as can be expected on a championship club favored to win the pennant but now lagging 6½ games behind the leaders.

"I can't tell you any more," Robinson said to an Associated Press reporter. "It may be no more than a hunch. I've just got the feeling. That's all".

Milton Gross of the New York Post, quoting Robinson to the same effect, also said Roy Campanella, Brooklyn Negro catcher, told him:

"Jackie's not the only one who's thinking that. There's a lot of fellows on the club don't figure they're going to be back. There's going to be plenty of trading this winter".

Millbrook Rate Struck At 40.9

MILLBROOK, Aug. 16 (6NS)—A general rate of 40.9 mills and a school rate, including school debenture and interest, of 26.6 mills, was struck last week by the village council.

Police Chief Scott asked the council for a ruling as to the hour of closing places of business within the village on Saturday nights.

The council decided to approach the Businessmen's Association before taking any action.

Stiffening Attitude To Delinquent Parents

WINDSOR, Aug. 16—(CP)—Essex county officials are stiffening their attitude to delinquent parents who fail to provide for their children. The failure of these parents will cost the county an estimated $98,000 this year.

C. A. Kelley, county clerk, has the task of making sure that as many fathers as possible, who have placed their children in the County's care, pay the required $1.40 a day for the maintenance of each child.

Mr. Keeley said in an interview that in many instances parents are actually unable to pay for their children. But he has brought to court other parents who are in a position to make the payments but refuse to support their children in foster homes.

Mr. Keeley said that the county bill for child care last year was $90,000, of which parents contributed only $6,000.

Drawing Cards

RED DEER, Alta. (CP). — Charlie Parker boosts business at his highway service station just south of Red Deer with a roadside museum. The drawing cards include a Lancaster bomber, an unused street-car, a 1902 Holsman automobile and an 1896 steam engine.

"20,000 Thieves"

ALTONA, Australia — (CP) — Eric Lambert, 28-year-old veteran of North Africa and New Guina, has been given a fellowship to write a novel entitled "Twenty Thousand Thieves." The title is the name given the Australian troops by William Joyce — Lord Haw-Haw. The book will be the story of the Australian campaigns in the near and middle east.

Many Attend Funeral Of Helen M. Rowland

Many relatives and friends of Miss Helen Margaret Rowland, who died on Saturday, attended the funeral Tuesday at the chapel of the Comstock funeral home. The Rev. F. W. Craik of St. James' Church officiated and pall bearers were: Johnston, Orville and Raymond Rowland, Herbert Staples, Earl and Charles Weatheritt.

Burial was in Little Lake cemetery.

Miss Rowland, who was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Albert Rowland, died at Port Hope while on her way to Toronto by ambulance. Miss Rowland had been employed two years as a bookkeeper at The Examiner.

Channel Blasted Out In Rebellion Years 1837-38 Becoming Closed Area To Stony Lake Visitors

By RICHARD F. CHOATE

CHANNEL AT MOUTH OF INDIAN RIVER, Gilchrist's Bay, Stony Lake, blasted out by Thomas Choate, to increase flow of water for mills he was operating at Warsaw. The blasting operations in the "jittery" rebellion days of 1837-38 gave rise to fantastic rumors of subversive activities and an opera bouffe court hearing in Peterborough. The dislodged stones remain precisely as they were more than a century ago.

Faring forth along the Trent Waterway route today we shall not travel far before we come upon evidence of maladjustments which speak of ignorance, or greed, or plain sloth.

At some points we shall find disturbing conditions of overcrowding. In our larger cities we would refer to such places as "blighted areas." A "blighted area" is a slum in the making.

A "blighted area," wherever it may be, in city or country, runs fairly true to general pattern Though we have heard talk of "clearance" projects, each of the large cities has its slums and will continue to have them so long as fiscal programs, specially those in the field of assessment and taxation, remain as they are.

But in the cities there are at least restrictive building bylaws and other regulations to check the overcrowding evils. Health regulations are directed against sanitary deficiencies; fire regulations against building concentrations producing undue hazards; but, alas, no set of regulations seems to have been revised by our civic statesmen which makes an end to the most serious menace of all where human rabbit-warrens exist—moral degradation.

Through measures of tourist camp registration and inspection, a good deal has been done, it is true, to mitigate some of the more positive evils. But it is not solely in the conduct of tourist camps that the undesirable conditions exist. There is another side to the picture. Belated regulations, in most cases, cannot unmake the errors in land utilization. Sites acquired perhaps years ago when lack of space was unthought of may now be utilized most undesirably for purposes of "packing 'em in." Over and over again, one is reminded of Sam Walter Foss's crooked "Calf Path" in the woods which eventually became a crooked metropolitan street. As always, wrong land use is a mother of evils. Violation of the inescapable economic law of diminishing returns may well bring with it not only destruction of a beauty spot for those who use it but destroy it as well for everyone else. The public should not and must not be deprived of the right to visit and enjoy our lakeland. Areas must be made available for proper use by transient visitors and facilities must be provided for community use by campers and cottagers.

At A Menacing Stage

In some cases the evils of wrong land use already are aggravated but in the main they are in an incipient but menacing stage.

In the face of the mischief that is descending or impending in many Trent Waterway areas surely no socially-minded person with eyes for the public welfare and the safeguarding of one of the world's finest summer playground areas will withhold support from overdue measures looking to a method by which we may do things "decently and in order."

If we are looking for an organizational scheme we may do well to remind ourselves of the concept of the Ancient Roman Law. We may thereby avoid the common fallacy of the belief that the two sides of the equation are "public" and "private." As Dr. John Dewey has pointed out, the true antithesis is ""private" and "official," the aim being the redressing of private - official balances in the interest of res publica, the public undertaking. This concept, we may observe, does not involve us in an intransigent individualism on the one side or in Communism on the other.

It is heartening to note the quickening of interest of governments, clubs and individuals in what are commonly and conveniently called conservation measures. The support given by The Examiner and other progressively-minded newspapers of the Trent Waterway zone has won commendation and gratitude. The Examiner's point is well taken that the central crux of the problem is that of "proper land use."

Ohio Is In The Bad

Both in Canada and the United States there is evidence of increasing clarity of discernment of underlying principles. Ohio has been the scene of what has been called "The Miracle of Muskingum." As "American Forests" puts it, "How Ohioans got together and put the stamp of health on the Muskingum Valley constitutes an irrefutable argument for land use projects—by democratic processes." It is proposed to look more closely at the Ohio achievement in flood control and reforestation, capped by a $600,000 recreation program—in a district which pays its own way.

A great deal has been and is being achieved in some Ontario areas through the progressive programs of recent years. Peterborough County has not been dormant But all said and done, it is only a beginning and a small beginning.

Unfortunately there has been no adequate over-all attempt to re-examine and re-state the Trent problem—to "see it steadily and see it whole"—since construction stopped about 1915-17 with the outbreak of the First Great War, leaving a narrow gap at the Georgian Bay end still closed to navigation. Trent Waterway questions fall within two jurisdictions—the Federal, with its control of navigable streams, and the Provincial, with control of Lands and Forests. A multitude of separate and sometimes conflicting interests must be reconciled before anything approaching organic unity can be achieved.

The purpose of the present article is to look at one small Trent Valley area in the light of the Logic of Events since 1915-17. Here we may find in microcosm a good many of the changes which have transformed the problem of the Little Trent of Yesterday into that of the Greater Trent of Today and that of the Unknown Trent of Tomorrow.

At the end of Gilchrist's Bay, Stony Lake, is the mouth of the Indian river (called by the Indians the Quaknegossippi ("Sweet Water,") and by the geologists and others, the Algonquin. In the survey of the Indian river itself, which is proposed we shall doubtless do well to begin with the headwaters. The river lies in an almost direct line from Stony Lake through Warsaw to Rice Lake, at Keene. It runs through three townships, Dummer, Douro and Otonabee.

Our present concern is with the rocky, picturesque area which for years has been a favorite picnic and fishing spot not only for Stony Lake cottagers and campers but for thousands of transient visitors who came to it in yesteryear by horse and buggy and latterly by motor car. Its swirling waters could be counted upon to yield liberal catches of small mouth black bass, and in the midst of it was the "old swimming hole."

The Indian river is an integral part of the Trent system, ages older than the Otonabee. Its history is written in varying degrees of geologic legibility in the rocks of the limestone formation which runs southeast to Kingston.

Evidences of Blight

In looking at some of the features of the Indian river which give it a unique place in the phenomena of the Unknown Trent, we must accept the unpleasant, with the pleasant. And it certainly is disturbing to contemplate some phases of Stony Lake activities in the present period of transition. Here we find evidences of the blight of overcrowding (still happily in an incipient stage) which might be multiplied distressingly should we look closely along the whole length of the Trent. Looming large among the problems of the Greater Trent of today is a question which had not arisen in the days of the Little Trent—that is the question of formulating intelligently a project to provide well-ordered recreational facilities. Clearly there is need of early and positive remedial action to safeguard the attractiveness of one of the world's loveliest waterways.

Just below Gilchrist's Bay is the rock-strewn channel blasted out in the rebellion years 1837-38 by the writer's grandfather, Thomas Choate, to increase the flow of water for the mills he was operating at Warsaw some six or seven miles down-river.

Summoned To Peterborough

The "jittery" condition of the public mind at the time when William Lyon Mackenzie was combatting the "Family Compact" is illustrated by the records of the channel-opening operations. Thomas Choate had purchased a considerable quantity of blasting powder to carry out the work, with a force of some 25 or 30 men. Irresponsible chatter was rife and into credulous minds there seeped a suspicion that something subversive was afoot. Thomas Choate answered a summons to appear before one of the brass hats of the period at Peterborough.

The proceedings were brief. Reading the warrant, the officer inquired: "What do you think about this, Mr. Choate?" The reply was in kind: "What do you think?" The court was terse and decisive: "I think it is a piece of damned nonsense" he rejoined tearing up the warrant and tossing it aside.

Thomas Choate had given quiet and effective support to causes of necessary reform but always recalled with amusement the superheated notions of a "gunpowder plot" in Dummer township. Indeed, it was in his mill at Warsaw that the volunteer soldiers found shelter. He was a friend of Dr. John Gilchrist, who had built and was operating the first mill at Keene, at the other end of the Indian river. Dr. Gilchrist was arrested at about the same time charged with being a sympathizer with the rebels. He was not detained. His course was triumphantly vindicated at the polls some four years later when he was elected as the first member of Parliament for the new District of Colborne. C. P. Mulvany, M.A., in his history of Peterborough County, remarks that Dr. Gilchrist was more a "fellow-traveller" than an active rebel, his sympathies being humanitarian rather than political.

TORRENTIAL SPRING RUN-OFF of water in Indian River above Warsaw in days before flods were stemmed by controls at Gilchrist's Bay, Stony Lake.

Dr. Gilchrist was engaged in lumbering operations and Gilchrist's Bay was named after him. In recent years signs have appeared in the area designating it as "Gil Crest Park"—a profanation of the historical verities which should not be countenanced. Gilchrist log drives in earlier years were floated down the Indian River to Rice Lake.

In the narrow channel in which the water rushed to White Lake, just below, "stop-logs" were placed to control the flow, these being operated by William Little Later the present concrete sluiceway was built. The spring run-off for years was of torrential proportions, often menacing the Warsaw mill dam, even carrying it away once or twice. For years canoeists not infrequently paddled from Stony to Rice Lakes.

Over the rocky 'divide" at the end of Gilchrist's Bay it has been customary for decades to portage canoes or skiffs in proceeding from Stony to White Lake just below, a perennially rewarding fishing ground. Last year the old familiar bridge was replaced by a new span nearby on the just-constructed road to the Nepheline Mine at the Blue Mountain (lakehead).

The land at the "divide" passsometime since into the ownership of a United States citizen. A considerable stretch of the Gilchrist Bay shore also was acquired by an American cottage owner.

Until the last few years there was freedom of access to the ground on both sides of the river at "the canal.' It was a favorite recreation spot for picnics and shore dinners Recently, however restrictions have been imposed on parties visiting the ground, the use of picnic stoves being forbidden, with regulations prescribing the part of the area which might be used.

It is not suggested here that three should be uncontrolled use of the picnic area. What would be most consonant with the conditions of the present age would be the carrying out of a public recreation program which would give the area fitting measures of control, and the facilities and equipment which would add to the enjoyment of visitors.

The historic significance of the grounds, and the use and wont of decades, clearly point to the desirability, and, indeed, urgent need, of public action to acquire a suitable recreation area, either through voluntary transfer by purchase, or, if necessary, by a reasonable exercising of the Right of Eminent Domain.

Farther along, the river at White Lake there has grown up a populous summer resident colony. In the main the sojourners have enjoyed themselves in freedom and apparently as a happy family But the space available for future building is limited and the public interest demands that there shall be watchfulness against an overcrowding blight in the years ahead.

With a little foresight and initiative this healthful Trent area might well be made to provide an object lesson in what can be done democratically and at relatively small cost to assure proper land use, promote conservancy measures and provide a fine recreational heritage for those who answer the call of the Greater Trent of today and the Unknown Trent of tomorrow

The Golden Age of Self-Helper and After

Nosing among lily-beds, rocks and stumps, with motor throttled to a faint largo purr, your boat slides to rest gently on a bed of silt. Summer sun and fitful breezes have overborne your senses You are only too willing to go on browsing in your balmy Nirvana.

But suddenly you "come out of it" with a start. You are at the end of Gilchrist's Bay — and there's a man's-size job ahead of you. The trail from this arm of Stony Lake leads over a hill of granite. It is a rocky and circuitous carry-over that somehow must be traversed before you can glide into White Lake and Indian River, where bass and muskies of fabulous size may be hooked with fabulous ease.

Scrambling to shore with your companion, you draw taut your muscles, strike a heroic Superjim curranesque pose—then look again at the boat. And at the trail. And wilt.

"Here's a road travelled since '37 the year of the rebellion," you ponder, "and still nothing provided in the way of push-buttons or shafting or gears to ease the white man's burden." You know every foot of the path; but, after all, wouldn't a reconnaisance be in order before coming to grips with the actual job? A few paces up the path lead you around a clump of shrubbery. Like a flash, the white light of a new truth falls upon you. You learn that it pays, sometimes, "to beat about the bush." For there, sure enough, is a cart with two wheels, two long, stout shafts, and a flat carriage on which a boat may be mounted readily—a home-built affair, but neatly painted and clearly akin, in the integrity of all its joints, to the Deacon's shay.

Trundling your boat easily over the up-and-down path, you are moved once more to bless the good offices of the Old Timer. At his shack on the rocks in winter, Alec Sharpe, hunter, trapper and guide, friend of millionaire tourists and barefoot bait-sellers, had labored over this cart. Alec, the keen-eyed individualist of 86 years, has his own concepts of "Settlers' Rights" in the matter of hunting and fishing—and all the King's horses and all the King's men couldn't break them down. But his cart bears witness to a complementary sense of social obligation. Perhaps, in this free-will offering to the community of a transportation system, there may be a primary lesson to the Master Thinkers, who on their traditional isles of Crusoe continue to weave fantastic webs of Economic Theory.

Alec's reward? It all depends upon these words, written by L. A Bryans on an oilcloth sign nailed to a tree:

Indian River Portage

When using this old portage
And viewing the scenes around,
Good folks, be not offended
When we tell you 'tis private ground.
Old Alec, the one-legged tender,
Lives just across the road,
And he built(as best he could, folks)
This cart to ease your load.
He's been here many a year, boys
(Now eighty-six years old),
And he's toughed it many a winter
In spite of the snow and cold.
So when crossing this old portage
Just think of the old man's cart
'Twill put a few cents in his pocket

✧ ✧ ✧

The above was written about 20 years ago by Richard F. Choate for the old Toronto Globe, on the staff of which he was then an editorial writer. The scene pictured above is at the site of the new Indian River bridge on the recently completed highway to the nepheline mine. "Old Alec" and his indigenous philosophy are missed these days. He and others of his resourceful type added measurably to the color of outdoors life at Stony Lake. "Stories of Old Alec's" prowess as a nimrod and angler will persist in the legends of Kawarthadom. And perhaps there will linger in the legends, as well, some reminder of the days before the Welfare State—the days when rugged individualism was not without an equally rugged sense of social values.

In our lakeland there are many old rugged portage paths like that over which Alec's cart was trundled. If the freedom of such paths is threatened by growing population pressure and misguided economics what is the answer to the problem? Is there any alternative to a democratically-ordered method of land use for recreational purposes?

Heavy Demands For Transports

PRETORIA, South Africa (CP) Heavy demands on South Africa's food resources are expected with developments in the current international situation. Large quantities of foodstuffs, far in excess of those for normal ships' stores, are being ordered at Union ports.

A number of freighters at Union ports already have received orders to buy three or four months' supplies. The destinations of the ships are undisclosed.

It is believed that South Africa will be called on to prepare for the provisioning of a greatly-increased number of ships from Britain and continental ports, bound for Korea and other possible war centres.

The Union, it is claimed, could not provide large quantities of meat and dairy produce for ships' stores without some sort of public rationing.

Supplies of white flour are out of the question, unless the country reverts to brown bread and earmarks wheat in the country for "United Nations requirements."

According to Dr. A. W. O. Bock, manager of the wheat industry control board, the importation of sufficient wheat to meet home requirements for white bread and other wheaten products in South Africa is assured until the end of 1951.

A combined wheat consignment of 150,000 tons from Canada and 54,000 tons from Australia for 1949-50 is ample to meet the demand for wheat products until the end of next January.

City Engineer Has Little Time To Plan For Future Developments

By HARRY THEOBALD.

City Council's letting of sewer contracts Monday recalls its warning last year that the 1950 program of projects would have to be authorized in 1949.

Nobody paid any attention to that edict, and probably the members of the council realized that they could not stick to it. The intention was excellent. It was aimed at preparing early a list of works for City Engineer Chalmers to plan in an orderly manner for this season.

Citizens wanting sewers and sidewalks and that sort of improvement were told rather bluntly that if they did not get their applications in before the end of December they were going to be out of luck and out of sewers for about a year.

Not Taken Seriously

That was one resolution no one took seriously. It was executively idealistic, but it did not register with the council's customers, the people building houses on new streets, or planning to build. They assumed as usual that they could get the municipal conveniences when they needed them and when they asked for them. Maybe they will. In fact it was intimated Monday that if the property owners on Cameron St. west and Orpington Road line up applications with the required number of signatures they can get in on the Mohan contract in that new south end section.

Incidentally, the council has been letting contracts for excess sewer work for the last three years. Otherwise it could not have been done. The board of works department has a limited establishment, and if it ever requires heavy equipment customarily used by contractors it would have to hire the machines it needed.

The department has a group of men who lay sidewalks, and they are a long way from being caught up with their job. Then as extra work for them, Civic Hospital board is asking for sidewalks that have become an ultimate necessity.

Four Contractors Working

City Engineer Chalmers will soon have four contractors under his supervision, Curran and Briggs on the Park St. drain job; Bennett Construction on street paving; and Blyth Construction and Peter Mohan on the separate sewer contracts which were awarded to them Monday.

The sewage disposal plant job and the new city hall are outside the responsibility of Mr. Chalmers. Gore and Storrie of Toronto are the consulting engineers at the disposal job, and Marani & Morris are the architects supervising the city hall.

The four contracts listed above are in addition to the City Engineer's departmental affairs, plus the daily round of interviews about building permits and all sorts of enquiries, most of which devolve to City Engineer Chalmers. With that round of detail there is scant opportunity of planning for the future as desired by the council in hopeful but ineffectual resolutions.

U.S. Anthem 19 Years Old

By PAT WHEALEN.

Amid all the argument in Canada about the official national anthem, citizens of the United States can sit back smugly. They have a national anthem, and although it's a little hard to sing, still it's an official anthem of the country.

Any good US citizen knows that "The Star-Spangled Banner" is the national anthem of the United States—has been since it was composed in 1814 at the bombardment of Fort McHenry. The story is almost too well-known to bear repeating.

Adopted 19 Years Ago

Unfortunately, they are wrong. "The Star-Spangled Banner" was only adopted as the official national anthem by an Act of Congress in 1931, just 19 years ago and 117 years after the hymn's composition. More than that, the origin of the tune is not known, but some experts say it was first written down by John Stafford Smith, an Englishman.

Anyway, the story of the composition of the anthem is true. On September 13, 1814, Francis Scott Key was aboard one of the ships of a British fleet anchored in Chesapeake Bay. Key had gone to the fleet to secure the release of an American doctor, William Beanes, who had been captured by the British when they burned Washington, DC.

As negotiations had proceeded to the point where the British commander agreed to release Dr. Beanes, fighting broke out, and Key was detained aboard ship overnight.

Formal Captivity

His captivity, however, was purely formal, and he was allowed to stay on deck and witness the shelling of the American Fort McHenry, one of the bastions which defended Baltimore.

The last thing he saw at night and the first thing he saw in the morning was the American flag, flying over the fort. Hence the opening lines of the anthem, "Oh say, can you see, by the dawn's early light, what so proudly we hailed at the daylight's last gleaming?"

Later, when Key was put ashore, he completed the four verses of the poem. It caught the public fancy quickly, and was soon set to music to the tune of "Anacreon in Heaven."

From that time, "The Star-Spangled Banner" was the unofficial anthem of the United States of America. The Army and the Navy enshrined it a niche higher than "Anchor's Aweigh" or "The Caisson Song," and in 1931 Congress finally got around to proclaiming it the official national anthem.

RAF Men Revert To Old Titles

BENSON, Oxfordshire, England —(CP)— Air Secretary Arthur Henderson has asked British fliers who may be thinking of leaving the RAF to wait until the ministry announces details of a new scheme for aircrew.

Henderson said that a plan introduced after the Second World War, involving among other things a change in rank titles whereby sergeant pilot became pilot II, has not worked out as expected.

"It has therefore been decided to introduce a new scheme which will include reversion to the traditional rank titles of sergeant and flight sergeant," Henderson told aircrew personnel at the RAF station here.

Sergeant rank would be granted to every member of aircrew when he received his wings. A full announcement of the new scheme would be made shortly.

Stirling Gets New Face To Lure Tourists In U.K.

By MURIEL NARRAWAY

STIRLING, Scotland, Aug. 16 —(CP)— Natural gateway to the western highlands, radiation point for the beauties of the Trossachs, Loch Lomond and Rob Roy's country, Stirling is looking to her tourist trade.

Shopkeepers and hotel owners are renovating their premises. One large department store, for instance, has added a restaurant to seat more than 100. Everything possible is being done to encourage tourists to visit Scotland's west coast to stay longer in Stirling itself.

An old historical town, clustering at the foot of the Castle Rock and guarded by the Sentinel of Stirling Castle, it has many beauties worthy of a sightseeing tour.

Great View

Visitors can climb to the battlements of the castle and look over a sheer drop of hundreds of feet to the agricultural plains stretching outwards to the Clyde.

From the opposite side of the battlements one looks over the roofs of the town to the heavily-wooded sides of Abbey Craig. This is topped by the Wallace Monument—tribute to William Wallace and his fight for Scottish independence against the English.

The castle and the monument attract 40,000 tourists a year.

One of Stirling's youngest councillors, Bailie Henry Burt, is fighting to interest organizations in a big advertising campaign that will really put Stirling on the tourist map.

Opium Poppies

R.C.M.P. officers said several crops of opium poppies had been destroyed this year. They are distinguished by their smooth cabbage-like leaves. The oriental poppy, which is quite legal, has a furry leaf.

30,000 Red Troops Flung Into Massive Drive To Capture Vital Taegu

Mortars, Grenades Mow Down UN Troops Hanging On To Vital Ridge; Waegwan Changes Hands Often In Fight

TOKYO, Aug. 18 — (Friday) — (AP) — Thirty-thousand North Koreans opened a massive drive on Taegu on the central Korean front Thursday. The Reds poured through steep mountain passes 15 miles north of the South Korean emergency capital. They were east of the Naktong River. Only two South Korean divisions stood between them and Taegu. South Koreans controlled the mountain-pass roads. The Communists poured out of an area west of the river which was heavily bombed by B-29s Wednesday. They jumped off from an area between Waegwan and Kunwi.

Their attack started a few hours after U.S. Marines and Infantry struck at the 12,000-man Red bridgehead on the east bank of the Naktong river near Changnyong, 23 miles southwest of Taegu.

The Marines had been pulled out of the south coastal area where they had made advances on Chinju. They were ordered back 20-odd miles to the east and then shunted northward for the Changnyong attack.

U.S. infantry took the Marines' places in the coastal line just west of Masan, southern port which is 27 airline miles east of Pusan.

It was on the north central front, north of Taegu, that the Reds were making their most dangerous threat, however.

Most Serious Threat

Taegu is shielded by a high ridge of steep mountains.

The sudden thrust was described by U.S. Eighth Army headquarters as the "most serious one to the United Nations in Korea."

It came despite a massed bombing attack by 98 B-29s Wednesday which was aimed to slow the Red offensive.

Leif Erickson, Associated Press correspondent at Eighth Army headquarters in Korea, said the North Koreans were attacking with between 25,000 and 30,000 troops.

In the path of the invaders are two South Korean divisions.

The sudden outburst to the north developed after U.S. Mar-

Hint Brigade May Train Outside Canada

OTTAWA, Aug. 17 (CP).—Brig. John Rockingham said Wednesday he will shortly establish his headquarters at Camp Petawawa to supervise the job of whipping Canada's special force into shape to fight in Korea or elsewhere.

He said the brigade group will in time be concentrated for final, formation training, the last of four phases of training before action. But that concentration point wouldn't be Petawawa, 130 miles from Ottawa, and there was a chance it might be outside Canada.

The four stages of training, the brigadier said, were basic, advanced, unit and formation. It was impossible, until he had seen the men recruited, to tell how long each would take. In a month he might be able to make an estimate.

At 5 p.m. Wednesday, the 13 recruiting stations across Canada reported they had enlisted 3,792 men and that another 885 were in the process of enlistment. That made a total of roughly 4,600, and enlistments moved from a daily average of 500 up to 765 yesterday.

Not So Good

Not so encouraging were the figures Defense Minister Claxton later announced as the results of the first three weeks of recruiting in the intensified drive to get men for the three regular forces. They got not quite 1,000 men between July 20—the day after cabinet authorized an expanded home defense program—and Aug 12.

That pace was far below the pace for Brig. Rockingham's force. He got almost that many men in one day—Wednesday.

Brig. Rockingham will confer with his regimental commanders and other unit leaders today and will introduce them to Lt.-Gen. Charles Foulkes, chief of the general staff. They will go shortly to the bases where their units are mustering.

Fire Destroys War Factory

SAN CARLOS, Calif., Aug. 17—(AP)—A spectacular fire and explosion Wednesday night levelled a chemical plant making material for the Korean battlefront. Adjoining buildings were damaged.

Owners said the plant may have been sabotaged. Damage was estimated at $250,000.

Repeated blasts and flames, forming a mushroom-shaped fireball, were mistaken for an atomic explosion by some residents.

The plant destroyed made processed petroleum products for the army and navy.

Phones, Goes To Jail

TORONTO, Aug. 17—(CP)—A telephone call is going to mean six months in jail for Raymond Hibbert. He was sentenced Wednesday after telephoning Mrs. Audrey Carley. He had been bound over to keep the peace March 29 after Mrs. Carley complained to police that he had threatened her. Mrs. Carley testified that Hibbert phoned her while she was visiting friends and later accosted her in a restaurant.

Beer Washing Guardsman Story Breaks Up Trial

LONDON, Aug. 17 (Reuters).—The story of a British Guardsman who washed his feet in a barrel of stolen beer "stopped the show" at a court-martial today.

Stern-faced officers of the Grenadier Guards broke into laughter as two young soldiers admitted that they helped steal the beer, then watched their comrades drink some of it.

The men said their comrades lined up to get a drink. Then, they said, one Guardsman washed his feet in what was left.

The soldiers, Guardsman David George James, and Pte. John Buchan, both 18, were sentenced to 56 days' detention. Both denied they drank any of the beer.

President of the court, Major L. H. Peacock, said: "I could understand it if you had stolen the beer and then taken part in the proceedings, but you took it and then let other people do the drinking.

"What is more absurd is somebody washing his feet in it—disgusting waste!"

Windsor Plans Hold Conference

WINDSOR, Aug. 17 — (CP).—A municipal industrial promotion conference, under the direction of the Provincial Department of Planning and Development, will be held here September 22. Invitations to the conference have been sent to municipal councils, chambers of commerce, planning board and individuals in Essex and Kent Counties.

James G. Dykes, city industrial commissioner, said the conference will be the second inter-county meeting of its nature in the province. A similar conference was held in Stratford in June.

Rangers Get Kullman In 2-For-One Trade

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—(CP)—Eddie Kullman, hustling right winger, today was obtained by New York Rangers of the National Hockey League in a two-for-one trade with Providence Reds of the American Hockey League.

Orval Lavell and Sheldon Bloomer, defencemen from the disbanded New Haven farm team of the Rangers, are being sent to Providence.

It will be Kullman's second turn in a Ranger uniform. The 26-year-old player was on the Rangers for 1½ seasons until he was shipped to Providence in December, 1948, in a deal that brought defenceman Allan Stanley, to Rangers.

Kettle Creek Headless Man Seen Still Roaming Wilds

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Aug. 17—(AP)—So you don't believe in ghosts! Well, maybe that's because you don't live near Road Hollow. For the headless Frenchman of Kettle Creek still roams the wilds in these parts.

At least, that's what the folks of Clinton county say. And a reporter and photographer for the Lock Haven Express, who questioned the authenticity of the legend, aren't saying yes or no.

Legend has it that the ghost belongs to a French explorer who robbed a secret cave of Indian silver centuries ago. The Indians, it seemed, avenged their loss by beheading the Frenchman when he returned for more silver.

Reporter Pete Stevenson and photographer Jim Patterson set out to track down the ghost.

On a chilly, misty night they parked their car near the bridge spanning Kettle Creek at Road Hollow. As they sat waiting, the only sound filling the night air was that of the distant pounding of a gas-well drill working the night shift.

Suddenly a flickering, wavering form reared up less than 100 feet away. They edged toward the eerie, reddish-white figure for a better look. A sound like that of a low, almost painful moan could be heard.

The figure glided away, up the bank and onto Road Hollow. It moved quickly in the faint moonlight. They ran to keep it in sight.

A metal film-holder fell from Patterson's pocket. They stopped to pick it up. When they looked up again, the headless Frenchman was gone.

Some say the Frenchman still roams the wilds of Clinton county looking for his head. Others say he's angry because "wildcatters" are drilling for gas.

Tell Ottawa Will Resume Negotiations

Welcome Mediator If Appointed Before Deadline

OTTAWA, Aug. 17—(CP)—Unions engaged in the railway labor dispute today rejected a government appeal for a 30-day deferment of their Aug. 22 general strike.

But they joined the railways in acceding to an urgent government request for resumption of their negotiations that have been broken off for a week.

The union reaction came today in replies to a letter sent the disputants Wednesday night by Prime Minister St. Laurent asking that negotiations be resumed and that, failing settlement by Aug. 22, the postponement be ordered.

In return, he said the government would appoint a special commissioner to mediate the wage-hour dispute.

Today's reply of the two Canadian unions, representing 34,000 of the 124,000 employees under strike orders, said a mediator would be welcomed—but before the Aug. 22 deadline.

Door Not Fully Shut

The Canadian unions' reply did not completely shut off the possibility of an eventual postponement.

While it declared it could offer no "encouragement" on this point, it added that "a great deal" would depend on what progress could be made toward establishing a basis of settlement before the afternoon of Aug. 21.

That indicated this was the latest time at which the union chiefs here and in Montreal could halt the ponderous machinery, in motion for several weeks.

The reply of the 15 international unions, representing 90,000 workers, was a straight turndown of the 30-day plea accompanied by an expression of their willingness to start bargaining again.

Silent On Mediator

No mention was made of the proposed mediator in the larger group's telegram to Prime Minister St. Laurent.

Following receipts of the union replies, there were indications in government quarters that an emergency cabinet meeting might be called for this afternoon to deal with the new developments.

Another major development today was a call from the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, representing 400,000 farmers, for the government to declare a national emergency and take over operation of the railways as a last resort against a strike.

Meanwhile, preparations for the crippling strike went forward. Tonight was to bring its first tangible effects on rail traffic, with an embargo going into effect at midnight on the railways' acceptance of livestock and perishable goods.

The two Canadian unions are the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees (CCL) and the Brotherhood of Express Employees (CCL).

Must Act Now

A. R. Mosher, C.B.R.E. president and spokesman for the two unions, said in his reply delivered to the Prime Minister this

Sorry For Tired Fish SPCA Asks Court Ban

ASHBURY PARK, N.J., Aug. 17—(AP)—Mrs. William Guillium, who feels sorry for tired fish, says a court ban will be sought against the goldfish-racing interests.

The new sport began in an amusement pavilion on the boardwalk of this seaside resort.

The track is made of several parallel, transparent water-filled tubes, with a live goldfish in each. Plastic fishes with big jaws pop up at the end of the tube to scare them—and they're off!

Mrs. Guillium, who heads the Monmouth County chapter of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, says the racers are overworked and in danger of becoming groggy.

THESE BEAUTIFUL GLADIOLUS being admired by Mrs. J. H. Leslie, secretary of the Peterborough and District Gladiolus Society, won second prize in the display competition. The display was entered by Herbert Cardwell of Wallace's Point. He won several other prizes in the competition on show today at the Market Hall which is considered by far the best seen in Peterborough in some years.—(Parks Studio Photo)

32 UN Prisoners Shot To Death, Nearly Rescued

By HAL BOYLE

WITH U.S. 1st CAVALRY, Korea, Aug. 17—(AP)—Thirty-two American prisoners with hands tied behind their backs were shot dead today by Red Koreans on a hill west of Waegwan just before a U.S. patrol reached the spot.

The Reds tried to kill 37 prisoners in all. But five lived to tell the story. They said the Communists also massacred the wounded as they lay moaning on the ground.

This was in the area bombed Wednesday by 98 B-29s in the heaviest air raid of the war.

The execution of the prisoners was on a hill captured by the Reds this morning.

So Close To Safety

Their bodies were found on a ridge recaptured this afternoon.

The American prisoners were killed only two hours before troopers retook the ridge. The hill had been fought over for three days.

The 37 Americans were mowed down by bursts of gunfire.

Three North Korean prisoners were taken after a sharp fire fight nearby. One of them was identified by an American survivor as a member of the squad of killers.

Regimental officers said he would be sent back with recommendation that he be tried as a war criminal.

Police Detain Paris Designer

NICE France, Aug. 17 (AP).—Police Wednesday detained modiste Elsa Schiaparelli and questioned her for hours about some jewels she had reported stolen. She was released Wednesday night and police said no charges would be placed against her, but that they would confiscate $1,485 in United States currency.

One of the world's leading designers of women's clothing, Mme. Schiaparelli was stopped by police as she was about to board a plane for Tunis. She reported Aug. 6 that jewels worth 3,000,000 francs (about $8,500) had been stolen from her. Police said some of these jewels were found in her luggage Wednesday.

Police said they found the $1,485 while searching her baggage. Schiaparelli, police said, will have to pay an administrative fine equal to $148.50 for failing to declare the money.

The 53-year-old fashion leader said she had found three of the four pieces of jewelry she had reported stolen, but that the most valuable piece actually was stolen. She hadn't thought it necessary to inform police because the most important piece still was missing.

Find 5th Body In Ruins Of Quebec Cruise Ship

TADOUSSAC, Que., Aug. 17—(CP)—The wreckage of the St. Lawrence river cruise ship Quebec which burned here Monday night gave up another body today. This brought the death toll to five. Quebec Provincial police said the fourth and fifth victims of the fire were believed to be Dr. and Mrs. Pickens Smith McCollum of Clemson, S.C.

The bodies were recovered near the cabin which the McCollums had occupied.

Early Wednesday night the fourth body, believed to be that of a woman, was recovered by police from the Canada Steamship Lines pleasure vessel.

The fifth was located not far away by a wrecking and salvage crew working over the burned hulk of the 7,000-ton ship from which more than 400 passengers and 150 crew members disembarked amid smoke and flames Monday evening. The last body was reported whole.

90 Per Cent List Complete

Frank Findlay, Quebec manager for Canada Steamship Lines, said today "about 90 per cent" of the 450 passengers aboard the fire-wrecked cruise ship Quebec have been accounted for "directly." Others have been traced only "indirectly."

Mr. Findlay indicated that at the moment it was impossible to make up a complete list of passengers who disembarked.

At first Canada Steamship Lines announced everybody aboard the stricken vessels had been accounted for. Then three persons were reported missing and later three bodies—those of a man, woman and a child—were discovered.

They were tentatively identified as Mr. and Mrs. Norman Shapiro of the town of Mount Royal, Que., and son, Leonard. Another Shapiro boy, Bernard, escaped.

Burned Shack Bodies Mystery

PENNS GROVE, N.J., Aug. 17 (AP)—A blood-stained rowboat, a shotgun, half a human body, a skull and the smoking ruins of a shack are clues in a mystery here.

The shack belongs to Raymond Livesay, 55, a contractor. Last Tuesday, police were told, Livesay took Michael Derrow, 38, a carpenter in his employ, to the cabin for a fishing party.

Neither man has been seen since, said police.

Wednesday, Joseph Hand, another employee of Livesay's, went to the cabin for keys to open the office. He told police he found the cabin burned.

Inside it were the lower half of a man's body, a set of keys and a gold watch bearing the initials M.K.

Nearby, in a creek, was a bloody rowboat. In the rowboat were part of a human skull and a shotgun, which police said had apparently been fired recently.

Takes 2 Cars To Kill Cow On Busy Highway

FORT ERIE, Aug. 17—(CP)—It took two cars to kill a cow on No. 3 highway near here today.

On the busy Detroit-Buffalo route, the wandering cow was hit a grazing blow by an automobile driven by Dominic Mesi, 24, of Buffalo, N.Y. Then a second eastbound vehicle driven by Reuben Mosier, 23, of Rochester, N.Y., struck and killed the animal.

Damages: $7 to the Mesi car; $125 to the Mosier machine; and $225, value of the cow set by owner William Gilmour.

Farm Federation Urges Ottawa Operate Railways

OTTAWA, Aug. 17—(CP)—The Canadian Federation of Agriculture, representing 400,000 Canadian farmers, today declared that the government should take over operation of the railways as a national emergency if the threatened Aug. 22 strike materializes.

The federation, in a statement which called the prospects of a strike "a national calamity," said the looming walkout must not be permitted to happen "under any circumstances."

"If no settlement can be reached, it is reasonable to suggest that the government should, as a last resort, declare a national emergency and take over operation of the railways."

The federation, headed by H. H. Hannan, said the Canadian farmers "note with increasing alarm the failure of the contending parties in the present railway labor dispute to settle their differences."

"They are critical of the uncompromising statements made by both parties to the dispute.

"Farmers, in common with the great proportion of Canadian citizens, believe that a strike of such magnitude as is now threatened in the transportation field would be a national calamity. Certainly it would spell great economic loss for the agricultural industry."

Appealing to both the railway management and the unions to settle the dispute promptly, the CFA echoed the farm feeling of serious concern about the dispute outcome.

UK Destroyer Fights Red Gun Duel

Action Takes Place Near Hong Kong With Shore Batteries

HONG KONG, Aug. 17 — (AP)—The British destroyer Concord and Chinese Communist shore batteries fought a 30-minute gun duel today at the approaches to Hong Kong.

It was the second clash between British warships and Red artillerymen in the area. After the Concord battle it was officially reported the Navy frigate Whitesand Bay exchanged fire Aug. 2 with gun emplacements on Lingtin Island.

The Concord said it fired in self-defence after Red guns on Tailami, Puntin and Lingting islands opened up.

Royal Navy officers said there was one minor casualty and no damage to the ship as it steamed into Hong Kong.

Quick to Fire

Red shore batteries have been quick to fire on ships recently. On three successive days last week merchant ships were shelled. These were British, American and Norwegian vessels.

It was estimated the Reds fired three-rounders at the Concord. The destroyer fired its much-more-powerful 4.7-inch guns.

This was the first reported exchange of gunfire between a British warship and the Chinese Communists since April, 1949. At that time, the cruiser London, the destroyer Consort and the frigates Black Swan and Amethyst came under Communist shore fire in the Yangtze river. In all, 43 British sailors were killed and more than 80 wounded in the 1949 engagement.

Believe Teacher Australia-Bound

TORONTO, Aug. 16.—As the search for a missing Danforth Technical School lecturer and a 31-year-old married woman entered its second week Wednesday police indicated they had ruled out the possibility of foul play.

Alfred Greene, 38, and four-times-married Mrs. Beatrice Reason, who had been a student in Greene's night school classes, were last seen Aug. 8. Since then, police have found that both had transferred funds to Australia, where Mrs. Reason was born and lived for about 20 years. They now believe both are on their way to Australia.

Greene, police learned, converted about $300 to pounds sterling and had it credited to himself at a hotel in the town of Tully in North Queensland. Mrs Reason reportedly transferred $600 to Australia a short time ago.

The search today is centred in New York. Passenger lists of planes and ships from New York to Australia are being checked. A systematic check also is being made of New York hotels.

Navy Denies Reports Strange Destroyer

HALIFAX, Aug. 17 — (CP) — The Navy today denied any knowledge of a foreign destroyer operating off the Canadian east coast.

A newspage story in the Halifax Chronicle-Herald said earlier that the Navy was keeping a close watch on a foreign destroyer sighted off Halifax yesterday.

The Navy statement, issued by Commander F. W. Lucas, chief of staff to the flag officer Atlantic Coast, said the carrier Magnificent returned to Halifax Wednesday ahead of schedule because of fog conditions which made flying training impossible.

The statement added that the Royal Navy sloop Snipe is paying a series of courtesy calls at various maritime ports and may possibly have been mistaken for an unknown destroyer.

MP's Criticized For Stand On Labor Votes

The Oshawa and District Labor Council charged last night that the voting records of Walter C Thomson and J. M. James, MPs for Ontario and Durham respectively, in the House of Commons "indicate they have failed to represent the interests of labor." It was decided to urge council affiliates "to intensify political education among their members with the object of securing sufficient support at the next election for candidates who are pledged to work for interest of the working people of these two constituencies."

Members maintained that during the past session of Parliament the members for Ontario and Durham ridings consistently voted against enacting certain measures in favor of labor, or absented themselves when items of interest to labor were decided by vote. They also pointed out that during the election campaign the two members promised to serve the interest of all their constituents.

"They turned their campaigning to labor indicating they would be our spokesmen in parliament," said M. J. Fenwick, secretary-treasurer, "and quite a number of workers fell for it because they were elected."

Noting from a PAC-CCL (political action committee of the Canadian Congress of Labor) pamphlet, Fenwick said that out of four certain issues voted upon during the last session of Parliament the member for Ontario Riding voted against once and was absent when the other three votes were taken while the Durham member was absent once and voted "against" in the remaining three votes.

How They Voted

The four issues involved, said Fenwick, and how the two members voted were as follows:

1. Price Control—C.C.F. motion to reimpose selective price control. Thomson, against; James, absent.

2. Retirement payments to C N.R. President Vaughan (to disclose how much the government paid to the retired C.N.R. president). Thomson, absent; James, against.

3. Voluntary Revocable Check-off of union dues. Thomson, absent; James, against.

4. Reinstatement and Compensation Bill. Thomson, absent; James, against.

"Mr. Thomson wasn't even there to be against," Fenwick said, "and this is the man who is aspiring to become the Premier of Ontario . . . Need I say more".

Trying To Settle Formosa Policy

LONDON, Aug. 17—(AP)—The Big Three western foreign ministers will try to hammer out a common policy next month over what to do about Formosa—possible powder keg of a third World War.

Informants said the ministers' study will be preceded by a full-scale discussion of the problem by the United States and Britain.

The two countries have been at loggerheads over the status of the island, 110 miles off Communist China's mainland but still occupied by Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist Government.

The American, British and French foreign ministers are meeting in New York Sept. 9. Their parley will be followed by a session of the 12-country Atlantic Pact Council. The Atlantic Allies are bound by their treaty to consult each other on crucial foreign policy issues.

Weeks of discussion between American and British officials both here and in Washington so far have failed to produce a mutually-acceptable policy on Formosa.

The stalemate revolves around the order of President Truman last June dispatching the U.S. Seventh Fleet to protect the island against a possible Red Chinese attack. At the same time the President called on the Nationalists to stop bombing the Chinese mainland and ships trading with it.

He did so in the hope of localizing the Korean war and neutralizing Formosa, but it failed to work out.

Believe Soviet Prepared To Grab Off North Korea

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP)—Many of the best-informed American officials now believe Russia will openly grab off North Korea—above the 38th parallel—rather than let a victorious United Nations force restore peace and unity to the country. It is assumed here that the precise steps to be taken have been under negotiation between the Soviet Union and Communist China. It is also assumed they will act jointly when the time comes.

United States government officials, however, give little credence to reports which have come mainly from Chinese Nationalist sources that Russian vice-premier V. M. Molotov has been in Peiping, Red Chinese capital, negotiating with Premier Mao Tse tung and other officials on this and related problems.

Whether Molotov has or has not been there, the belief of responsible authorities here is that the Soviets and Chinese must be deeply involved in fateful talks at this time, concerning not only Korea but Formosa and other Far Eastern political questions.

Realize Determination

Increasing evidence of the buildup of UN power in Southern Korea, it is believed, must now give the Russians and Chinese virtual proof of the determination of the U.S. and other countries associated in the Korean struggle to drive the invaders out of the south.

For the United Nations the prospect of eventual success in South Korea has already raised the question, thus far unanswered, as to what UN forces should do when they reach the 38th parallel. Should they then stop short on the theory that the invader has been driven out of South Korea? Or should they drive on in the belief that only by crushing the Communist military power can real peace be established in Korea?

The Only Way

There is widespread belief here that the latter course is the only defensible one. This belief, however, is based on an assumption that neither Russia nor Communist China will become directly engaged in the Korean conflict.

If the Russians, perhaps in collaboration with the Chinese Reds, reoccupy Northern Korea which the Soviets left about two years ago, the whole problem for the UN powers will take on a new color. They then will have to decide whether to accept Russian domination of Northern Korea as a fact to live with, or whether to try to drive the Red occupation forces out—which would mean fighting with Russia directly and which appears to be an unlikely course.

ines and infantry began a counter-attack in the Reds' Changnyong river-crossing bulge

The Marine-Army attack centred on a steep hill near Changnyong, 23 miles southwest of Taegu and produced some of the finest fighting of the war

The Marines were withdrawn 27 miles from their Korean south coastal gains and moved to the Naktong river line.

Hit At Hill

They hit at a craggy hill position as part of an offensive against the bridgehead which the North Koreans have held for 12 days south of Changnyong.

Stan Swinton, AP correspondent attached to U.S. infantry which now defends the south coastal area, reported a build-up of Red forces there.

Swinton said an attack on U.S defence positions west of Masan, 27 airline miles east of Pusan, the No. 1 U.S. seaport on the southeastern tip of the Korean peninsula, was building up.

Fire On Wounded

U.S. artillery poured a constant barrage into the Red positions on the hill. Some of the Communists came halfway down the slope to fire on stretcher-bearers carrying out the wounded Marines.

When the stretcher bearers ran short, South Koreans were pressed into service to help evacuate the Marine wounded.

Brig.-Gen. Edward Craig, the Marine commander, said the battle is "stiffer than I thought it would be but I think we will be able to move ahead."

Associated Press correspondents Don Whitehead and Jack Macbeth reported the Marines hung on to part of "slaughter-house hill."

The hill commands one of the vital sections of the Naktong river bridgehead in the heart of the 120-mile Korean battleline. It is about 26 miles southwest of Taegu, the South Korea Republic's emergency capital.

Badly Outnumbered

Correspondent Macbeth said the Marines were badly outnumbered but grabbed and hung to part of the heights in a bloody fight.

Elements of the U.S. first Marine brigade jumped off at dawn Thursday and stormed the hill.

Macbeth said by mid-afternoon Thursday they had secured part of the ridge and Marine reinforcements were pouring into the battle.

U.S. 24th infantry division troops were held back at the start of the new offensive, under battle plans. Then they were rushed into the fight on the Marines' right flank. There were no reports on their progress late Thursday.

Throughout the day Marine and air force fighters pummeled the top of the hill with rockets, machine-gun fire and bombs.

Most of the hill was enveloped in smoke during the bitter fighting

See-Saw Attacks

North of the Reds' eastern bank toe-nold, in the area pounded Wednesday by B-29s in their mass bombardment of 60,000 ground troops, allied and enemy forces see-sawed in attacks and counter-attacks around Waegwan.

Fighting swirled around the city of Waegwan.

The U.S. first cavalry division pushed up a hill outside of Waegwan that it had lost earlier to Reds attacking from the bombed area.

The South Korean 1st Infantry Division smashed into the Reds east of the Naktong and next to the B-29 target area, gaining more than a mile to the northwest.

Waegwan changed hands frequently. Both sides tried to gain heights commanding the town of 20,000 and ignored the rubbled city itself as a battle prize.

Evacuate South Koreans

On the sea of Japan coast, 55 miles east of Waegwan, U.S. landing craft evacuated the South Korean 3rd Infantry Division from the Yongdok-Pohang area.

A staff officer said there were signs of a Red buildup in the eastern area. He said the North Koreans might try to attack westward from Pohang toward the allied communications base of Yongchon to ease pressure on troops committed to battle in the west along the Naktong.

Neither army intelligence nor the air force had yet evaluated results of the B-29 saturation raid Wednesday on the Reds' offensive buildup area west of the Naktong around Waegwan.

Some American army patrols probed several miles west of the Naktong without meeting any Reds. But one patrol drew such heavy fire it was unable to move forward.

The fact the Communists were able to attack across the Naktong in the 1st cavalry sector indicated many of the 60,000 Red troops in the area had recovered from terror effects of the bomber raid.

But the main action of the war was centred in the roaring battle for the hills in the Changnyong bridgehead.

Heavy Going

AP correspondent Don Whitehead reported Thursday afternoon Marines were having heavy going against reinforced Communist troops now holding southern reaches of the high ground. The 12,000 Reds in the seven-mile deep and six-mile-long bridgehead have heavy artillery and mortars.

American 24th Division troops held positions on the northern crest of the hills with their right flank anchored on the river. They have alternately gained and lost in smashing against the centre and south.

Each night the Reds have been able to push reinforcements across the muddy river. The Communists have succeeded in nullifying previous gains made by Americans in the 12-day battle with infiltration and frontal assaults.

Gen. MacArthur's headquarters said the 24th Army Division beat back two Red attacks without loss of ground in the Changnyong sector Wednesday.

Hamilton Park Widely Used Kiwanis Told

Northend children are in large numbers using Hamilton Park south of Parkhill Rd. near Monaghan Rd. to play in the wading pool and on the equipment provided, Bob Merritt, chairman of the Kiwanis Club Parks Committee reported at a luncheon of the club today.

He said attendance has jumped 400 per cent over last year. Wednesday afternoon a count revealed 187 children were cavorting in the park.

Mr. Merritt asked members of the Kiwanis Club to help tonight to do more work to whip the park into final shape.

Local Kiwanis will be attending a meeting of representatives of six Kiwanis Clubs of the district in Toronto Sunday to explore ways of raising money to further club work.

Members of the local club will also be travelling to Cobourg Aug. 22 to a meeting where nominations will be made for a new lieutenant-governor of District 6 which stretches from Kingston to Toronto.

Art Bacon, chairman of the National Kids' Day Committee, said plans are being made now for the day which will be held September 23 in United States and Canada. The purpose of the day is to call the public's attention to youth in general and the underprivileged children in particular.

At this time provincial police said they had been advised by C. S.L. that two United States passengers of the fire-wreck cruise ship have not been located.

Discovery of the two new victims was made shortly before the twisted, water-filled hull was to have been towed from this lower St. Lawrence port to Lauzon, near Quebec city, where the Quebec was built.

Another search of the ship will be made before tugs take her in tow for her last trip out of the Saguenay.

Lumberjack Contest

KUHMO, Finland — (CP —The annual lumberjack contests here had a few twists rarely seen in Canada's northland. One competition involved walking across a 100-foot-wide river on a swaying cable. Other contests included shooting rapids on a log and crossing the river on a log, paddling with a pike-pole.

Girls' Town

FAURE, South Africa — (CP) —Started as an experiment modelled after "Boys' Town" in the United States, a "Girls' Town" was organized here last September and is proving a huge success. Underprivileged girls from all over the Union are training as nurses, dressmakers and clerical workers.

LONDON, Aug. 17 (CP). — Winston Churchill will address the country for 20 minutes by radio Aug. 26, probably on the subject of Britain's defence crisis. He cancelled plans to issue a statement today about his vain attempt to persuade Prime Minister Attlee to recall parliament immediately.

morning that a mediator would be welcomed if appointed before the deadline and without the postponement.

"It is our firm conviction," he said, "that a competent mediator could either establish a basis for settlement or determine the unlikelihood of being able to do so before the strike deadline."

He said the Canadian brotherhoods were in "complete accord" with the request for resumed negotiations. Their negotiating committee would meet railway management in Montreal or elsewhere on an hour's notice and work around the clock in search of agreement.

Not Acceptable

But on the postponement appeal, he said communications from union members all over Canada this morning indicated that this would not be acceptable to them.

It was clear, he said, the workers were showing "great resentment at both the delay and the imputations of disloyalty and bad faith contained in management's propaganda."

Mr. Mosher's letter concluded: "The government will appreciate the fact that nearly 14 months have elapsed since our requests were submitted to the railways and I regret that, on the basis of these communications, I am unable to offer any encouragement that the request can be accepted in the event of failure to reach an agreement. A great deal would depend, of course, on what progress can be made toward establishing a basis for settlement before the afternoon of Aug. 21, 1950."

The government's appeal to the unions and management was made in a letter delivered to them last night after two days of cabinet meetings.

Ready For Discussion

Shortly afterwards, the two major railways announced at Montreal they were prepared to resume discussions with the unions. These were broken off last Thursday, when the companies' "final" offer was rejected by the 17 labor bodies representing the 124,000 employees involved in the dispute.

Union spokesmen withheld comment pending study of the government appeal by their negotiating committees. Replies are expected today.

Statement given by Donald Gordon, chairman and president Canadian National Railways said: "Speaking on behalf of the Canadian National Railways, I readily accept the suggestion of the government. I continue ready to meet the representatives of the unions at any time for further discussions and, moreover, if the strike is postponed and a mediator is appointed, I will be prepared to place our railway's case fully before him."

In Montreal, W. A. Mather, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, said: "The Canadian Pacific Railway is prepared to do its part to comply with the request made by the prime minister to resume discussion with the organizations."

The Prime Minister advanced no specific formula for solution in his letter—he emphasized the government could not impose a settlement on the parties— but he made it clear the weight of the government was being thrown into the scales to avert a country-wide tie-up of rail transport.

Want Postponement

The "full force of the government," he said, was behind the request for the 30-day postponement in the event of no railway-union agreement by the deadline of 6 a.m. regional time of August 22.

And he appealed to both groups "in the interest of all Canada" to dispose of the dispute between themselves or leave time for action by the special commissioner.

While the duties and authority of the special commissioner were not set out in the Prime Minister's letter, government sources said it was not proposed that he should have any special powers, but would act strictly as a mediator in attempting to use the good offices of the government to bring the antagonists to agreement.

While such an appointment is an unusual step, it was a precedent in the 1946 designation of Leonard W. Brockington, Ottawa lawyer, in the same role in the general steel strike of that year.

Today, Mr. Brockington's name cropped up in speculation on the possible appointee in the rail case. Another mentioned was Mr. Justice I. C. Rand of the Supreme Court of Canada, author of the "Rand Formula" for resolving problems concerning union dues check-off.

Mining Strike Near Timmins First Since 1912

TIMMINS, Aug. 17—(CP) — Pickets today patrolled the Preston East Dome gold mine in the first strike since 1912 in the rich Porcupine mining field.

Union officials said the strike may spread to Coniaurum and Buffalo Ankerite mines in the area unless demands for higher pay are met.

Some 400 men are employed by the mine. W. A. Hutchinson, manager of Preston East Dome, said the mine "will be open for those who wish to return to work. If enough don't show up, we will close indefinitely."

Sudden Strike

The strike was called suddenly Wednesday by Local 100 of the Porcupine Mine Workers' Union (C.C.L.) after collapse of negotiations.

Pickets began to stop workers as the day shift left work Wednesday afternoon. More than 300 miners were on the picket line by the time the night shift arrived. Police patrolled the area and warned pickets not to stop any miners who wished to go to work.

Leo Behie, vice-chairman of the union, said the miners demands now had reverted to the original demands made when negotiations first began. That included six statutory holidays with pay, instead of the present two, incorporation of a cost-of-living bonus of 15 cents an hour in wage rates and an increase of 12 cents an hour.

Mr. Hutchinson said the company had received no notice of the strike.

He said the company had made a last-minute offer of three statutory holidays, the 15-cent cost-of-living bonus and a wage boost of three cents an hour.

"H.M.S. Concord (Lt.-Cmdr. I. D. McLaughlan, D.S.C., R.N.), while approaching Hong Kong this morning was fired on by batteries on Taitami and Puntin and Lingting (Islands).

"Fire of the Lingting batteries was returned by H.M.S. Concord in self-defence. One minor casualty was sustained by H.M.S. Concord, but there was no damage to the ship."

A naval spokesman said he was unable to answer such questions as how far the Concord was from Chinese teritory.

The Chinese fired first from Taitami. Then Red guns on Puntin and Lingting opened up as the Concord moved along.

These islands are about 12 miles south of Hong Kong and six miles west of the spot where the American freighter Steel Rover, the British merchantman Hangsang and the Norwegian freighter Pleasantville were fired on last week.

Won't Unload Russian Cargo

NEW YORK, Aug. 17—(AP).—The United States Lines has placed an embargo on all Russian shipments after Boston longshoremen refused to unload one of its vessels carrying $350,000 worth of Russian crabmeat.

On Monday New York City stevedores refused to unload a $250,000 crabmeat cargo from the Cunard liner Parthia. The longshoremen then adopted a resolution not to handle goods coming from Russia.

Wednesday, AFL longshoremen in Boston would not take off the $350,000 cargo from the U.S. Lines' American Manufacturer. The ship is en route to New York with the crabmeat still aboard, but a company official said.

"The United States Lines knowingly will not handle henceforth any cargo out of or to Soviet Russia directly or indirectly."

Both Cunard and U.S. Lines officials said the crabmeat will be returned to the United Kingdom. Britain got the sea food in a trade agreement with Russia.

ROYAL "GODFATHER"—In Stockholm, Sweden's 9-year-old King Gustavus V accepts his "godfather's" diploma from six-year-old Bernt Christer Gredin, the 10,000th child to be given a summer vacation by an organization that helps poor children. Those who donate to the fund receive a "diploma" and picture of the child who benefited from their donation and become his or her "godfather" or "godmother." Bernt's royal "godfather" invited him to visit him at Solliden Castle as an added treat to his vacation.

Prefer Using Mass Bombing To A-Weapons

By MAX BOYD

WASHINGTON Aug. 17—(AP)—The bombing of massed Korean Communists by B-29 Superfortresses underscores some of the reasons why atomic bombs are not being used in support of American and South Korean soldiers.

With about 100 B-29's the United States air force was able to spread approximately 1,000 tons of conventional bombs over an area in which North Koreans were concentrated for an expected attack.

The Superforts' bombing runs were made without interference by enemy fighters, since U.S. and Australian planes control the air over Korea.

Whether the expected Communist attack will be stopped indefinitely by the single massive bombing is a question.

But should the Communists recover and reform for a drive to cut the American and South Korean forces in two, the Superforts can strike again.

Try This First

The Superforts also could be joined by hundreds of light bombers and fighter-bombers which the air force, navy and marine corps are operating in support of grounds troops. Unless and until this conventional striking power proves inadequate, the use of atomic bombs is unlikely.

In the massive Superfortress bombing, the area attacked was 7½ miles long and 3½ wides.

To cover such an area with atomic bomb blasts of fatal force, it would take not one but perhaps half a dozen A-bombs of the power used at Hiroshima. Authorities agree, however, that A-bombs would kill far larger numbers of the enemy than would ordinary bombs.

For safety's sake, American troops facing an area under atomic attack would have to remain at a greater distance than if the zone were under attack with conventional explosives.

Some American authorities also are fearful that use of atomic weapons, even against purely military targets rather than city masses, would tend to turn people elsewhere in Asia against the United States.

Body Of Reynolds Taken Off Mountain

LONE PINE, Calif., Aug. 17—(AP)—A sheriff's posse last night brought the body of 17-year-old Christopher Reynolds off Mount Whitney.

Officers said it was not seen by the boy's grieving mother, former singer Libby Holman, who had flown from Paris in the hope that he would be found alive.

Young Reynolds' body and that of his climbing companion, Steven Wasserman, also 17, were taken to Los Angeles.

Reynolds, heir to a $7,000,000 tobacco fortune, and Wasserman attempted to scale the perilous east face of Mt. Whitney Aug. 6. They were reported missing Aug. 10.

Auchinleck Becomes Chief Big Pine

BRANTFORD, Aug. 17—(CP)—Britons may know him as the victorious planner of El Alamein, but to the Six Nations Indians of the Brantford district, Field Marshal Sir Claude Auchinleck is Chief Big Pine.

Indians chiefs and an Indian princess in full regalia conferred the title on "The Auk" yesterday in a ceremony that was duly recorded by the cameras of 50 British schoolboys who took in the event as part of an Eastern Canadian tour which Sir Claude is conducting as president of the London Federation of Boys' Clubs.

The 24-day tour is sponsored by Garfield Weston, Canadian-born British industrialist.

S. S. Quebec Fire

The S.S. Quebec which was gutted by fire at Tadoussac is the second serious outbreak of fire within a year on Canada Steamship Lines' vessels. Although the burning of the Quebec was not the disaster of the Noronic, the ship was lost, hundreds of passengers were in danger, and five lost their lives. Either the company is at fault, its ships' officers are culpable, the Department of Transport is negligent in its inspections and requirements, or the rules and regulations for Canadian vessels are not adequate. These two fires blacken the good name of Canadian navigation. A most searching investigation should be followed by drastic action, to prevent as far as is humanly possible, a recurrence of such calamities.

Pulling Up Our Socks

Speaking at Lake Couchiching on Tuesday, Professor A. R. M. Lower of Queen's University said some interesting and provocative things about the appeal of Communism to Eastern peoples, as well as to people on this continent. He attributed a great deal of this appeal to the seriousness of Communism and the hope which it holds out to people who badly want hope. American civilization, on the contrary, appears to Professor Lower to offer much that is cheap, trivial and shoddy. He recognizes that there is great nobility in the American ideal, but this nobility is too often submerged under what he called "the culture of the soap-opera, the Hollywood movie, the soft-drink cult, the so-called comic . . . ." He warned Canada against this cheaper culture.

There is much truth in what Professor Lower says. The U.S.A. and Canada as well, sometimes appear to have little to offer other nations except material goods, and the kind of easy, mindless life which money can buy. Our missionaries offer them Christianity, but it is clear enough that millions in the lands from which the missionaries come are indifferent to Christianity, and have no philosophical attitude which might supply them with some other ethical background. To Eastern eyes, our religion appears to be an easy-going humanitarianism which has terrible gaps and holes in it. Our philosophy appears to them to be an elaborate system of quibbling and word-spinning.

Communism offers them something which is concrete and hopeful. They are not critical. They do not see what the practical results of Communism are. Nor, it must be said, do they fear tyranny and hard times as much as we do; they have known tyranny and hard times for centuries.

We must face the fact that our way of life presents little attraction to Eastern peoples. They see the flaws in it; its many fine things are beyond their understanding, and it must be admitted that we do a poor job of putting those fine things forward.

Professor Lower says that Canada must "pull up its cultural socks". Very true. The past century has been one of immense material advancement for this country, but in cultural matters we still lag behind many nations whom we do not consider in our class as trading and manufacturing nations. We are content to be intellectually undistinguished. Our heroes still tend to be men who have made a million dollars, whether or not they have learned to use the million intelligently. Now it is a good thing for a nation to admire aggressive, clever ingenious men. But not all aggressive clever, ingenious men turn their talents to money-making. They may be artists, scientists, professional men, and thinkers. And it is the men of this latter group who do most to advance the nation. Money makers are necessary and admirable; they make the wheels go round. But it is the thinkers who give the wheels a reason for turning. And when other nations turn their eyes upon us it is our thinkers they look for, rather than our millionaires. If they can admire our thinkers they are not likely to be taken in by the third-rate thinking of Communism. It is up to us to pull up our socks, and give our thinkers their due in Canada.

W.P.B. For Cigar Stores

Litter has been the subject of public discussion in Peterborough. This is not to say that Peterborough is worse than other cities in this regard. The fact is that Peterborough is remarkably clean and tidy. However, there is too much litter, too much carelessness with waste paper and the like. Among the conspicuously littered areas are the half-blocks in any direction from a shop which sells cigarettes, chocolate and ice-cream bars and chewing gum. A child or adult makes his purchases, and as he goes out the door he has already removed the paper wrapping from the package. There is no waste paper basket handy; whish! the wrapper goes to the ground in front of the shop, or is tossed on sidewalks or lawns ten or twenty feet away. If these stores were to provide large waste paper receptacles at the doorway or in front of the shop, much of the litter which clutters the shops and the nearby streets would be prevented. Most people will use a waste-paper basket if there is one handy.

Hitler's Ashes

An interesting discussion has arisen about the existence and whereabouts of Adolf Hitler's ashes. When H. R. Trevor-Roper published his interesting book The Last Days of Hitler he said that Hitler killed himself and that his body and that of Eva Braun had been burned in the garden of the Chancellery in Berlin. Their ashes are supposed to have been given into the keeping of a man named Axmann, who was head of the Hitler Youth. Axmann escaped from Berlin and was not captured for some months; during that time he had opportunities to hide the ashes. It is also asserted that Goebbels persuaded Hitler to remain in Berlin and to commit suicide in order that he might create a myth for the Germany of the future. Hitler's ashes would undoubtedly be a useful possession to any group which was attempting to foster such a legend. The question which now bothers some people is, where are the ashes?

We cannot see that it matters. Any old ashes will do. If a group of fanatical Germans want to rally German youth to the Nazi banner, they can get all the ashes they need on any ash-heap. Surely, after all these years, we do not believe that they would scruple to do so?

The creation of relics is comparatively easy. It is the faith which the relics inspire which is important. If Nazism rises again it need not worry about Hitler's ashes. A vessel which is said to contain them, and which has approximately the right appearance and weight, will be enough. Indeed, we shall be surprised if two or three rival jars of ashes are not discovered, with clamorous followers asserting that each contains the only true, undisputed and magical remains of the Fuehrer.

Gladioli On Show

Peterborough and district's Gladiolus Society show in the Market Hall last night and this afternoon and evening is worth the attention not only of expert gardeners, but of all who appreciate bloom and gorgeous colour. This stately habit and magnificent range of colour of the modern gladioli—now far removed through cultivation from the natural species of South Africa and Mediterranean Europe—make the flowers favourites the world over. It is good to find in this district so many people making a hobby of cultivating them, developing new strains and contributing thus to beauty and pleasure. Although some of the exhibitors in the Peterborough show have a commercial interest in the bulbs and blooms, they do not out-number those who grow gladioli solely for love of the flower. The gladiolus season is now at its best, and the best gladioli are now on show at the Market Hall.

Go Lights For Baseball

Saturday evening the new floodlights at Riverside Park, put up at a cost of nearly $30,000, will be turned on. For the first time Peterborough spectators and players will have baseball unimpeded by twilight hours. The night sky is not the limit any longer. The senior team, already in the top brackets of this year's league series, has the Go lights, and the chance to take enthusiastic supporters and spectators along with them to whatever triumphs and cracking good games they aim at. Saturday night's match will be a signal event.

The Baseball Club is to be commended for its persistent enterprise in drumming-up the lights; the Council and Recreation Commission for their careful, solid support of the project; and the Utilities Commission in getting on with the job so speedily after wearisome hampering delays beyond their control.

Has anybody smelt Hamilton lately?

"England Loses Two Wickets", we read. But staunch old England will bear up under, as she has in other memorable times from the Field of the Cloth of Gold to the beaches of Dunkirk.

Prodigious Balzac

By PETER FORSTER

OF course Balzac is next to Shakespeare! Who else has commanded comparable power, insight, humour, wit, imagination, intellect, erudition, intensity, and above-all—range? They are the twin Colossi of western literature.

Yet to the balzacien determine (the phrase is Theophile Gautier's) Balzac is less a literary phenomenon than the apostle of a way of life. It has been pointed out that by and large, there are two basic ways of facing the world; in a positive manner, with the emphasis on values and achievements, or in the negative, with a fundamentally sceptical and disparaging bias. Balzac is the supreme exponent in literature of the former school of thought. Life for him was a tremendous, unending adventure, and everything in it mattered enormously. Human actions were not to be shrugged away as without use or meaning, life was undoubtedly a struggle, but there were standards against which the progress of the struggle could be measured.

THUS every character in the Comedie Humaine from great names like Diane de Maufrigneuse and Eugene de Rastignac, to a humble half-pay officer in retirement or a quiet parish priest, took on in Balzac's eye the proportions of protagonists in a battle of giants. Hence, too, the great Balzacian words, like "prodigious," "enormous," "sublime."

Even material things became suffused with the glow of his feelings. Last year I visited the fascinating Musee Balzac at Passy, in the suburbs of Paris, and struck by the emptiness of the room which had been his study, I asked the old lady who acts as curator whether Balzac had not had more pieces of furniture there. "No, sir," came the superby reply, "He imagined them."

❖ ❖ ❖

THE importance he attached to the details of human life (these long passages describing rooms and streets and towns) has led many critics to label Balzac as a realist. This is only half true, for it fails to take into account the paradoxical effect of a microscope, which examines a small part and makes it seem large. Balzac's vision resembled a great magnifying glass, and the minutive he described with such care became transformed by his sheer, imaginative power.

The uninitiated, taking these long factual topographical descriptions at face value, often feel them to be longueurs; but to the enthusiast they are no more a deterrent than the fact that the plot occasionally creaks, or is neglected in favour of a seemingly irrelevant digression. To him no page of Balzac is dull, because every word is informed with the mind of the author. Balzac never noted details for their own sake; his was a heightened form of realism.

❖ ❖ ❖

IN this way Grandet became a wonderful portrait of a particular miser and the epitome of all misers; Goriot was one betrayed father and the essence of all "foolish-fond" parents; Lucien de Rubempre was a young man who came from the provinces to make his fortune in Paris, yet he was also the sum of all such young men. Every character and phrase in Balzac gains larger significance because it represents the world in little.

The French say that he is not a great stylist, in the sense that we sometimes deny the same title to H. G. Wells, because he wrote at great pressure and thoughts sometimes outpaced words. We must accept their superior feeling for their own language, yet Balzac is better read in the original, for from the tumbling, impetuous torrent of his prose (often magnificently eloquent and witty)one derives a true, first-hand impression of the man.

❖ ❖ ❖

NOT that he was incapable of high reflectiveness. It is possible to maintain that every really great artist produces at least one work which is untypical of the rest of his output. Thus the Zola who wrote the Rougon-Macquart saga also wrote "L'Oeuvre" and Beethoven turned aside from the immensitnes of the Choral Symphony to compose "Bagatelles." And who would have thought that Balzac, the assiduous chronicler of contemporary manners, the zestful sensualist whose youthful ambitions were summed up his own words as "to be famous and to be loved," could have written "Seraphita," with its uncanny exposition of the nature of mysticism pitchforked into the middle of a brilliant description of life in a Norwegian fjord he had never visited! But his range was endless; his scope was as wide as human nature.

❖ ❖ ❖

HONORE de Balzac died one hundred years ago today, having lain for some days half-paralyzed, his limbs swollen, no longer able even to hold a pen, worn out by literary exertions without parallel. He was only fifty-one years old. He had known the miseries of life, as well as the splendours, and we may marvel that in the course of so short a career, (for he was late in developing) he should have come by so much knowledge, so much insight.

Since Balzac's death literature has reversed the microscope, and sees a world peopled by vicious pigmies, but he stands as a constant reminder that the tough little stories of today, with their matter-of-fact airs, lack those qualities of gusto and enthusiasm and enjoyment which makes life worth living and writing about; he remains a positive landmark in a negative age. It is hard to sum up a great man's achievements in a single phrase, but of Balzac this may be said: he made life seem larger.

HONORE DE BALZAC: after the drawing by Gavarni. Today is the hundredth anniversary of the death of the great 19th century French novelist. To him life was an enormous adventure, and he made it seem larger. (See Third Column).

Letters To The Editor

"LITTERPESTS"

Sir: I was very much interested to read in Wednesday's Examiner your excellent editorial recommending the formation of an "Anti-litter League" and also the Third Column entitled "Immorality on County Roads."

Mr. G. W. Morrison gives us a vivid picture of the carelessness of people who daily ravage our beauty spots with their obnoxious refuse. Much of this, of course, is thoughtlessness, for people old and young simply toss away their rubbish and let the wind carry it where it may or others pick it up if they will.

Our worthy Junior Chamber of Commerce has placed, on our downtown corners, Scrap Boxes which, I am sure, have done much to improve the sightliness of our main streets, but there are no such handy receptacles in our residential areas.

Since we live on the corner of a busy street, each morning it is necessary to cover the entire lawn, picking up old cigarette boxes, odious Kleenex, gum wrappers and even old bottles, which thoughtless persons have tossed aside as they walk or drive past—not a very pleasant task! We have termed these persons "Litterpests" and, on a recent visit to Watertown I find my friends there are similarly plagued,. A good friend there composed the following ditty which may awaken a few unthinking people and cause them to ask "Am I a Litterpest?"

Yours sincerely,
GENEVIEVE A. FOWLER.

The Litterpest

There's many a pest on Koko's list
That we'll agree would not be missed.
He could have mentioned many still
That help man's cup of woe to fill.

But for the nonce forget the rest
And focus on the litterpest.

I like betimes to take my ease
In some choice nook beneath the trees,
And with companions seated round
To picnic here upon the ground.
Oh, no! Not here, for this same nook
Has taken on another look.
Some one has left a lot of food,
To say the least, no longer good;
And here and there and all around
Are papers scattered on the ground.
So then, we turn, about we face
And hope to find a cleaner place.

It's nice to have a bit of green
To freshen up the homeside scene.
A well groomed yard looks rather neat
Along the border of the street.
But if we'd have it so, alas!
We must do more than nurse the grass.
Yes, as we enter and egress
We must collect all these, no less:
Paper of varied sorts and kinds,
Some torn to bits, cast to the winds,
Cellophane wrappings from big cigars,
Cigarette butts as thick as stars,
Chewing gum foil for varieties sake,
Lunch boxes, bottles and what-do-they-make,
Each one left as the bequest
Of a galumphing litterpest.

But this collection is but small
There is one pest that tops it all.
He takes his household overflow,
Gets on the road, and let's it go.
Can't speak for you, but, as for me,
I think I'd almost rather see
An ad or two than, as I pass,
A pile of cans and broken glass,
Umbrellas and some old commode
A-peering out from side the road.

No more with dust our noses choke.
They might some day cut out the smoke!
But, till we pass to our last rest,
Looks like we'd keep the litterpest.
(Dr. J. D. Olin, Watertown, N.Y.)

WILL CONTINUE BOYS' WORK

Sir: In reply to the recent letters pertaining to Boys' Town and myself: in the interests of all concerned I would like to thank all those who have supported me in the recent discussions between the Optimist Club Boys' Town and myself. I would like to ask the public to please refrain from any further discussions pro and con. At the present time I am carrying on with the Boys' Choir as we have an engagement to fullfil at the Canadian National Exhibition the latter part of this month. At this time I wish the Optimist Club every success in Peterborough with boys' work. I am planning to carry on boys' work with the Trojan Club in the south end of the city. If at any time I could be of assistance to any one connected with boys I would be only too glad to be of service. Thanking you.

Your truly
WALTER BENT,
343 Rubidge.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Great is our Lord, and of great power; his understanding is infnite. (Ps. 147:5.)

Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding . . . Be not wise in thine own eyes; fear the Lord, and depart from evil . . .

Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. (Prov. 3:5,7,13.)

Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise. For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain. (I Cor. 3:18-20).

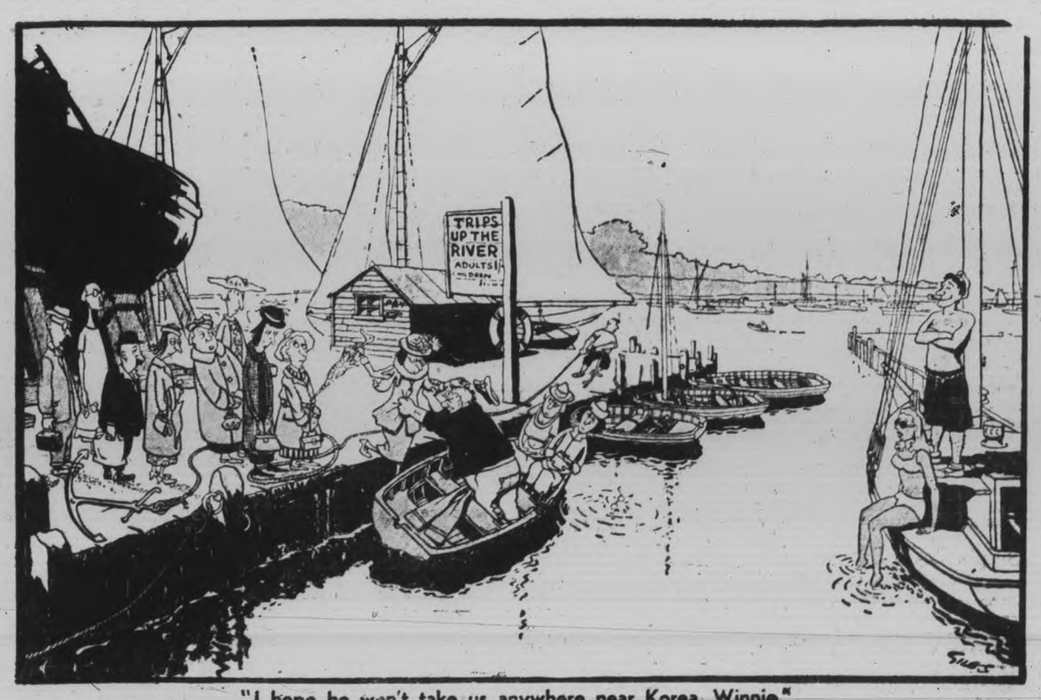
It's a Good Question

(Montreal Star)

Dr. Lin Yutang, the Chinese philosopher, may be kidding the Russians but in a letter to the New York Herald Tribune he asks some pertinent questions about the Security Council meeting that will take all the dialectical skill of a whole herd of Marxists to answer.

"The government of the U.S.S.R." writes Dr. Lin, "holds that the United Nations resolution against the North Korean aggression was illegal. The position was taken that any resolution passed in the absence of representatives of Communist China was illegal. Now Malik is presiding over meetings from which representation of Communist China is still absent and therefore presumably over meetings which in the view of the government of the U.S.S.R. are illegal. What is Malik doing there?"

It's a good question and we should like to hear the Russian answer to it.



"I hope he won't take us anywhere near Korea, Winnie."

Drunk Car Lifter Fined $200 Given 7 Days

A man who was captured after a collie dog trailed him through a swamp was today fined $200 and $2.50 and sentenced to seven days in jail by Magistrate W. R. Philp on charges of taking a truck without the owner's consent and drunk driving.

Roger J. MacNaughton, 33, Young's Point, pleaded guilty on both counts. Alternative to the fine was a three month sentence to run concurrently with the seven days, if the fine were not paid.

Provincial Corporal Lloyd McClure testified that on the evening of August 8 he received a report of a drunk driver near Nassau. The officer drove east along the township road from Nassau and found a truck standing in a field.

He said the truck had been driven through the rail fence and had made a circle and hit the fence again, stopping after the second hit.

Sets Dog On Him

Sister of the owner of the farm, Miss Helen Brown, R.R. 9, Peterborough, told Corporal McClure she had seen a man run into the swamp and she set her collie dog, Bud, after him.

The dog followed the man's trail 50 yards through the swamp, and MacNaughton was found lying in the brush.

After MacNaughton had been brought to Peterborough, Corporal McClure said information was received that the truck had been stolen from George St. earlier in the evening.

The truck is owned by Mrs. Mabel Armstrong, R.R. 3, Lakefield, and had been driven into Peterborough by her son, Marvin.

MacNaughton said he had been drinking with Marvin Armstrong and that Armstrong said he would give him a ride back to Young's Point. MacNaughton got in the truck, and while waiting for Armstrong, said he saw the keys had been left in the truck.

All Swimmers Tested 'A'

For the first time in her experiences testing swimmers, Mrs. Pansy Forbes, Red Cross examiner, every pupil Wednesday at Inverlea beach received an A grading. Mrs. Forbes tested 10 junior Red Cross swimmers, four intermediate swimmers and five senior swimmers, all graded as excellent in their class.

Work of the three swimming instructors, Lynn Davidson, Mary Rutherford and Lorraine Derry was commended by Mrs. Forbes. The girls have been working with the children since the summer program opened on the playground in July.

Results of races held were: beginners, Pauline Evans; nine years and under, Peter Wood; 12 years and under, boys, Ted Rankin; 12 years and under, girls, Grace Sarginson; 14 years and under, boys, Calvine Nichols; 14 years and under, girls, Sheila Ryan; 16 years and under, boys, Douglas Livingston.

Warsaw Man Fined $132.50 On 3 Counts

John Richard Clark, Warsaw was today fined a total of $132.50 on three charges by Magistrate W. R. Philp.

Clark pleaded guilty to illegal possession of liquor, driving a car while his license was suspended and failing to notify the Department of Highways of change of ownership of a car he bought.

On the liquor count, he was fined $15 and $2.50 or one month, $10 and $2.50 or ten days on the third charge, and $100 and $2.50 or three months for driving while his license was suspended.

Magistrate Philp said that if Clark did not pay the fines, the sentences under the Highway Traffic Act would run concurrently, and the sentence for having liquor illegally would be consecutive to the others.

Provincial Corporal Lloyd McClure said two bottles of beer were found in the car when he arrested Clark near the new Civic Hospital.

Gunigle's Pump and Others Kept Lindsay In Hard Water; Rain Barrels Supplied Soft; None for Fires

LINDSAY, Aug. 17 — Gunigle's Pump was the best known well in town before the water system was installed in Lindsay, according to P. C. "Pat" Murphey, a widely known Lindsay citizen.

Before 1890 there was very little provision made for any water supply for the town and people depended on various wells. The Gunigles Pump was situated on a site owned by two brothers Brian and John Gunigle. They operated a livery stable and hack stand on York St. N., where Tracey's garage is now situated. They also owned an open, frame barn across the street, and the pump was located in this barn. On hot summer days people would line up by this pump waiting for a cold dipper of water.

The other well known wells were Adam's Pump, situated just back of the present site of Houzer's store on Lindsay St., and Scully's Pump, owned by Jack Scully at 3 Glenelg St. Adam's Pump was owned by Jack Adams, a former postmaster of Lindsay.

Mr. Murphey recalls that there were several other popular pumps in town, but that these were the best known ones.

Old Rain Barrels

For soft water, some of the wealthier citizens had cisterns in their homes, but the majority of the townspeople relied on the old rain barrel out at the corner of the house that caught the drip from the roof.

After the great fire of 1860, which practically destroyed the town, the merchants decided that there must be a better system of fire protection. A pipe line was laid from Needler's and Sadler's mill on Kent St. to a large cistern located under Kent St., in front of where Free Motors is now. In case of fire the water from this main was pumped with a hand pump operated by six men, three on each side. Years later this pump was sold to the village of Fenelon Falls.

In 1888, the council attempted to get a supply of water for the town by drilling a deep well behind the Collegiate. However at 140 feet, the drill broke and water had not been reached, so the project was abandoned.

Company Formed

In 1892, three men from Watertown, N.Y., offered to instal a water system in return for a yearly franchise of $3,000. They formed a company in which some local capital was invested and built the pump house at its present location on the Scugog river. They installed two pumps with a capacity of a million gallons daily and laid seven miles of main. For storage and pressure, they built a stand pipe up near the Fair Grounds.

Because of financial difficulties, the company sold out to two of the local shareholders. Later the town bought the system for $60,000. It was put in charge of a Board of Water Commissioners consisting of the Mayor and three others elected one each year for three years.

Fire Brigade

At this time a fire brigade was formed. The town purchased a hose wagon drawn by a team of horses. This team was driven by Tom O'Neill for many years. The volunteer firemen received a dollar for each fire they attended and were fined a dollar for each one they missed.

In the 1930's a St. Catharine's firm were paid to supply the town a million and a half gallons of water daily, from wells in the town. The project failed and the Board was forced to go back to the Scugog River. The water has been piped from the river until the present day.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club—well, for heaven's sake, is it hockey time again? — meets Sunday at 11 a.m. at Red Creighton's home on George St. A general huddle to discuss angles for the coming puck campaign, only two months away. Petes expect to ice a strong senior "B" squad with the addition of Arn Dugan and Jake Wade, along with Gus Leonard, Junior West and the pick of last year's team. Others probably, too. Meantime, no word from the ex-Legionnaires, and they mustn't have a new sponsor as yet or we would have been hearing. Lindsay is flirting with the idea of going senior "B" this winter.

East City plays UEW at 8.15 tonight in the Bowl, a single game with plenty at stake. Loser is through for the season, while the winner not only goes against Mutuals next week for the city title and the Taylor Trophy, but also goes into OASA senior "B" playdowns, Mutuals having won the Geo. Dormer Cup and the right to represent Peterborough in intermediate "A" playdowns as they finished the schedule in first place. Orphans go into junior "A" playdowns next month, dropping any of their over-age players and adding other juniors. The scrap tonight, weather right, should be a honey.

A Knockout Tourney

Johnny Russelle has an entry in the CNE men's championship softball tourney, and the Mutuals will go against Toronto St. Stans at 3.30 p.m. Aug. 26 and again at 7.15 the same day. Winner of that meets the winner of Oshawa Pedlars and Toronto Diamond Taxi on Sept. 2. One loss knocks a team out. Peterborough made a good showing last season and may do even better this time, though the opposition is stiff. Schedule has been sent out and competing clubs must acknowledge receipt at once to the OASA secretary, at 526 Maple Ave., Hamilton.

New Toronto tackles the Petes here twice on Saturday in Riverside Park. First Viaduct Baseball League fixture is at three in the aft, and the other is at 8.15 under the lights. Yes sir, floodlight baseball comes to Peterborough and lo, a great throng will welcome the night sport. A fine set of light, 10 poles, with the setup patterned after those of Ogdensburg and Kingston where Class "B" ball is played. You can read a newspaper on the diamond with the lights turned on. Petes are currently in second spot with New Toronto third and playoffs a week off, so both games should be plenty keen.

Westclox Roll Through

Plenty of girls' softball action these evenings. In Kingston last twilight, Westclox came through nicely with a 15-6 victory to start their PWSU intermediate "A" playdowns. Return joust here at the Bowl this Saturday aft at three and third, if necessary, there at 6.15 Saturday night. Don't miss these playoffs, folks. Stratford Kroehlers opened their series with a 23-0 smirk o'er Brantford, and the Strats and Clockers may meet yet. At the Bowl last night, Ashby's hustled to earn an 11-7 verdict against Marines in a round-robin sawoff. Two more playoffs on tap there tomorrow e'en, Ashby's vs. Woollens at seven, followed by Marines vs. C.G.E. Winner of the round-robin takes the intermediate city title.

Petes' lacrossers started off a bit casually at Miller Bowl last night and you can't do that with Owen Sound. The Crescents promptly gained an early lead and then nursed it along in cozy style the rest of the route to win 7-5. Bob Thorpe was the pick of the Creighton crew, battling hard all evening and being in on three goals. Arn Dugan had his spurts and picked up a few assists, but Crescents didn't give any of them too much chance to handle the ball. A close-checking contest before a big crowd. Not a real crowd-pleaser but still a pretty fair fray. Young Gary Robinson, Dootch Vitarelli and Don Ashbee got a goal each, and Ralph Speck pulled off some fine stops in the home cage. The Petes go to Owen Sound on Friday.

Return DiMaggio To Yank Lineup

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17 (AP) —Manager Casey Stengel of the New York Yankees said he plans to return Joe DiMaggio to the starting lineup tomorrow night in Philadelphia against the Athletics.

"If Joe gets hot and gives me about 38 runs batted in in two weeks we could win the pennant," Stengel added Wednesday night. "Of course, a little pitching would help, too."

The 35-year-old Yankee slugger was benched last Friday for the first time in his career. Previously he had been out of the world champions' lineup due to injuries but never for light hitting.

"Joe was playing with a bad shoulder and a bad knee," Casey declared. "He needed rest and I think he realizes it. I asked him how he felt Wednesday and he said 'I'm still tired'."

Whether Joe realizes he needed the rest remains a secret. He said he had his share of "aches and pains" when he was taken out, but he never passed judgment on the move. All he would say when asked about his enforced rest is: "I'm ready to go anytime and I'll be happy to get back in there."

LAWN BOWLING

By HERB MARTIN

Sorry we missed the finals and semi-finals of the novice singles competition. This is always looked upon as one of the outstanding events of the local season, but from the reports given to us it would appear as if the boys fought it out good. We congratulate all. The competition was sponsored by The Examiner and our club is greatly indebted to The Examiner for their generosity and for their interest shown in the sport.

First, A. Jackson and P. J. Giffin Trophy; second, J. Martin; third, G. Lancaster; fourth, A. W. Lean.

The winning skips up on our own greens last night were: A. Aitkenhead, J. Adams, P. Bartley.

Playing at Stirling on the holiday, Mrs. N. Killingbeck, Mrs. J. Arnold and Mrs. W. Hepburn came in for first prize—each received a parasol.

The boys who went to Whitby report a good outing, winning two games and losing one..

We have no report from the Cobourg or Brighton tournaments.

Westclox girls defeated Kingston 15-6 last night in the Limestone City to open their best-of-three PWSU intermediate "A" playdown series. The second game will be at the local Bowl at three Saturday afternoon, and the third if necessary, there at 6.15 p.m. on Saturday.

The visitors played heads-up ball after they got untracked in the second stanza to earn the verdict handily in a game called for darkness in the ninth. M. Selkirk got off to a snaky start, with six runs counted against her early, M. Downer then taking over to hold Kingston helpless the rest of the route. A. Fallen lasted four frames for Kingston but left with nine runs against her, M. Wistard finishing up. There were few strikeouts and both sides played some loose defensive ball at times.

A. Anderson and B. Anderson went best afield for Frank McCormack's crew, with A. Anderson leading her side at bat with three hits in six tries, one a triple. H. Mahon and J. Ferguson stood out in the fielding department for the home squad, while I. McMasters was tops for them at bat with two safe blows in five trips to the platter. Athletics Clip Riverdales 20-13

By The Canadian Press.

Owen Sound Crescents and St. Catharines Athletics continued their neck and neck pace atop the Ontario Senior Lacrosse Association standings Wednesday night.

A crowd of 2,000 turned out to watch Crescents edge Peterborough Petes 7-5 in a clean, close-checking contest in Peterborough.

St. Catharines, behind a brilliant six-goal performance by Croft, hung up a 20-13 win over Toronto Riverdales. Athletics broke out in a nine-goal scoring rasn in the second quarter to salt away the game.

Jim McMahon, Smith and Tony Damico collected three tallies each for St. Catharines, with Jim McNulty and Leo Teatro scoring twice. The losers' offensive was led by Campbell with three, Stan Kapasky and Lorn Howes with two apiece.

Meanwhile, Mimico Mounties dumped Weston Lions 19-12 to move into a fifth-place tie with Hamilton Tigers. Johnny Lumley of Lions and veteran Archie Dixon both drew majors after tangling in the closing minutes of the game.

Owen Sound Defeats Petes In Close-Checking OLA Tilt

The 7-5 OLA senior "A" victory for Owen Sound Crescents at Miller Bowl last night put them further in front of the race and kept the Petes back in third spot with but one more home game before the schedule ends. A crowd of more than 2,000 saw a tight tussle, generally clean, but ragged in spots as the Crescents gained an early lead and played it carefully afterward.

The visitors turned in a neat show of positional play, opportunism and stalling defensive tactics. The Petes had as much of the play as the league leaders but couldn't score enough in close. And they had few opportunities as they tried hard in the fourth, Crescents holding onto the ball and checking real closely. The Petes also suffered from penalties, drawing eight to three, for minor offences.

Back in Action

Big Jim Kinna returned to action after a layoff of more than five weeks due to a severe back injury, suffered in a game with Hamilton here. He is still wearing a cast on the back and will be for a week or more, but his doctor has allowed him to play. Mick Magee was an absentee, due to injured chest muscles. Gary Robinson of the juniors was in the Creighton lineup and did well, scoring one of their five markers. Bob Thorpe played an outstanding game and Ralph Speck turned aside a lot of hot shots. The team worked hard, but had little luck in sniping at close range, Wootton being tough to beat.

Bob Thorpe had two goals for the Petes, Don Ashbee, Dootch Vitarelli, and Gary Robinson getting the others. Arn Dugan crept closer to Archie Browning, loop leading sniper, with four assists, being but two points down, Bob Breakspear and Thorpe each having one assist for the homesters. Grant Gillespie, Arnold Smith, and Russ Slater paced the northerners' attack with two goals each, and Jack Foote—with the Petes last year—scored the other one. Campbell had a pair of assists and Mason and Fred Smith one each, as the visitors played smart, though not spectacular, lacrosse throughout.

Owen Sound: Goal, Wootton; defence, F. Smith and Allum; centre, Schordoff; wings, McWhirter and Campbell; rover, Woods; alternates, D. Gillespie, Foote, Mason, G. Gillespie, A. Smith, Kazarian and Slater.

Petes: Goal, Speck; defence, Nolan and Fitzgerald; centre, Creighton; wings, D. Vitarelli and Dugan; rover, Thorpe; alternates, Ashbee, L. Vitarelli, J. Breakspear, R. Breakspear, Robinson, Kinna and Wright.

Referees, J. Murphy and L. Vipond.

Marines Beaten By Ashby's In Girls' Game

Ashby's downed the Marines 11-7 at the Bowl last night in the girls' round-robin playoff series. The winners got but eight hits to six for the losers but the latter kicked it away with six miscues. Ashby's played smart ball in a rather slow contest to earn the verdict, while the Outboards had an off-night defensively and spoiled their chances with errors. P. Williams took over in the seventh from E. Whittaker for the Marines, as T. McFadden of Ashby's replaced J. Dunk in the eighth.

E. Simmonds and J. Dunk of the victors, and P. Williams and M. Behan of the other squad went best in the field this game. L. Jordan led Ashby's at bat with three for three, and M. Freeman clouted a homer. Triples were hit by S. Wakeford and L. Rowan for Marines, none of whom got more than one safety. Teams:

Quarter-Finals Start In Quebec

QUEBEC, Aug. 17 — (CP). — The men's singles in the Canadian tennis championships came down to the quarter-finals today with the international representation narrowed but still balanced against the remaining Canadians.

Officials announced Wednesday night that the second round of the mixed doubles will be played today followed by the men's singles.

All other divisions are ready for semi-final play — women's singles and doubles and the men's doubles.

Canada lost two of her Davis Cup players in the men's singles Wednesday—Lorne Main of Vancouver and George Robinson of Montreal—but Henri Rochon and Brendan Macken of Montreal were very much in the show along with Jean Marois and Jean-Paul Turgeon of Quebec.

Quarter-finals of the women's singles left Pat Macken of Montreal as the sole Canadian survivor. When the semi-final is played Miss Macken will meet Doris Popple of Spokane, Wash., and the other half will engage Gladys Heldman of Houston, Tex., and Barbara Knapp of England.

Peterson Pitches Syracuse To 4-3 Victory

By The Associated Press

Kent Peterson, 24-year-old left-hander with Syracuse Chiefs, is shaping up as one of the best pitchers in the International League.

He went to the Chiefs in May from the parent Cincinnati Reds, and dropped his first five decisions. But starting June 28 Peterson has been going great guns. He now has won eight of his last 10 decisions.

Peterson turned in his eighth victory Wednesday night as he pitched the Chiefs to a 4-3 victory over the league-leading Rochester Red Wings in the second game of a doubleheader.

The Chiefs supported Peterson's eight-hit pitching with a 10-hit attack. Fletcher Robbe hit a double, triple and single.

Ortiz banged a two-run homer and Ed Mierkowicz one with the bases empty to account for all of Rochester's runs in the first game.

In Second Place

Baltimore Orioles moved back into second place by two percentage points over Montreal Royals by splitting with Toronto Maple Leafs while the Royals lost to the Jersey City Giants.

Baltimore beat the Leafs 6-4 in the opener with home runs by Butch Woyt and Ed Pellagrini the deciding factors.

Lou Possehl turned back the Orioles 6-1 on five hits in the second game.

Alex Konikowski, recently acquired from Minneapolis, pitched the Giants to a 6-0, six-hit victory over the Royals. Springfield Cubs shaded Buffalo Bisons 2-1, scoring the winning run in the ninth inning.

Tigers Blast Chicago 6-2 Trout Keeps Team On Top

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Paul (Dizzy) Trout, the pitcher nobody wanted in 1949, is keeping Detroit Tigers on top in the chase for the American League pennant.

Currently the hottest pitcher in the loop, the oldest player on the Detroit Tiger squad is in line for "comeback-of-the-year" honors in the majors. The 36-year-old righthander, relegated to the bullpen all last season, boasts a 10-2 won-and-lost record. A newly-developed fork ball has helped him compile his remarkable mark.

Old Diz gained his 10th triumph Wednesday night when he pitched and batted the Tigers to a 6-2 victory over Chicago White Sox. It was his sixth consecutive victory. He held the Sox to five hits and singled in the second inning to drive in two runs.

It was an important victory for the Tigers since Cleveland and Boston each swent doubleheaders and New York Yankees defeated Washington.

More Twin Wins

The Indians received excellent pitching from Jesse Flores and Mike Garcia as they defeated St. Louis Browns 2-0 and 2-1. The Red Sox pounded out 11-3 and 12-7 verdicts over Philadelphia Athletics. The Yankees won 9-4.

Philadelphia's runaway Phillies widened their National League mar'in to seven games over Boston, setting back Vern (no-hit) Bickford and the Braves 5-1. New York Giants mauled Brooklyn Dodgers 16-7. Pittsburgh handed St. Louis Cards their fourth straight defeat, 5-3. Chicago's Cubs earned a 12-inning, 4-3 victory over Cincinnati.

Flores, making his first start for the Indians, distributed only four hits to the Browns in the opener. Garcia gave up five in the nightcap. The double win moved the Tribe into second place, three games behind Detroit.

Bobby Doerr batted in seven runs, five in the first game, as the Red Sox defeated the Athletics. One of Doerr's four hits was a grand-slam homer.

Pitches 3-hitter

Robin Roberts pitched a three-hitter for the Phillies to register his 16th victory. Richie Ashburn rapped three hits for the Phils. Bickford, who picked a no-hitter in his last outing, allowed 11 hits.

nine-hit first inning by the Giants finished the Dodgers. Before the game was over Hank Thompson had smashed two homers and Don Mueller had hit a grand-slammer for the winners.

Ralph Kiner hit his 34th homer of the year with a man on to help Pittsburgh whip the Redbirds.

A single by Ron Northey following Bob Ramazzotti's triple gave the Cubs their 12-inning victory over the Reds.

Kid Gavilan Drops Greco In Sixth Round

MONTREAL, Aug. 17 (CP). — Cuba's Kid Gavilan established himself as a leading contender for Sug Ray Robinson's welterweight crown here Wednesday night when he dropped jolting Johnny Greco for a sixth-round knockout in a scheduled 10-round main bout at the Montreal Baseball Stadium.

Greco at 150 held a 2½-pound advantage over the dusky Cuban from Havana.

A crowd of 9,177 poured $33,653 into the gross gate which Promoter Raoul Godbout described as "disappointing."

Greco, Canadian welterweight champion, was leading by a wide margin before he was sent to the canvas at the 2:21-minute mark of the sixth. Gavilan caught him with a sweeping bolo punch and followed up quickly with a right-hand cross to the chin. Greco lay flat on his stomach for the full count. He was hurt and had to be helped from the ring by his handlers.

Second Appearance

Before the blow was landed, the Canadian Press score card had Greco winning three of the first five rounds, one even and Gavilan taking the first.

The fight marked the second appearance of Gavilan here. Last spring, he pounded out a 10-round decision over Laurent Dauthuille of France.

In a fast-moving, 10-round semi-final, Armand Savoie, 134, and Pean Richard, 135, both of Montreal, battled to a draw. The decision received a long booing from the crowd, most of whom were in favor of giving the decision to Savoie on the strength of his dumping Richard in the second and third rounds.

Here And There In Sports . . .

Dr. Stanton, the highest money-winning gelding in the history of harness racing, picked up some added honors at New Hamburg Wednesday. Winning every time out, he captured the Canadian pacing derby in straight heats before 10,000—one of the largest crowds ever to see the classic.

Dr. Stanton, owned and driven by Lindley Fraser of Forest, is the fast-stepping son of Bonnycastle and was never pushed too much to take the big event.

Dr. Stanton got his greatest opposition from a London horse, The Diplomat, winner of the Derby last year. Away to a bad start in the opening heat, the Diplomat finished fifth. However, in the other two tests, he was never too far away from the eventual winner and placed both times.

Third was Royal Man, an early pace-setter in each heat, driven by Floyd Milton, New Hamburg.

Times in the feature event were not too good, considering the classy field. The final event, paced in an even 2.06, was the best mile of the day.

Cleveland Indians got another lemon Wednesday. He's Jim (Bob) Lemon, who has hit 39 home runs and driven in 119 runs this season for Oklahoma City. The 22-year-old outfielder will be used as a pinch-hitter the rest of the season. He's no relation to pitcher Bob Lemon.

Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, already outfitted with a new manager, Ebbie Goodfellow, and a new goalie, Harry Lumley, got a couple of new directors Wednesday One was Don Tobin, 21-year-old son of William Tobin, Hawks' president, and the other is Lester Armour, chairman of the board of Chicago National Bank.

Tom Brown, the surprise appointee to the United States Davis Cup tennis team, was far off his usual game while he and Sam Match of San Francisco were bowing to Australia's crack Jack Bromwich and Frank Sedgman, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2, in a third-round United States doubles match at Brookline, Mass., Wednesday.

Brown, replacement for injured Budge Patty on the international trophy's defending forces actually made a sorry showing against the Australians he may face in next week's challenge round at Forest Hills, N. Y.

The other U.S. Davis cupsters, the veteran Gardnar Mulloy and Bill Talbert, displayed all of their old time sparkle overcoming Felicimo Ampon of the Phillipines and Ricardo Balbiers of Chile, 6-1, 6-4, 12-10, as they qualified for the quarter-finals.

Brawny Jim Fuchs of Yale hurled the shot 58 feet 5 9-16 inches at Stockholm Wednesday night, the greatest put ever made, but it will not go into the record book as a world mark.

The 215-pound Chicagoan made his tremendous heave on an extra throw after competition in the event had ended. Swedish officials said this means it cannot be claimed as a world record.

Williamsburg captured the 14 pace stake at Thorncliffe Raceway in Toronto Wednesday, racing the first mile in a blistering 2:06 2-5, the fastest of his harness-racing career.

The strawberry roan, owned by Parker Locke of Williamsburg, Ont., and driven by Cecil Champion, had to be satisfied with second place to Poplar Volo in the second division at a mile and a 16th.

Allow Replacements For Drafted Imports

TORONTO, Aug. 17 (CP). — Canadian senior football teams will be allowed replacements for imports drafted in the United States.

Canadian Rugby Union president Tommy Alison announced Wednesday the CRU had voted to accept a Big Four recommendation that replacements be allowed. Alison said the team must produce proof of the player's enlistment, and that he would not be allowed to return to the team for the rest of the season.

B.C. Swimmer Irene Strong Retains Title

MONTREAL, Aug. 17. (CP) — Vancouver swimmers, led by smooth-stroking Irene Strong who has already retained two of her titles, today appeared headed for a major slice of the Canadian Swimming Championship honors.

Miss Strong Wednesday night captured for a second straight year the Senior Women's 150-yard Backstroke Championship. To top this performance, she was back in the Verdun open-air swimming pool minutes later to lead her Vancouver Swimming Club mates in retaining their Senior Women's 400-yard Free Style Relay Championship.

Montreal and Toronto swimmers and divers also figured Wednesday in championship events. Montreal YMCA captured the Junior Women's 440-yard Free Style Relay.

In the diving events, Evelyn Buchanan of Toronto captured the Canadian. Women's Diving Title, and Leo Vigeant, veteran Montreal diver, won the Men's Diving Championship.

Meanwhile a flock of qualifying heats were run off in the senior men's and women's 440-yard free-style, the junior men's and women's 100-yard back-stroke, the senior and junior men's 100-yard free-style; the 200-yard senior men's breaststroke and the 100-yard women's breaststroke.

After trailing for five laps in the 150-yard backstroke event, Miss strong moved ahead of Joyce Court of Montreal in the last lap to win by a couple of strokes in 2:01.7.

Miss Strong's partners in winning the senior women's 440-yard relay were Kay McNamee, Patti Whiteside and Dorothy Cook.

The Montreal foursome of Beverley Knee, Gladys Priestly, Beth Whittall and Eleanor Lacombe had it pretty easy in the junior women's 400-yard relay. Fergus, Ont., came second ahead of Toronto Lakeshore, third.

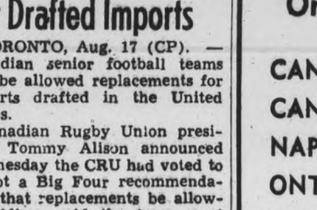
GOING FISHING?



Now the fishing season is in full swing. Now, too, is the time to remember, and observe, the fishing regulations. There's a reason for them.

The number of fish available for each season is estimated. The authorities then balance this against the expected number of fishermen to establish catch limits. This is done for your protection to provide a continuing supply of game fish for the future. To permit full growth, minimum lengths are set for various species of fish which may be taken.

Take Black Bass, for example. The maximum catch allowed in Ontario is six per day and the minimum legal length is 10 inches. Only by observing regulations like these will you be sure of enjoying this sport in the future.

Want Funds To Rebuild Hydro System

NORWOOD, Aug. 17 (ENS)—A bylaw to provide for the issue of debentures in the amount of $18,000 for rebuilding the hydro system, was given its first and second readings by the municipal council Monday evening and will now go to the Municipal Board.

R. K. Tedford tendered his resignation from the Public Utilities Commission, stating that he had sold his interests in the village. His resignation was accepted with regret and K. F. Kemot was appointed to complete the term.

The debentures was awarded to the Franklin Press, Toronto, the best bidder.

The clerk was instructed to ask for the reduction in fire insurance rates, now that the waterworks had been installed.

The opening of Elm St. along the proposed site of the new school was the subject of a letter from the secretary of the School Board. Action was deferred until the matter could come before a full meeting of the council.

Jungle Swallows Strange 'Lord X'

He tired of civilized way of life, adopted the Moslem faith, and afterwards wore a red fez or a burnous.

He lived among the natives in the bush, and learnt their customs.

After the end of the war he returned to Tete and immediately resumed his old way of life. It was said that his family had cut his allowance to £60 ($186) a month and his visits to the town became less frequent.

People are beginning to wonder about him now, as he has not been seen in Tete for more than six months.

TETE, Portuguese East Africa (CP)—Where is "Lord X," the British earl who arrived here in a chauffeur-driven Rolls Royce a few years before the war and decided to make his home in the Tete district?

Member of a prominent aristocratic family, he lived a strange life here until war broke out in 1939. He joined up, but returned to Tete in 1945.

The author of a book on arms and ammunition, he hunted extensively in the district and came to know the natives.

Essex Constable GananoqueChief

GANANOQUE, Aug. 17 (CP)—Constable W. Morley Durnford, of the Essex detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, has been appointed Chief Constable of Gananoque.

Constable Durnford, who has served with the provincial force for 24 years, was picked from 25 applicants for the post. He succeeds the late chief constable J. R. Morrison who died last month.

Constable Durnford recently was demoted from the rank of sergeant and relieved of command of the Essex County Provincial Police Detachment. No reason was given for his demotion.

BRAVE MEETS CHIEF—An Indian chief himself (honorary) Health Minister Martin paused to talk to one of his tribesman during a visit to the site of Fairfield Mission, near Chatham in southwestern Ontario. Mr. Martin, who was named Chief Nod-Mah-Gao-Ne-Ne (Man Who Does Good) a year ago, was speaker at an international ceremony at the old mission. That's William Stonefish of Moraviantown talking to the health minister.

Import Controls Give Canada $1,600,000,000 New Business

OTTAWA, Aug. 17. (CP) — A trade official estimated Wednesday that Canada's import controls have provided the impetus for the establishment of $1,600,000,000 worth of new business in Canada.

The controls, in operation since 1948 and now in process of gradual elimination, have been instrumental in development of more than 500 manufacturing projects in this country, he said.

Though designed for the protection of Canada's dollar reserves, the controls nevertheless led to the construction of a wide variety of new businesses, from production of beer cans in Montreal to rear axle assemblies in St. Catharines.

Most of the new business has been attracted to the two central provinces of Ontario and Quebec, but the official said the controls spurred development in other provinces as well.

Increased Production

They have led to increased production of gas, power and transportation projects in the lower British Columbia mainland, creation of a new salad and vegetable cooking oil industry in Manitoba and construction of new plants for the recovery of steel scrap in Nova Scotia.

Much of the new capital to build the industries, said the official, was tapped from American sources — business men who otherwise would not have considered investing in Canada.

Thus, US firms have established plants for worsted weaving in Quebec, surgical dressings in Ontario and carbon dioxide production in British Columbia.

Many other American firms have erected plants for the production of soaps, confectionery, food containers, tires and automobiles. Other firms from the United Kingdom and France have entered the picture, too, erecting plants for the production of toys and furniture.

Cushioned by controls which either prohibited or limited the flow of American commodities into Canada, these industries have been established in Canada to provide Canadians with goods they needed and could not otherwise obtain.

Industries Remain

The official said he believed the industries will remain and continue healthy production even when the controls disappear completely.

The government's policy, it was indicated, is to eliminate all the remaining controls under emergency control legislation as Canada's dollar reserves grow stronger.

As a result, controls have been eased in each quarter of this year and consideration is being given to easing them still further in the third quarter—October.

The October list, now under the cabinet's eye, is expected to wipe out many of the consumer items still completely prohibited.

Items such as electric light fixtures, tires, typewriters, boats and adding machines may be allowed into Canada in limited quantities.

Other goods, now allowed in on a limited basis, may be completely freed. These include such goods as textiles, leather products, kitchen equipment and prepared foods.

One large category still completely prohibited and likely to remain so for some months covers capital goods, such as building stone, locomotives, automobiles in completed form and industrial machinery in general.

Hands-off Policy

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17 (AP)—President Truman Wednesday reaffirmed his hands-off policy toward seizing United States railroads to avert a threatened country-wide rail strike. Union officials promptly authorized a five-day "token" strike by yardmen at three strategic terminals, starting next Monday at 6 a.m.

Women Willing To Resume War Work Role

OTTAWA, Aug. 17 — (CP)—Should Canadian industry gear again for wartime production it probably would find a bevy of feminine job hunters pounding on the door.

There will be quite a number of them. The Labor Department reports 21 per cent of Canada's present labor force wears skirts.

Most of them will be young. A department official says more than 40 per cent of women in industry at June, 1949, were under 25. At June, 1950, more than 637,000 single women were working in Canada.

Some will be really anxious for those jobs. The Labor Department figures disclose that in May, 1950, there were 77,983 women seeking jobs in all provinces excluding Manitoba.

A large number of older women will be in the group. Age, a barrier in peacetime, was no hindrance to women war workers during the last war.

You'd Be Surprised

"You'd be surprised at what older workers can do," said a Labor Department official. "In the last war I saw women between 60 and 65 doing excellent work and taking difficult jobs right alongside the younger women."

Maybe the re-opening of the war plants will create jobs for the 11,950 older women reported looking for work last May.

Placement of older workers has been one of the most serious problems facing the National Employment Service since Canadian industry swung back into peacetime production.

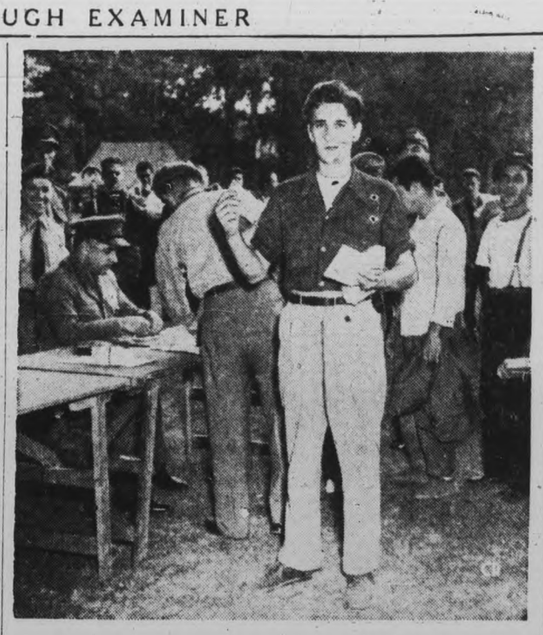
It often results from the prejudice of many employers against hiring older men and women, regardless of their high qualifications and experience. Company pension plans sometimes are the cause of such reluctance to hire older persons.

Re-opening of the war plants might help the housewife now locked in a penny-to-purse struggle with the cost of living. In June this year more than 302,000 married women were working in Canada.

Wages are high in war work, an ideal means of balancing the family budget.

Pheasant Season

FREDERICTON, NB —(CP)—New Brunswick will have an open season on cock pheasants again this autumn, Lands Minister R. J. Gill announced here. Dates will be Oct. 20-31 inclusive and the bag limit three birds per person. Last year's five-day season was the first for cock pheasants in the province's history.



U.N. BRIGADE IN MAKING—Unidentified volunteers for Canada's special service force are given their army paybooks, their first advance in pay and then sent off to training centres. Gold Mining Company Suspends Operations

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana, Aug. 17 (CP)—A Toronto-owned gold mining company Wednesday announced it is suspending operations here because of general unfavorable price conditions which are "sharply accentuated by the Korean crisis."

Anacon British Guiana Mines, whose parent company is Anaconda Copper Mining Company, said world conditions have caused costs of "operating, construction and equipment to spiral upwards to an extent which is or soon will be of serious import to all gold mining companies."

The company, which operated four years in this country, spent some $3,000,000 in development.

Around the Home ...

TOM GARD'S NOTE BOOK

It seems as if most people have a struggle to furnish their first home. We visited newlyweds last weekend and it was almost like reliving our own first few months! They will succeed, though, as first things had been put first and improvisation took care of the rest. One of their best "makeshifts" was a hall table. His parents had modernized an old sideboard by removing the top section—mirror and all. The top shelf and two supports had been left intact; a third leg was placed in the centre at the back and then braces run to the other two legs. It made an ideal hall table for the telephone and hadn't cost a cent. Even the mirror had been resilvered, etched and mounted on half-inch plywood, making an inexpensive hall mirror.

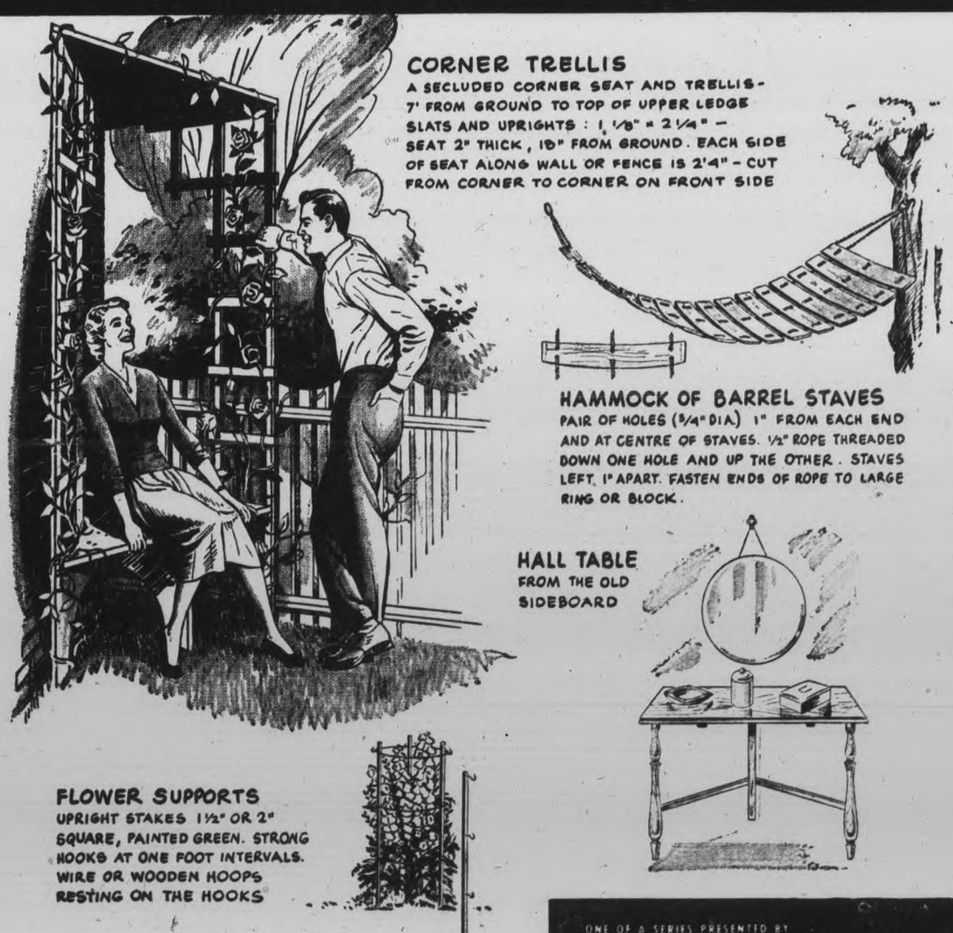
Barrel-Stave Hammock

If you would like a hammock to hang under your favourite tree but must pamper a limited budget, try the idea developed by a neighbour down the street. Holes were bored in old barrel staves and then threaded with half-inch rope. You'll see how it was done by examining the diagram shown. A heavy blanket or old sleeping bag will make the hammock quite comfortable.

Corner Garden Seat

If you wish a garden trellis in a half-pint backyard, don't stick it out in the centre of the lawn like a sore thumb. Arbours and gateways should lead somewhere; high trellises should terminate some line of vision. One of the best ideas I have seen for a small garden combined the trellis with a corner garden seat. It was most attractive and a solid mass of blue morning glories when I last saw it.

I notice some of my perennials are beginning to fall over. In case you haven't suitable flower supports for your garden, here is the type I have been using for years. They are easy to apply and just as easy to store away in the fall.



More about these and many other ideas in the booklet "AROUND THE HOME". Write for your copy to Tom Gard, c/o MOLSON'S (Ontario) LIMITED, P.O. Box 490, Adelaide St. Station, Toronto.

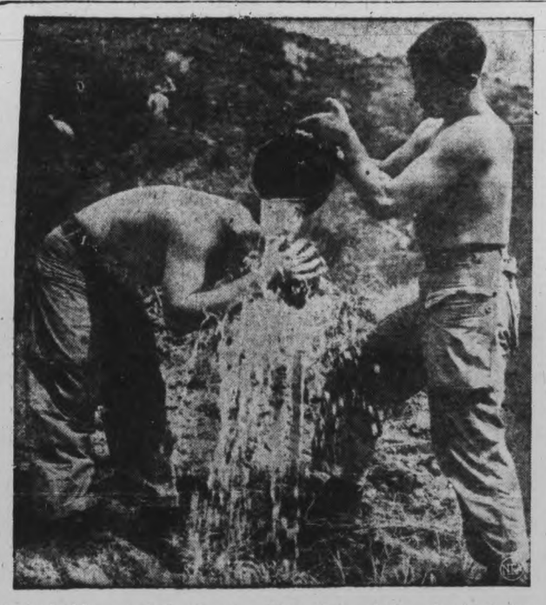
COLUMBIA, S.C., Aug. 17 — (AP)—R. W. Ballentine, a young schoolteacher, dived into a creek Wednesday and pulled an Indian family of five from their submerged automobile, one by one. Then he began artificial respiration on one of the victims, a nine-year-old girl, while other passers-by applied artificial respiration to the parents. The other two children were breathing. All responded to the first aid.



CLEAN-UPTIME IN KOREA—No matter where you go in the world, there's always some enterprising gent who'll find a way to make a buck. Here in Korea it's the proprietor of the "hick class" laundry at left, above, shown discussing delivery with two G.I.'s of the 1st Cavalry Division, who are probably worried about getting their clothes back before they move on. Committee Scores Tactics Of Dockers In Auckland

By J. C. GRAHAM

AUCKLAND, NZ —(CP)— Poor work by longshoremen has been blamed by an investigating committee as the chief cause of the slow turn-round of ships here. The delays caused shipping companies operating from Britain, the United States and Canada to impose a surcharge of 7½ per cent on freight rates.

The committee consisted of representatives of shipping companies, importers, the waterfront industry commission and the harbor board. The Watersiders' Union refused representation.

In its finding the committee stated: "The committee finds that the poor work performed by many waterside workers is very much the major cause of port congestion and is largely attributable to a grave lack of responsibility, with almost complete lack of discipline on the part of many workers and loss of control by the employers.

"One cause of this unfortunate position is that the employer has no voice in the selection of men who wish to enter the waterside industry and no control whatsoever in the allocation of union members to vessels. This committee considers that no substantial change for the better is likely until the employer has a far more direct and personal interest in the selection and employment of the men for whose services he pays."

The committee said the action of the union in frequently stopping work to push claims for extra rates of pay amounted to little less than industrial blackmail. It strongly criticized other restrictive practices, especially the system of "spelling" under which one gang works while another rests, though both are being paid for the time involved.

"It is a flagrant abuse of the conditions of work laid down and would not be tolerated in any other industry," the committee said. "It is fundamental that men should work during the hours for which they are paid. It is clear that this is not being done."

The committee found that inadequate port berthage space was a contributing factor to port delays, but almost all the rest of its report criticized the present waterfront labor set-up and the methods adopted by the watersiders.

The Waterside Workers' Union at Auckland, as at other ports in New Zealand, is a "closed" union —that is its membership is limited and new members can join only by election by the union itself. Members of the union given preference in all calls for labor and non-unionists can get work when all union members offering have been engaged. So strong is the union's influence that when the watersiders go on strike, calls for labor are hardly ever made among non-unionists.

Watersiders have won for themselves by militant tactics a basic wage rate higher than that of skilled tradesmen, and in addition receive higher rates for special cargoes and bonuses in certain circumstances. They are now among the highest paid manual workers in the country.

HORSING AROUND—In Sweden, the Stockholm life-saving company was called out to rescue a work horse that had fallen into a 13-feet-deep hole. Using a large mechanical crane, plus a good bit of manpower, they managed to raise the bewildered animal so it could go back to work again.

Father And Son Escape Drowning

HASTINGS, Aug. 17—(ENS)—Frank McKinney, employed at Scriver's cottages, rescued a father and son when they got into difficulties in the Trent River Monday evening.

Billy, son of W. A. Jones, Cleveland, Ohio, waded out into the river, not knowing that there was a sudden drop in the depth of the water. Billy was too young to swim and was floundering, when his father caught sight of him.

Mr. Jones went out after his son, and although he was a swimmer, he too, was taken by surprise when he reached the sudden drop. Both father and son were in difficulties when Mr. McKinney saw them. Mr. McKinney was painting a boat, which he left, to rescue the man and young boy.

British Arms Proposal Not Enough US Declares

LONDON, Aug. 17 (AP).—The United States has complained informally to Britain that her projected £3,400,000,000 program of rearmament against communism does not go far enough, diplomatic informants said Wednesday night.

Spokesmen for both the U. S. Embassy and the British Foreign Office denied published reports that U.S. Ambassador Lewis Douglas had expressed dissatisfaction with what was called Britain's complacent attitude toward the world crisis.

The diplomatic informants, however, said several U.S. criticisms had been voiced orally in London and Washington on the British rearmament program:

It does not allow enough for combat divisions.

It does not provide for a big enough switch of British industry to war production, and a greater change could be made without upsetting the country's economy.

It does not set aside enough money for defense spending.

Study Breakdown

These criticisms were reported to have arisen after Britain sent the United States a secret breakdown of the measures she is ready to undertake over a three-year period if the United States helps foot the bill.

Prime Minister Attlee announced Aug. 3 the program would involve raising British defense spending from nearly 8 per cent to 10 per cent of the national income annually. U.S. aid to the tune of around £500,000,000, was called for. This equals about half the increase proposed in Britain's defense bill.

A study by U.S. experts was reported to have disclosed that British productivity is expected to rise this year by about £500,000,000. In other words, the Americans are arguing, the British propose to take the slack out of their economy and turn it over to defense without making any additional contribution from their revenue or their reserves.

Infectious Diseases

COBOURG, Aug. 17 (ENS)—Only seven new cases of communicable diseases were recorded for the week ending August 12, it was reported by the counties health unit. Newspapermen Take It In Neck In Latest Movie

By BOB THOMAS.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 17 (AP).—As curator of the Society for the Improvement of the Portrayal of Newspapermen in Movies, I have investigated the latest Kirk Douglas film. And I can report that we are taking it in the neck again, boys.

Douglas helped to glamorize the prizefight game by playing a heel, first class, in "Champion." He now seems to be doing the same for the newspaper profession.

His current picture is called "Ace in the Hole," but it has nothing to do with stud poker. It concerns a hapless new Mexican who gets trapped up to his chest while prowling through a cave of Indian relics. The event becomes a headline sensation.

Exclusive

Douglas plays a reporter who comes across the story after being fired from his New York paper. He gets an exclusive on it. Then he two-times the trapped man's wife and hinders the rescue to stretch the story out. The man in the cave dies.

I accosted Douglas after he crawled out of the cave, handily constructed on a Paramount stage.

"Oh, he's not such a bad guy," said the grimy actor, referring to his character. "He only stalls the rescue a couple of days so he can get his old job back. The doctor says the guy in the cave is all right. The reporter feels terrible when the guy dies."

Not Bad?

Not such a bad guy, huh? Then why did he get fired from his New York job?

"Oh, for being drunk, playing around with the publisher's wife and involving the paper in a libel suit."

In keeping with the Hollywood tradition, Douglas' reporter will tote a flask. But strangely enough, he will not wear a press card in his hat brim. We can be thankful for that.

Beveridge Inquiry Ends

LONDON, Aug. 17—(CP)—A fact-finding commission, headed by Lord Beveridge, has completed its inquiry into the future of broadcasting in Britain. More than 200 witnesses were heard during the 10 months of evidence-taking, all selected spokesmen of nearly 2,000 that applied to appear before the commission. Lord Beveridge, architect of Britain's "cradle-to-the-grave" social service plan, expects to have his report ready for the government before the end of the year..

THREE MONTREAL passengers in top picture who escaped from the burned out cruise ship Quebec still carry the lifejackets snatched from their cabins shortly after the fire broke out. They are left to right, Mrs. S. Fauce, being warmly greeted by her brother. Giselle Marcoux, and Anna Senecal. They were among the more than 300 passengers reaching Montreal by special train a few days ago. Below, John J. O'Connell, right, is still happy even if he did lose most of his belongings. With him is John Hall, jr.; Mrs. John Hall, and Mrs. O'Connell.

Second Coming Of Christ Wrong Should Change Bible—Professor

CAMBRIDGE, Eng., Aug. 17 — (AP).—The Bible is all wrong about creation and the predicted second coming of Christ, and it ought to be changed, a British professor said Wednesday.

Speaking before the modern churchmen's conference, Dr. D. E. H. Whiteley called for a new translation of the picture language of Bible stories.

Whiteley is a Fellow of Jesus College, Oxford University.

"The development of the universe, which in the picture language of Genesis is represented as having achieved its completion at the beginning of time, still continues," Whiteley said.

"The biblical narratives of the creation recount not only the creation of matter which might have occurred in a single instant, but the organization of matter, the birth of stars and planets, the development of vegetable and animal life, and the origin of human life," he said.

Took Long Time

"This did not take place in a flash or even in a series of flashes corresponding to the days of creation, but over a period which must be reckoned in millions of years," Whiteley argued.

"Indeed, it still continues," he said. "Slowly, but now imperceptably, the universe is changing. . . . Biologically and in other respects the human race is anything but stable.

The new testament's story of the second coming of Christ is presented in a wholly indigestible form which the majority of men are unable to assimilate, he said.

He suggested that the second coming of Christ, like the creation was going on all the time and that this should be made plain to people.

"We have betrayed the gospel if we present it in such a manner that it does not constitute a live option or an effective challenge. If people reject with clenched fists a challenge which they understand but will not accept, then we at least have done our part."

"If, however, they reject with a shrug of the shoulders teaching which presents no challenge because it has for them no meaning, we have betrayed the gospel," he said.

"An element of speculation inevitably enters in just as soon as we ask ourselves how and when the second coming will be accomplished. I suggest that, like the creation, it will not be a flash event, that it will not occur in a moment of time, but that, again like the creation, it is going on all the time."

NO CHANGE

LONDON (CP).—A police constable, asked if there were any medical fees for a "drunk and incapable" case, replied: "No, sir, I did the doctoring."

Open Wound Needed To Get Polio-Doctor

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16. (AP)—A Washington doctor advanced the theory Wednesday that you have to have some kind of a wound in order to get infantile paralysis.

And, says Dr. James G. Cumming, the tendency of children toward a higher injury rate during summertime, when they have full freedom of play, may account for the fact that polio is more prevalent during the summer months.

He believes direct damage to nerve fibres is necessary to allow the polio virus to invade the nervous system and produce disease. Dr. Cumming said natural wounds like the cavities of lost baby teeth could provide such damage.

He also said tonsillectomies and other surgical operations, as well as accidental wounds, could disrupt these nerve fibres and lay the nerve system open to attack — provided sufficient virus got into the wound.

Many doctors advise against tonsillectomies and other surgery during the polio season—if they can be avoided—on the theory that such patients might be made more vulnerable to polio.

New Theory

But no one has previously advanced the theory that an open wound is a requisite of polio invasion.

It is Dr. Cumming's theory that the virus of polio is transmitted from person to person by direct or indirect contact — and then develops on the linings of the mouth, throat and intestinal canal.

But in this stage, he theorizes, the virus does not produce disease. It feeds, but remains passive. It is only when nerve fibres become sufficiently disrupted to enable invasion of the nervous system that disease can occur, Dr. Cumming suggests.

He further theorizes that there would have to be sufficient concentration of virus invading the nervous system to cause disease.

Explain Difference

In some respects, he says, polio resembles rabies, in which the disease is transmitted by the bite of a dog. The virus of rabies, said Cumming, can be fed by mouth or injected carefully with a small, smooth needle—without producing the disease. But if a large barbed-pointed needle is used, infection may occur — because of the damage done to nerve tissue by the needle.

Dr. Cumming says "the very large percentage" of fatal cases of the bulbar type of polio following tonsillectomies offers support to his theory of self-inoculation through wounds. The bulbar type is the choking form of polio, requiring iron-lung treatment.

He also said that in the 1945 polio epidemic, a group of 59 patients were investigated to determine whether they had had wounds of any kind prior to coming down with polio. Fifty-four had some type of damage to the skin, mouth or throat.

"The extension is for my pension fund!"

U.S. Tourist Crash Victim

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 17 (CP)—An American tourist was killed Wednesday and six other persons were injured, two critically, in a head-on collision between two automobiles on Highway No. 2 near Shannonville.

Robert Zeender of Washington, D.C., died an hour after the accident in hospital here

Critically injured are Zeender's son, Roland, 11, and Morris Martin, 36, of Belleville, passenger in the second auto. Other persons injured were Mrs. Zeender, broken leg; and two other sons, Robert, 18, and Roger 7, both with fractured legs; and Robert Gillen of Belleville, driver of the second car.

Police said the westbound American car skidded on the wet pavement as it rounded a curve and swerved across the highway. The Gillen vehicle plowed into the side of the swerving car. Both vehicles were complete wrecks.

CAUGHT IN LITTLE LAKE by Robert McCabe, former president of the Peterborough Fish and Game Association, this pickerel weighed eight and one-quarter pounds. It measured 28 inches in length and had a girth of 16 inches.

Report Steel Workers Have Majority

PORT COLBORNE, Aug. 17—(CP)—A provincial government investigator reported Wednesday that 130 of 131 disputed union cards at the International Nickel Company refinery here belong to the United Steel Workers (C.I.O.-C.C.L.) rather than the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

P. M. Draper, chairman of the Ontario Relations Board, said the board will accept the investigator's findings unless they are challenged by the unions before Friday.

Both unions seek to represent the 1,250 refinery employees.

The Steel Workers applied for certification as bargaining agent and their application was opposed by the Mine-Mill Union. It challenged 131 of the cards claimed by the Steel Workers.

The report of the investigator, J. M. Flannery, was made public by Mr. Draper in letters to the two unions.

William Sefton, Steel Workers Union representative, said the report showed the Steel Workers had a clear majority of the employees in the bargaining unit. There was no immediate comment from the Mine-Mill Union.

"Legacy" Clubs Helping Families of Aussie Dead

By LOUIS L. LECK

SYDNEY —(CP)— Tens of thousands of Australians died in two world wars and left widows and young children behind. Those widows and children get Commonwealth pensions large enough to keep them from want, but they have many problems which normally would be solved by the man of the family.

Legacy helps to solve these problems.

Legacy began in 1923 when Maj.-Gen. John Gellibrand formed a remembrance club in Hobart, Tasmania, so that those who had served together in the war could continue their comradship in civilian life and help those whom their fallen comrades had left behind.

The name was changed the same year to Legacy and by 1926 every capital city in Australia had a Legacy Club.

350 Members

A typical club is Sydney Legacy, which has a membership of 350 legatees, all veterans. Some are leading business and professional men, others ordinary clerks and artisans.

They make themselves responsible for the widows and children of war dead. Children who are wards of Legacy are junior legatees and as they approach manhood and womanhood they become intermediate legatees.

In 1939, Legacy's work had dwindled and it was giving active care to only 200 families—the legacy of the First World War. Now it is caring for 4,000 families—the legacy of the Second World War.

Variety of Service

In 1949, Legacy spent about £60,000 ($186,000). That was the cost of direct help—money grants for education, sickness, food, clothing, even to buy furniture or to help finance the purchase of a business or at home.

Five nights a week Legacy provides gymnasiums, arts and crafts, voice-production and other recreational facilities for junior and intermediate legatees. Medical and dental members staff free clinics.

Every legatee adopts one or more families, where there is no male friend or relatives to take the place, however inadequately, of the father who will never come back.

To such families, the legatees becomes the father. He advises the widow on all her financial problems, plans with her the children's education; does odd jobs around the house or arranges them to be done; even helps to overcome disciplinary problems.

Typical Chore

This was a typical Legacy chore:

Twin boys flatly refused to have their hair cut. In desperation the mother phoned the legatee and told him her problem. An hour later he arrived at the home where the twins welcomed him as a friend. He examined their over-long hair, pulled a pair of clippers from one pocket and two pink hair ribbons from the other and asked: "Now then, which is it to be?" The twins submitted quietly.

That is the work of Legacy as it is done in every city and town throughout Australia.

Needless to say, Legacy always needs funds. But the public is always ready to dig deep when asked to contribute.

GOES INTO RETIREMENT—The auto-quadricycle, built in 1898, has been sold by Norman A. Thompson of Windsor, Ont., to a Chicago museum. The one-cylinder engine of this early automobile is still in running order but in recent years, the vehicle has been used only in street parades. In its heyday it could hit 15 miles an hour—enough to blow a man's handlebar moustache back and to frighten every horse on the street. Mr. Thompson is in the driver's seat while a neighbor rides in the passenger carrier.

Labor Board Rejects Stewards' Application

OTTAWA, Aug. 17 (CP).—The Canada Labor Relations Board has rejected a union application for certification as bargaining agent for second stewards employed by Canadian Pacific Railway Company in its British Columbia coast steamship.

The union was the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees.

The labor department said on Wednesday the application was rejected because the second stewards affected were not considered by the board to be employees within the meaning of the industrial relations and disputes investigation act since their duties involved management functions.

Set Export Record

LONDON, Aug. 17 (Reuters)—Britain set a record for dollar exports to the United States and Canada last month, it was announced Wednesday. Exports to Canada equalled $29,300,000, slightly lower than in May, but above the monthly average.

With 15 Special Constables, the sergeant relieved a platoon of the 3rd Battalion Malay Regiment from an ambush of more than 250 Communist bandits.

Defying calls to surrender from bandits who called him by name, Sgt. Wan Ahmad forced a square in a hollow on rising ground and beat off attack after attack until the bandits withdrew.

The Malay Regiment suffered 15 killed.

New York State Has Power Plan

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17—(AP) —New York State, emphasizing its need for more electrical energy, Wedneesday offered to construct and pay for works that would triple Hydro-Electric production at Niagara Falls.

The proposal was placed before the House of Representatives Public Works committee by John E. Burton, chairman of the New York State power authority. The committee is considering legislation that would authorize a greater use of water from the Niagara river at the falls to produce power.

Under the bill, introduced by Representative Roosevelt (Dem. Lib. N.Y.) and Senator Herbert H. Lehman (Dem. Lib. N.Y.) The Federal government would construct the new power plants and turn them over to New York. The state would pay the cost of construction.

H. N. Burton told the committee that the state, in addition to financing and constructing the Niagara project, is also willing to do the same thing with respect to the St. Lawrence power development. He said:

"We do not ask the Federal government to finance this project or the St. Lawrence power project for us.

"We propose that we pay for these projects ourselves, and that we construct the projects and operate them in the fullest co-operation with the Federal government."

SPORTSMANSHIP IN "CANADA UNLIMITED"

It was 1938. Off Boston, Mass., two sleek fishing schooners charged neck-and-neck through the gust-tossed Atlantic. Canada's famous Bluenose and her arch-rival, the Gertrude L. Thebaud of Gloucester, were sailing the fifth and final heat of the International Fishermen's Trophy Race.

The older Bluenose, four-time trophy winner, took a narrow lead early in the 35½-mile course. Crowding sail, the Gloucesterman tried to close the gap. But the Bluenose stayed in front . . . to win her fifth and last trophy by 2 minutes, 30 seconds.

Close teamwork has won many firsts for Canadian sportsmen. And teamwork, with sportsmanship, helps you, too—in work and play. Together they keep your scope for opportunity in Canada . . . unlimited.

Turtle Bags Unsuspecting Bass

MARMORA, Aug. 17 (ENS) — Snapping turtles have a real fondness for young bass, according to Bill Revoy.

Near Beaver Creek Rapids on a recent afternoon, Mr. Revoy was watching a school of young bass about six or seven ins. long.

All at once a turtle showed itself and snapped one up with some speed.

"I made sure he wouldn't get any more. I gave him a good clout with an oar," said Mr. Revoy.

Now's The Time to begin "clothes-planning" for Fall. And a good time, too, to resolve to keep Fall clothes looking their best all through the Winter. My first choice for good-grooming is Meltonian Shoe Cream! I buy it in the handy Dumpijar—use it constantly for my leathers (purses and belts, as well as shoes). No wonder this English shoe cream has an international reputation for superior quality! It adds such long-lasting brilliance and lustre to leathers—actually preserves them! For Guests or Family — the perfect warm-day luncheon beverage is coffee. I serve it often to coffee-loving friends of mine—with always the same result . . . lots of enthusiasm! The secret of my coffee success? Well, first of all, my brand is that famous BLUE RIBBON COFFEE. So packed with flavour—and always fresh—no wonder it's a flavour-treat, served hot or cold! And here's the way I make my Blue Ribbon iced coffee:

Pour hot, double-strength, freshly made coffee into a tall glass filled with ice. The double-strength coffee makes up for dilution caused by the ice. To make double-strength coffee, place the regular amount of coffee normally used for brewing hot coffee into the coffee maker; use only half the amount of water. Serve iced coffee black or with sugar and cream, as desired.

Why Not Send the Kiddies Now for their medical and dental check-ups? Then, if treatment is needed, it can probably be all cleared up before school opens. Remember, you can follow this wise plan even if you're short of ready cash. First, if treatment's necessary, get an estimate of the cost. Then talk it over with your husband—and go with him to see your BANK OF MONTREAL Manager. If you're in a position to repay out of regular income, you'll find the money you need at the B of M. A Personal Loan costs only 27 cents a month in interest per $100 borrowed, when repaid in 12 monthly instalments. Yes, it costs much less in the long run to have your medical and dental work done in good time.

So Delicious On A Warm August Day . . . this favourite fruit salad of mine! Try it! . . . I know you'll enjoy it! Use the freshest fruit—the crispest lettuce . . . and be sure to make your dressing with HEINZ WHITE VINEGAR. (All of the Heinz Vinegars—White—Malt and Cider are salad-dressing "musts", I've found! They're aged and mellowed in wood 'til they're flavour-perfect!) This Fluffy Fruit Salad Dressing made with Heinz White Vinegar will bring out the very best in your fruit salads! . . . Combine, blending thoroughly after each addition, ¼ cup sugar, ½ tspn. salt, 1½ tbspns. flour, 1 egg yolk, ½ cup pineapple juice, ¼ cup orange juice and 2 tbspns. Heinz White Vinegar. Cook, stirring constantly, until very thick. Cool. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white.

Feet Get Tired from a long shopping tour? Of course they do—particularly on a warm summer day—and I'm sure you give them the rest they deserve the minute you get home! But what about your eyes? They work even harder, with never a let-up—and yet they rarely "complain"! Nevertheless—they do get tired . . . that's why I always keep a bottle of MURINE handy! Just 2 drops of Murine in each eye, and instantly they feel refreshed and rested. Murine's 7 ingredients blend perfectly with the natural eye fluids, soothing delicate eye tissues gently and tenderly.

There's No Substitute for that zesty, tangy real lemon flavour—just as there's no substitute for the deliciousness of SUNKIST CALIFORNIA LEMONS! They're the finest, juiciest lemons to be had! So next time you make a lemon pie—lemon cake-icing or cookies—next time you want luscious lemon flavour in a salad or a fruit or vegetable juice—be sure you have a good supply of Sunkist California Lemons on hand! Yes, there's a treasure of "California gold" in store for you at your grocer's . . . all the plump, juicy California lemons you want for your cooking!

May Mean Doctor's Bills For You . . . During these late summer months, every fly in your home threatens your family with disease. These filthy insects leave germs on everything they touch . . . helping to transmit over 20 different diseases including polio, typhoid and dysentery. That's why it's only common sense to kill as many of these dangerous pests as possible. And the best way I know of doing so is to spray pleasant-smelling FLY-TOX throughout the house! In its new, improved form Fly-Tox lasts longer and kills quicker than ever before. So don't accept substitutes. Ask for Fly-Tox by name . . . in any one of three convenient sizes!

Ladies At Coffee

Afternoon tea is the thing with most women, but when a crowded schedule makes it impossible, what is a person to do?

One north end woman, who wanted to have friends in to meet her visiting sister recently, just didn't have a free afternoon.

She solved the problem by having her friends in for 10 o'clock morning coffee. The idea was a success and now raises the question whether women have invaded yet another established practice of their husbands who can usually be found sipping coffee in restaurants throughout the city in the middle of the morning.

UE Local 524 Wires PM To Avert Strike

A telegram urging the Prime Minister to help avert the impending railway workers' strike has been sent by UE Local 524, following a joint meeting of stewards and the executive Wednesday night.

The telegram declares that the workers' demands are "just and reasonable" and that the companies "can well afford to pay."

It says also that the companies are carrying on a plan "for greater profits with fewer employees" by using Diesel locomotives "and other means of eliminating workers from their payrolls."

The telegram further states that "railway workers have long been penalized by having to work a longer work week" than the average Canadian industrial worker. It asks Mr St. Laurent to "act immediately in bringing about a fair settlement for the railway workers in their just demands.

"Just And Reasonable"

"The railway workers' demands are just and reasonable. The companies can well afford to pay, and the 40-hour work week is the only solution towards helping to avoid layoffs."

The telegram also declares that the refusal of the railway companies to meet workers' demands "comes at a time when announcements are being made of all-time highs in staggering company profits, and when the cost of living is still going up beyond anything yet experienced in Canada."

The meeting decided to ask the UE district office to demand that the federal government levy a 100 per cent excess profits tax on corporation profits.

It also requested the district office to protest the appointment of the Hon. Milton Gregg as labor minister on the grounds that he is unfamiliar with labor's problems, and that he represents a non-industrial community.

Electrocuted Owl Cuts Off Power

MILLBROOK, Aug. 17—(ENS)—An owl which flew into the electric wires over Mrs. John Thompson's house on King St. Tuesday, not only electrocuted itself, but also caused a power failure.

Electric power went off in Millbrook at 6.20 p.m. and it took George Harrington and his hydro crew some time to discover cause of the failure.

The owl was discovered lying in the roadway and wires above were twisted and burnt out. It had a wing span of four feet and is now on display at the park in front of the town hall, hanging from a tree.

The entire village was without electric power and it was an hour and a half before it was restored in all parts of Millbrook.

Some War Clauses In Insurance Policies

WINNIPEG, Aug. 17 ((CP). — Gordon C. Cumming, president of the Canadian Life Insurance Officers' Association, said Wednesday night that some Canadian life insurance companies have adopted war clauses in policies.

He said these restrictions apply only to new policies and that the $14,000,000,000 worth of life insurance now in force in Canada is not affected.

The war clauses apply to members of the armed forces and to others which may be exposed to combat risk.

Man Arrested 10 Motors Seized By Police

COBOURG, Aug. 17 (ENS). — Police arrested Albert Stinson, Hamilton, at Harwood on Tuesday as a result of an investigation into theft of outboard motors.

Wednesday Provincial Constable Don Nicol of Cobourg and Detective J. Caton of Hamilton visited Stinson's home in Hamilton and seized 10 outboard motors.

Boat owners at Rice Lake had been advised to be on the lookout for a man driving a red Studebaker truck, as police believed that he was the one responsible for the theft of several outboard motors.

As a result of a tip-off from Harwood, Provincial Constables Don Nicol and Lyle Erskine of Cobourg arrested Stinson. He was brought to Cobourg and remanded on charges of theft of an outboard motor from Bowmanville and one from Bewdley, until Friday.

Police said that outboard motors were missing from Bewdley, Bowmanville and Barrie. The man responsible for the theft rented a boat with an outboard, drove it to where his truck was parked, took off the outboard motor, and abandoned the boat.

Model Playground At Exhibition

A model playground with nearly all the activities of the ordinary Peterborough Recreation Commission playgrounds will be located at the Exhibition next week just west of the Drill Hall. Last year the commission had a miniature playground at the Exhibition for the first time.

The playground will be similar to last year's. The large area, fenced to keep people from intruding during the play programs, will be in charge of the playground supervisors daily from Wednesday until Saturday from 9:30 until 8 p.m. They will each take a shift at the playground.

Swings, teeters, slides, and a sand box will be placed in the playground for the children. Games played on the regular playground program will be conducted by the supervisors as well as the handcraft activities. It is again emphasized that this model playground is for demonstration, and not a cage where parents may dump their children while they tour the midway.

Twice Wounded Joins Up Again

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 17 (ENS).—A twice-wounded veteran of World War II left Lakefield today for Camp Borden. The veteran, Harry Baldwin, 43, is believed to be the first from the district to enlist.

During the Second World War, Harry put five and a half years with the Medical Corps, serving in Canada, England, North Africa, Sicily and Italy with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. In Camp Borden he will train with the 25th Field Ambulance Unit.

In Italy, Mr. Baldwin was wounded twice—at San Vito in 1943 and at the Tollo Road, near Ortona, in 1944.

He was born in London, England, and came to Lakefield in 1934. For most of the time he has been employed by the American Nepheline Corporation.

TALL PANSIES

Mrs. Albert L. Cross, 14 Aylmer St., believes she has grown some record pansies. The flowers have normal blooms but have reached a height of 29 inches. Most of the pansies average a height of 16 inches.

271 RESPOND

LONDON —(CP)—An appeal for 10,000 men to join a special London police force produced 271 recruits.

WITHIN A BLOCK of the city's main intersection, nine-year-old Anthony "Skipper" Mahood, 322 Water St., and his six-year-old sister, Susie, cool off in a plastic wading pool. Their mother, Mrs. Dorothy Mahood, says it keeps them cool and close to home as well. This was one of the ways people used to beat Wednesday afternoon's heat, which touched 90 degrees in some sunny places.—(Parks Studio Photo)

Herbie Jackson Placed Third Soap Box Derby

Herbie Jackson, of Peterborough, 1950 champion of the 1st class Y's Men's Club's soap box derby, placed third in Oshawa Wednesday in an event for the championship of Ontario.

An Oshawa boy, John Chesczewsky, 15, was acclaimed racing car derby champ of Ontario after beating boys from Toronto, Hamilton and Peterborough on a 700-foot runway.

Second in line was Alex Zeddic, 15, also of Oshawa, who was one-fifth of a second behind the winner in crossing the tape. Clifford Crosby of Hamilton, driving the championship car of his best friend, Bobby Lemmon, who died two weeks ago of leukemia, was eliminated early in the final round of the motorless auto classic.

A Close Race

Although Herb Jackson, Peterborough champ, and Lester Robertson of Toronto gave their opponents a close race, they, too, were out of the running.

The race started at 9 a.m. and continued until dark with thousands of persons pushing against snow-fence barriers along the route.

In the morning 11 Oshawa parks sent individual parades past the judges' stand to seek honors and points for style and dress.

Cars entered in the 700-foot race were mostly made in the Community Recreation Association wood shop, while others were made at home. All of the streamlined racers were powered only by the incline of the race course, after a start from a wooden ramp.

During morning heats, elimination time trials were held, and in the evening events cars competed against other preliminary heat winners for the championship, and cash awards of $25 for first place, $15 for second and $10 for third.

Junior Regatta Champions Declared For Chemong Lake

Alice McKay and Walter Somerville were regatta champions at Chemong Lake on Wednesday, when they won the highest number of points and were awarded the girls' and boys' trophies. After four hours of swimming, canoe and outboard racing, there was still an unceasing chatter of excited voices. The young fry had been having their day—the adults had arranged 33 different racing events for them and gave away some splendid prizes afterwards.

The junior regatta at Chemong staged in front of J. K. Hughes' cottage was held beneath a brilliant, blue sky. Earlier in the day the clouds had threatened rain, but the sun won the day and the water was suitably calm for the occasion.

Contestants varied in ages from three and four-year-olds to 20-year-olds. The tiny tots had races on the shore and all were awarded prizes.

Lighter Motor First

Among the events on the water, one of the most unpredictable was the open handicap outboard motor race. The boats set out with their motors wide open and when the flag was lowered, they turned round to return to the starting point. Walter Somerville, with a one and a half horse power motor fooled those with high-powered motors, by coming in first. With the motor wide open he went out at a snail's pace and had only a short distance to come back when the flag went down. The highest powered boat appeared to be about 16 h.p. and went racing across the lake. When it turned round it sped back towards the starting point, but was among the last to get back.

Results of the races were as follows:

Boys' single canoe, 16 and under—1 Walter Somerville, 2 Doug Nesbitt. Girls—1 Mary Elizabeth Collins, 2 Mary Wasson. Boys 10 and under—1 Jimmy Rutherford, 2 David Clarke. Girls 13 and under—1 Mary Wasson, 2 Barbara Tiffin. Boys 13 and under—1 Bill Lawrence, 2 Jerry Vincent.

Action Before Cost Questions

Full Hospital Services Opened For Lad

Probably if doctors were more vocal about their accomplishments the public would have clearer understanding of the hospital services in which the people of Peterborough have a financial interest. For instance, there was the case of Bobby Clark, the Warsaw boy who fell out of an apple tree, suffering a broken arm from which gangrene developed.

When he was received at Civic Hospital his serious condition was immediately recognized by the attending doctor, whose name may not be used, and the resources of the hospital were at hand to stave off death.

By that time it was far more than a broken arm that had to be set. It was an emergency of preventing gangrene from spreading into his body and system. The doctor called an associate for consultation in the prospect of having to amputate the boy's left arm at the shoulder. The first diagnosis, it may have been more or less obvious to the attending doctor, was quickly confirmed.

Extra Vials Rushed

That was followed by the use of anti-gangrene serum. To make certain of ample supply, a telephone call was sent to St. Joseph's Hospital, and some of their vials were obtained at once. Meanwhile, a telephone call was sent through to Connaught Laboratories, and at 6 p.m. of the next day a further and ample quantity of the serum was at hand.

The first thing Civic Hospital did for a small boy who was a stranger to the staff was to provide for him every aid Civic Hospital could furnish. There were days of anxiety for the lad, but the threat of the spread of gangrene was checked, and finally he was out of danger.

Nobody enquired at the outset about the means of his family or any of the circumstances which eventually and necessarily have to be considered. Here was a bright boy, overtaken by misfortune, and the big hospital took him into its care. Well, you saw him sitting up and smiling in bed in the picture the Examiner published Wednesday.

Bobby Clark was given a private room because it was necessary in his grave condition.

Serum Cost $606.98

The Examiner asked John Hornal, superintendent of Civic Hospital, whether he knew the cost of the serum that was efficacious in saving the boy's life.

It may surprise the public who have only a casual conception of general hospital work that the anti-gangrene serum used in his case cost $606.98.

Of course, the hospital staff gets around to such matters as identity of the patient, background circumstances, and all that. Costs and room accommodation have to be considered.

But, the work of the hospital is the saving of life. And the experience of Bobby Clark indicates somewhat how it is done, and also the heart-warming, gratifying results that cannot be recolved into dollars and cents.

The Women's Institute of Warsaw have opened a Bobby Clark Fund, and have already received contributions which will be acknowledged. The Examiner has volunteered to co-operate in the city, and will accept for the Fund local gifts for a small boy who will have to face life with only his right arm.

The appeal is recommended by Mr. John Rogers, of Rogers St., Ashburnham, and by the Women's Institute of Warsaw.

NO FIRE, JUST LIGHTS!

People in the downtown area Wednesday night wondered what building was on fire in Ashburnham until they realized the glare was from the baseball lights. For the first time all the lights were turned on. Alex. Sinclair, recreation director, said he could read a pamphlet better under the bright lights than he could in the daylight.

WAX STARTS FIRE

A pot of wax boiling over on the stove of Mrs. V. M. Keating 463 Brioux Avenue, started a small fire which the Fire Department quickly extinguished Wednesday. Almost no damage was done. Mrs. Keating had been heating wax for sealing preserves she was canning when the wax bubbled over.

New Manager For Co-Op

Norman J. MacMurchy has been appointed general manager of Peterborough District Co-Op Services, succeeding Robert M Peirson.

Mr. MacMurchy has been in charge of the retail department of Co-Op for several years.

The change in management was confirmed today by Vernon Campbell, chairman of the board of directors. He said that Mr. Peirson had requested the board three weeks ago to accept his resignation.

It is understood that Mr. Peirson intends to give all his time to Canadian Timber Structures which he was largely instrumental in establishing here a year ago. The company's factory is on High St., north of the C.P.R.

The illness some months ago of W. A. Davidson who was directing Timber Structures created a problem of management in that plant which brought about the resignation of Mr. Peirson from Co-Op Services.

Since 1940

Mr. Peirson became manager of Co-Op in 1940 when the business was greatly expanded and was transferred from the corner of Simcoe and Queen Streets. The vacant mill of Maple Leaf Milling Company was acquired at what was said to be a bargain, the premises were extensively renovated, and the physical plant developed into use of the entire building.

Mr. Peirson was absent from Co-Op for several years during an engagement in Toronto, but returned in 1946.

Truck Hits Train Driver Escapes

Nearly $600 damage was done to a panel truck when it crashed into a northbound CNR freight train at the Parkhill Rd. crossing near Jackson Park.

Driver of the truck Herbert G. Dewer, 706 Charlotte St., was uninjured.

He was driving east on Parkhill Rd. and applied his brakes when he saw the train. Police said skid marks from the truck were about 30 feet long.

The front of the truck was demolished. The train was moving slowly at the time of the accident.

Lawyers Plan To Continue Income Tax Work

Lawyers in Peterborough will continue to make out income tax returns for their clients, Ralph O. Standish, president of the Peterborough Law Association, said after a meeting of the association Wednesday.

City lawyers met to examine the Public Accounting Act which went into effect August 1. They decided the Act does not forbid lawyers from preparing income tax forms and statements of adjustments.

Mr. Standish said the lawyers were not setting themselves up as accountants.

"Lawyers and accountants in Peterborough have always worked in a very friendly relationship," Mr. Standish said.

The Public Accounting Act defines public accountancy as "the investigation or audit of accounting records or the preparation of, or reporting on balance sheets, profit and loss accounts or other financial statements, but does not include bookkeeping or cost accounting, or the installation of bookkeeping business and cost systems."

A local accountant said earlier that the Act was designed primarily for the protection of the public by insisting that men advertising themselves as public accountants or doing public accountants' work be licensed.

This would include, according to his interpretation, preparation of income tax returns, and financial statements on which individuals and companies apply for credit from banks. It would not include, however, statements of adjustments by which costs are apportioned when property changes hands.

Tourist Wane Booth Reports

English china is extremely popular with American tourists this year. A number of the inquiries made at the Junior Chamber of Commerce booth on Charlotte St., are for directions to china shops in the city.

Business has slowed down considerably during the past week at the booth. The number of people serviced since August 10 was only 530 as compared with 861, the week before. The American traffic shows the greatest decrease. Only 40 per cent of the inquiries in the last seven days have been made by Americans. Up until this time the number of Americans stopping at the booth has far outdistanced the Canadians.

Last week's slump for the tourist operators in the district has not picked up. There are still several vacancies for housekeeping cottages registered.

Buried In Hopper Man Saved By Firemen

TORONTO, Aug. 17 — (CP) — Buried to his waist in coal and being drawn toward a boiler by a mechanical feeder, William Maneely, 69, was rescued by firemen Wednesday night. He suffered only bruises and shock.

"I thought I was a goner," said Maneely, who fell into a hopper in the boiler house at the Consumer's Gas Co.

Calder Wires Frost Asking Council Session

LONDON, Ont., Aug 17 (CP).—Following Wednesday night's meeting of the provincial civil servants here Campbell Calder, Liberal member of the Legislature for London, wired Premier Frost requesting that the joint advisory council be called into immediate session.

During the meeting Mr. Calder's suggestion that the Civil Service Association seek a solution to its wage and working condition difficulties through the council was met with some boos.

More than 450 civil servants representing associations in Hamilton, Brantford, Guelph Woodstock, Stratford, St. Thomas and Chatham attended the meeting.

Don G. McMaster, executive secretary of the association, said that the issue before civil servants is ". . . the complete and miserable failure of the joint advisory council to function."

"If any member here can arrange a session with the council tomorrow I will be there," declared Percy Gunning, president of the London association and one of the Ontario association's three members to the council.

Gives Details

Mr. McMaster gave details of efforts of the association to get a hearing from the government. They also heard two representatives of the London and District Trades and Labor Council describe benefits which they said would be received by civil servants if they affiliate with the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress.

Civil servants will vote in September on the question of affiliation with the TLC.

Other members of the legislature who attended were Joseph Easton, Wentworth-Hamilton and G. T. Gordon, Brantford.

May Get Leadership

EDMONTON, Aug. 17 (CP) — The Edmonton Bulletin said in a newspage story Wednesday that Premier Manning of Alberta may be asked to take official leadership of the National Social Credit Party at the dominion convention Oct. 18-20 at Regina. Solon Low would continue to lead the Social Credit Party in the House of Commons.

Niagara Falls To Receive Special Face-Lifting Job

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Aug. 17—(CP)—Niagara's famous falls, among the world's top tourist attractions, are in for a face-lifting.

The job will be a combined operation by the U.S. and Canadian governments. It will serve a double purpose — to provide more electrical power and to preserve the falls' scenic beauty.

The retouching job was agreed to under a treaty signed Feb. 27 on the use of the Niagara river. It has been approved by both the U.S. senate and the Canadian parliament, and will cost more than $1,000,000.

The plan calls for construction of weirs and shearing-off shelves near the brink of both the American falls and the larger Canadian horseshoe falls. They are designed to stop erosion, maintain the flow and provide more water for hydro power.

These steps were first recommended in 1926 by a special international board studying the falls. One recommendation, construction of the Niagara river weir, was carried out in 1947 and has doubled the flow over the American falls and through the rapids above.

The board reported that due to erosion, the flow over the horseshoe falls was deficient, and that the flow over part of the U.S. falls would eventually cease. The flow in the rapid above was not sufficient to maintain the spectacle.

Now the weirs will deflect water over the low part of the U.S. falls and will generally increase the flow over the Canadian side.

Also increased will be the flow for power purposes. Today this is kept at 82,000 cubic feet a second, of which 49,500 goes to Canada and 32,500 to the U.S.

Ask 10% Increase

LONDON, Aug. 17 (Reuters)—British rail workers Wednesday demanded another 10-per-cent all-round wage increase. The demand was made immediately after the national railroad executive announce a 3s. 6d. weekly raise for the 150,000 lowest-paid rail workers.

8 Nazi Leaders To Be Freed, Good Behaviour

FRANKFURT, Germany, Aug. 17 (AP).—Steel baron Friedrich Flick and seven other prominent Nazis convicted of war crimes will be freed in nine days for good conduct, it was announced Wednesday.

Otto Dietrich, Hitler's former press chief, and Walther Darre, former food and agriculture minister, are among those who will receive their freedom Aug. 25.

The eight are being released under new regulations which increased time off for good conduct from five days a month to 10. All but one, Heinrich Lehmann, was sentenced to seven years. He was serving six years. The regulations do not affect those serving life sentences.

Flick, 69, former head of Germany's biggest privately owned coal and steel company was convicted by an American military tribunal at Nurnberg, Dec. 22, 1947, of exploiting Russian slave labor in his mines and mills.

He also was convicted of looting German-occupied countries. He was sentenced to serve seven years, but the 2½ years he already had been in prison were deducted from the sentence.

Dietrich and Darre were among 14 high Nazi administrators convicted by an American war crimes court at Nurnberg, April 12, 1949 of furthering a program that killed 6,000,000 Jews.

Dietrich was convicted of taking part in a persistent campaign to arouse hatred against the Jews. Darre was convicted of participating in what the prosecution called a cruel scheme to resettle Poland with Germans.

In addition, the U.S. Army plans to free 12 men sentenced by military commissions at Dachau. These are little known figures who were convicted of helping to operate concentration camps and assaulting prisoners of war. Officials said 620 war criminals are still confined in the big Bavarian prison at Landsberg, where Adolf Hitler wrote Mein Kampf.

Gib Sproule Hurt At Niagara Falls

LINDSAY, Aug. 17—Injured in a weekend motor accident near Niagara Falls, N.Y., "Gib" Sproule, former Lindsay hockey player is off the critical list, according to Mrs. Lloyd Davis, Lindsay, and is improving.

Mrs. Davis, whose son Murray had driven to the border city with Sproule and his brother, Mason Sproule, expects to learn complete details of the mishap when her son returns to Lindsay.

It is reported the accident occurred at the approach to the American city, as the trio were homeward bound. A pennant or some type of decoration is said to have obscured the vision of Davis, who was driving, and as a consequence, he drove through a stoplight, crashing into the bumper of another car, and rolling his own vehicle over. "Gib" Sproule suffered severe concussion and was taken to Memorial Hospital at Niagara Falls. The other two suffered shock only.

Ontario's Tourist Greeters Doing Remarkable Job

By JACK SCOTT.

RUSHING RIVER, Ont. — We left the plains of Manitoba behind today and crossed over into the spruce and birch and the boulders of Ontario.

For the next thousand-odd miles we'll be going through very much the same kind of country we traversed today and except for the twin lakehead cities of Fort William and Port Arthur, our next water hole, the route seems a lonely one. Or so it has appeared at any rate from the windows of airplanes and trains in the past.

But when you cross the country by motor car you discover that this land is not nearly as empty as it appears on the map or from high speed transportation.

Rushing River, our current address, is a provincial park about 20 miles east of Kenora. We are here and enjoying it because, on the evidence at hand, Ontario knows how to look after its visitors.

West of Kenora we came upon a roadside tourist bureau staffed by three attractive and alert young ladies who do almost everything but psycho-analyze you.

When I asked about places to park the beast (as we've come to know the trailer) the girl I'd drawn asked an astonishing question: What sort of place did we like? I replied that we craved something in the woods and away from juke boxes and the gal went into a charming recital of the beauties of Rushing River. Knew everything about it from the location of the water pump to the kind of fish we might get in the stream, and seemed genuinely anxious that we should have a good time.

It was a nice way to meet up with Ontario.

We're Unloved

When we had made our camp, had dinner and put the kids to bed, Brown Eyes and I sat down to a feast of home town papers that reached us this morning at Winnipeg General Delivery.

It was certainly the end of a perfect day to find that so many of you are stimulated by the columns and writing to the editor.

There was Mrs. Olive M. McLean, for instance, who wrote the editor to suggest we "turn right back now."

And a Mr. T. W. Sick who suggests "calling such a man home and sending a booster."

And a Mr. H. McConnell who urged the editor to "wire Jack Scott and order him to halt and remain quiet until I arrive with my wife and two children to take over."

And several other dear hearts and gentle people with similar blunt sentiments.

Well, we are going to make them all mad by going right on, snarling at all the bad roads and having a minimum of four emergencies a day (the refrigerator broke loose from the wall today and we lost the keys to the trailer and had to have a Kenora locksmith get us in). And we are going to keep right on writing about our trip and not the one that these particular customers think we ought to be making.

As Mr. Sick points out, we are obviously woefully inexperienced at this sort of life.

"Why," writes Mr. Sick, "he doesn't even know enough to lay over a day or so for prairie roads to dry." On the other hand, Saskatchewan had nearly 10 days of rain while we were doing the Australian crawl across its face and a guy can't wait for ever, can he, Mr. Sick?

Mr. McConnell, himself, in volunteering to tke over says he could level a trailer, take a bath and kill a mosquito without mentioning a word of it to his readers and I don't doubt him a bit.

But with us, life is a gigantic struggle against mechanical things and little bugs and I am afraid we'll have to keep right on the way we are. I just wish we'd had this McConnell fellow with us the day the dust got in.

It's All Here

There's just been a couple of things in the letters that got under the rhinoceros hide we columnists learn to develop and the reason for this diversion today.

One was Mr. Sick's statement that, "According to Scott, there is nothing to build a Trans-Canada Highway for."

Lord love you, Mr. Sick, I never said any such thing. There's just about everything in the world to make such a road the world's finest scenic route and, indeed, in a column only a few days ago I noted that when the cross-Canada highway is completed it will mean a new sense of pride in our country for anyone who makes the drive.

What I have been recording is the condition of the road now, in the summer of 1950, and that is forcing nine out of every ten Canadians to loop through the States when they are travelling from one distant point in Canada to the other.

I was unhappy, too, with the criticism of Mrs. McLean who objected to my interviewing the cowboy singer, Wilf Carter, in Winnipeg because "believe me, yodelling cowboys are not typical of Winnipeg." And Mrs. McLean felt I should have devoted my space to the saga of the Lord Selkirk settlers.

Sakes alike, Mrs. McLean, better men than I have told the Winnipeg story and, anyway, I wouldn't think of doing a job like that in the amount of time we have for a stop-over. As for slighting Winnipeg, why, shucks, I wouldn't do that. It's my home town.

Well, I'm glad that's off my chest. We sure aim to please, but we can't be what we ain't. And tomorrow we're just going to go fishing. If that's all right with you.
